A. Step aerobics has been around for many years and has a strong following of faithful participants. However, in recent years other forms of group exercise classes have become more popular and caused many fitness facilities to limit the number of step aerobic classes offered on their group exercise schedules.

Step aerobics is an intense group workout program that incorporates movements on steps that can change in height by adding or removing risers. Class participants complete combinations of up and down movements both on and off the step, in addition to using the floor and step in combination to complete exercises such as lunges.

Classes such as boot camp, power pump (group resistance training), kickboxing and dance have gained popularity and have replaced many step aerobic classes. Boot camp and power pump classes actually incorporate certain movements used in step aerobics as part of their workouts, usually without the sometimes-complicated step combinations.

As we know, the fitness industry has seen many new trends that seem to saturate fitness facilities and then over a period of time fade away. Step aerobics is actually one of those classes that has come and gone and is back again. More and more step aerobic-type classes are finding their way back on group exercise schedules, although they might go by a different name.

Speak with the group exercise director at your fitness facility and tell him or her how much you enjoy step aerobics classes and how you would like to see more of them on the schedule. Encourage other members of your gym to do the same, as most schedules are put together by attendance and class demand.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Spotlight On Health

The Right Moves To Help Achieve Weight Loss

(NAPS) – If you want to lose weight-get moving. Don't just move on a plan to cut fat and calories. Find ways to incorporate extra physical activity into your life.

You may be pleasantly surprised at the benefits physical activity has to offer. For example, regular exercise can:

- Help burn calories. When the body is in calorie deficit, it will burn stored fat for energy;
- Help reduce stress, which could otherwise lead to snacking and overeating;
- Improve your sense of well-being and self-esteem;
- Help you look and feel better.

Always consult your doctor before starting an exercise program, but as a general guide, try to get some physical activity three times a week for at least 20 minutes each time.

It's important to start small. Many people overdo it on the first few days and stop because they get tired, sore or discouraged.

Do what moves you. If you love to dance, find a class or group that meets regularly.

If swimming, cycling or skating brings out the kid in you, discover new places where you can get started. One of the easiest and most affordable physical activities is walking.

Exercise adds up quickly. The great thing about exercise is you don't have to do it all at once. Add it to your activities throughout the day by sneaking in a little extra effort to the things you already do:

- Take the stairs instead of the elevator;
- When shopping, park in the far corner of the lot;
- Instead of e-mailing a co-worker, visit his or her office;
- When you walk the dog, go around the block an extra time;
- At lunchtime, walk to a nearby park and eat outdoors.

Measure your progress. Once you begin, record in a journal how long you spent on physical activity or how far you went.

Team up. Get a friend to help each other stick with a plan.

To keep you moving toward healthy, gradual weight loss, myalliplan has been created to support a reduced-calorie, low-fat diet with all capsules. You'll have access to personalized lessons and tools created by weight loss experts that can help you track your daily activities, plan meals, create menus and manage calories and fat grams.

Cleaning Surfaces May Not Be Enough To Avoid Getting The Flu

(NAPS) – One thing most people may not know is that the main way influenza viruses are spread is from person to person in respiratory droplets of coughs or sneezes. A sneeze produces extremely high numbers of both very small particles that remain airborne for a long time until they are removed through a home's ventilation or filtration system, and large particles that fall quickly out of the air and contaminate surfaces.

So how do you treat the air? Now, first-of-its-kind research conducted by the Harvard School of Public Health, in collaboration with scientists at Environmental Health & Engineering, Inc. (EH&E), shows that Trane CleanEffects, a whole-house air-filtration system, removes more than 99 percent of the common flu, or influenza A virus, from the filtered air.

"By removing the vast majority of the common flu virus from a home's recirculated air, the average airborne concentration of the virus in the home is reduced, thereby lowering airborne exposure to the virus for household occupants," says Dr. David MacIntosh, instructor at the Harvard Extension School and principal scientist at EH&E. "In a home with central forced air and a conventional one-inch filter, the average virus particle would recirculate through the home about seven times before depositing on a surface or being transported outdoors. That's more than enough time to breathe in the virus, and cleaning the air in your home is an important step to improve the health of your home environment."

Cleaner, healthier indoor air is important to everyone, but it's especially critical if you or someone you love suffers from allergies or asthma.

Following these good health habits can help you prevent the flu:

- Avoid close contact with people who are sick. Keep your distance from others when you're sick to protect them from becoming ill, too.
- Cover your mouth and nose. Use a tissue when coughing or sneezing-it may prevent those around you from getting sick.
- Install a whole-house air cleaner. Use Trane CleanEffects to remove airborne particles and the common flu, or influenza A virus, from the filtered air in your home.

- Practice other good health habits. Get plenty of sleep, be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids and eat nutritious food.

- Stay home when you are sick. If possible, stay home from work, school or running errands when you are sick. You will help prevent others from catching your illness.

- Clean your hands. Washing your hands often will help protect you from germs.

- Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs are often spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches his or her eyes, nose or mouth.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

THE VALUE OF VENEERS

Many of the beautiful smiles that you see on the faces of award-winning actors and actresses are the result of porcelain veneers. Veneers are thin, custom-fabricated shells made of tooth-colored materials that are used to resurface stained, pitted, and worn enamel. They also provide very satisfactory results when used to close overly large spaces and correct minor irregularities and crookedness of the front teeth. Materials used for veneers include acrylic plastic and composite, but porcelain is often preferred for its durability, stain resistance, and natural look. The big advantage that veneers provide over crowning is that they require very little alteration of the natural tooth, although removal of sufficient enamel to accept the thickness of the veneer is necessary.

May is "National Smile Month." Virtually all Americans say an attractive smile is an important social asset. People seek cosmetic dentistry for a variety of reasons. Some people simply want to look younger, and cosmetic dentistry is like a dental facelift that can quickly "reverse" the natural aging process of the teeth. In fact, a smile makeover is probably the fastest, safest, and most noticeable ways to improve your appearance. If you are looking for a dentist who understands your needs, we hope you will consider us. We want to make the most of your smile. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because porcelain veneers are translucent, they closely mimic the light-reflecting characteristics of natural teeth.

Presidents Defeat Archies, SL But Bow To Milton

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents enjoyed a very good week. The team co-hosted the annual Quincy/North Quincy Baseball Tournament last Tuesday and Thursday, and went 1-1, defeating Archbishop Williams HS (12-6 win) in the first round and losing to Milton HS (5-0 loss) in the championship game.

The Presidents closed their school vacation schedule with a 4-2 win over Silver Lake Regional HS on Saturday.

"It was a very good week for the team," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "We started the week by hosting the Quincy/North Quincy tournament. We beat Archies in the first round and lost to a good Milton team in the championship game, but the team played real well in both games."

"And then we closed out the week with a solid win over Silver Lake on the road. The entire roster stepped up and produced this week. We are moving forward and getting better each game."

The Presidents (5-3 overall), behind the pitching of Kevin Keith (six innings plus, seven Ks), scored three runs in the top of the first inning against the Lakers. Ted Walsh led off with a single; Joe Reggianinni walked; Mike LeBel walked to load the bases; and Ricky Salvucci singled to drive in Walsh and Reggianinni.

Quincy had chances to extend the lead, but could not get that last clutch hit. After one inning of play, the score was 2-0 Presidents.

In the top of the third inning, Reggianinni led-off with a walk and LeBel (3-for-3, BB) singled. With runners on second and third, Salvucci scored Reggianinni on a fielder's choice groundout for a 3-0 advantage.

The Lakers would score two times in the bottom of the frame, but in the fifth inning, LeBel singled, stole second and scored the fourth and final run on a double down the left field line by Keith.

Senior reliever Eric Englehart came on in relief in the seventh inning. Englehart worked out of a bases loaded jam to secure the save and the fifth win of the season for Quincy.

"Keith was outstanding for us on the mound. He really battled for us and all-around his start was solid," said Draicchio. "We had our chances to extend the lead a few times and just couldn't break it open. But we played well enough to win."

Outfielder Colin McCarthy was the defensive star of the game for the

BASEBALL

Presidents. McCarthy made several spectacular catches in centerfield that help to prevent further damage by the Lakers.

Earlier in the week, Quincy was looking to repeat as champions of the Quincy/North Quincy tournament. The four teams playing were Quincy, North Quincy, Milton and Archbishop Williams High Schools.

In the first round, the Presidents smoked AW by a 12-6 score.

The team scored six runs in the second inning. Andrew Papile started with a walk; Keith singled and Dave Griffin singled to load the bases. With no outs, Walsh plated two with a RBI single to put Quincy up 2-0.

LeBel followed Walsh's hit with a two-run homer that gave Quincy a 4-0 lead. Salvucci (3-for-3, 3 RBI) singled and sophomore catcher Leroy Wallace scored him with a RBI base hit.

The Presidents scored again in the third inning. Kyle Craig, Griffin (RBI) and Walsh (RBI) all doubled and Reggianinni scored Walsh with a single to center.

Ricky Salvucci earned the win on the mound and Englehart worked two scoreless innings out of the bullpen.

Griffin went 3-for-3 and John Parry had pinch hit single.

"It was a great way to start the tournament," added Draicchio. "We had a lot of different kids step up and play a productive game. Our offense was clicking and it showed."

In the championship game against Milton, the Presidents ran into a buzz saw named Katsiroubas. James Katsiroubas, Milton's ace pitcher, threw a three-hit shutout with 15 strikeouts as the Wildcats defeated Quincy 5-0.

"We were looking to repeat as champions, but Milton's pitcher was tough to beat," said Draicchio.

Mike LeBel, Quincy's ace pitcher, was forced to exit the mound in the first inning with a sore arm (he should be fine according to Draicchio), and Englehart came on in relief and pitched admirably for the final six innings.

"Having LeBel come out in the first inning really hurt us, but I think (Englehart) did a great job."

The only hits Quincy got were a singles by Reggianinni and Keith and a double from LeBel.

At 5-3 overall, the Presidents need to win five out of their final twelve games to advance to the Division II playoffs for a second straight spring. And with the way the team is playing, Draicchio doesn't see that becoming a problem.

"We just need to keep playing it one game at a time. Our continued success depends on us doing that and we will take each game like it was our last because every team we face is a good team."

Notes: Quincy has advanced to the Q/NQ Tournament final every year and has won it twice including a 9-2 win over NQ in 2007...LeBel leads the team with a .545 batting average...Salvucci is batting .416...Quincy and North Quincy will play against each other on Friday (May 2, 6:30 p.m. Adams Field).

Quincy, North Softball Showdown Friday

By SEAN BRENNAN

The battle of the last two Atlantic Coast League North Division unbeaten softball programs takes center stage this Friday afternoon at Mitchell/McCoy Field (4 p.m.) when the North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents square off in the first of two showdowns this season.

"We always look at each game as just another opponent," said NQ head coach Michael Connor. "But this one will be different. Both teams are undefeated in the ACL and if we want to achieve our goal of winning this program's first league title, we will have to come out with our best effort to date."

"This time around there is more than just bragging rights for the winner. Whoever comes out on top Friday will have the upper hand in league play. It should make for a great atmosphere and a great game. Both of these teams are very solid all-around."

The Raiders (7-2 overall, 5-0 ACL) got themselves ready for their biggest game of the year with a 1-2 mark over school vacation week.

North Quincy started the week by hosting their annual North Quincy Softball Tournament (four-team) last Tuesday and Wednesday.

The tournament included teams from North Quincy, Weymouth, Scituate and Winthrop High Schools. The Raiders beat Weymouth 2-1 in the first round game but dropped a tough 4-1 decision versus Winthrop in the finals.

"The tournament was a success," said Connor. "All four teams played solid softball and the pitching was the story of the tourney. Our team played a great game defensively against Weymouth, but the loss to Winthrop was disappointing."

"Every loss is disappointing but that one in particular was tough. I thought we played our worst game of the season. But overall the event was a blast and all four teams represented themselves well."

In the first round game against Weymouth, the Raiders rode the pitching of Brittany Folkins (four hits, five Ks) to the 2-1 victory.

Senior Kerry Coughlin drove in the winning run.

"Brittany pitched great and our team defense behind her was exceptional," Connor said. "We had our chances to add onto the lead, but just couldn't come up with that big hit when we needed it. Thankfully our pitching and defense was good enough for the win."

The Raiders, looking to stake claim to the tournament championship, could do nothing offensively against Winthrop and lost 4-1.

Sophomore pitcher Sammy Bonanni (pitching her first varsity game of the season) allowed eight hits and was the tough-luck loser.

"Sammy pitched well for her first time on a varsity mound this year," Connor said. "Our offense just could get nothing going and it was a disappointing loss. But we will move on and get ready for the rest of the season."

Throughout the two-day tournament the Raiders' defense was a bright spot. The defensive star in both games, according to Connor, was junior third baseman Kathleen Lynch.

"Our defensive has been good all year, but Lynch has been playing great over at third base. She made plays last week that were just spectacular. And she has been playing that way since the first game of the season."

Last Friday, North dropped a 2-1 non-league game to Archbishop Williams High School.

"The bats have not produced like I know they can over the last couple of games," added Connor. "But even though every loss is tough, this loss to Archies was still a good game by our team. Archies is a good team and the hope I have is, that we can learn from it and play better in our next game."

Seniors Rebecca Goreham (.560 average) and Coughlin (.516 avg.) and junior Siobhan Carnell (.500 avg.) are the leading hitters for the Raiders this season.

North played Boston Latin Academy on Tuesday (April 29).

SPRING CAR CARE

A Few Tips on Car Painting

(NAPS) - Whatever color your car is, spray painting those dings and dents is easier than you think.

The first step is the surface preparation. The area to be painted should be rust-free, smooth to the touch and finished with an auto body primer. You may need a rust converter on corroded areas. Straighten the area to be repaired and use body filler and putty to smooth and shape damaged areas.

According to Collin Harris of PaintScratch.com, using automotive paint made for spot repair will ensure that the paint dries quickly can be sprayed anywhere and imperfections can be sanded out. When the base coat has dried, follow up with several coats of fast-drying clear coat. When that dries, the surface can be buffed to a high gloss with medium-duty rubber compound.

The Garden Bug

Cranesbill
From the geranium family, this perennial grows well as groundcover or in borders, rock gardens and containers. Native to Europe and Asia, its mid-summer flowers range from pink to magenta or purple. It likes sun in cool climates, but needs good moisture and some shade in hot climates. It propagates by seeds, cutting or dividing.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't waste your time and energy fretting over remarks you consider unnecessary or unkind. Best advice: Ignore them, and just keep doing your usual good job.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting that new perspective on a workplace situation could lead to a solution everyone will accept. Meanwhile, make time to keep up with your creative pursuits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those changes you planned to implement in early summer might need to be reassessed. But don't make any moves until you've discussed this with someone you trust.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspects favor harmony, making this a good time to work out problems in relationships — whether personal or professional, big or small. An old friend comes back.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While you're still riding that high-powered beam, you might begin to lose focus by week's end. Could be you'll need to do a little cat-napping to restore your spent energies.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unexpected development creates a lot of excitement. Where it takes you is your decision. Check out the possibilities, then decide if you want to go with it or not.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although your supporters help you squash an unfair claim against you, don't let this go unchallenged. You need to learn more about the motives of those behind it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There are still some tasks to clear up by midweek. Then you can welcome the new month on a high note. A friend brings surprising but very welcome news.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might want to change your plans before they're set in cement. Consider advice from colleagues. But remember that, ultimately, it's your choice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A difficult situation is working itself out. Lingering problems should be resolved by week's end, allowing the Goat to enjoy a calmer, less stressful period.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Be careful not to move so quickly that you miss possible warning signs that could upset your plans. Slow down. Your supporters will continue to stand by you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your generosity in sharing your time and wisdom with others leads to an intriguing development that could have you considering some interesting choices.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of influencing people to be and do their best. You would make an excellent teacher.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A wise saying by Confucius states: "Without knowing the force of words, it is impossible to know men."

Today it seems that we are being constantly inundated with words... Some very meaningful; some pure 'hog-wash'; some mis-leading, some truthful, some false...

We all know that many famous politicians, many famous leaders have a certain 'knack' with words. They know how to use the right word - at the right time - in the right place - to say what they mean and mean what they say!

Lincoln is quoted as saying after he lost the senatorial election to Douglas: "It is a slip and not a fall." His words proved true. Instead of saying: "We owe a lot to the R.A.F." - Church said: "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

We all have heard the expression: "Don't count your chickens until they're hatched." But would you know what was meant if you heard: "Do not enumerate your poultry prior to successful termination of the process of incubation?"

Yes, in our troubled world today, we have to use our ears very wisely when we hear words that can or cannot help solve our present day problems.

In Loving Memory of DENIS P. CRONIN
on his Birthday

May 5, 1928 - October 14, 2004

You can only have one father,
Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,
To our dear father up above;
Tell him how we miss him,
And give him all our love.

"Ar dheis De go raib a anam"
May his soul be on God's right hand side.

Lovingly remembered and Sadly Missed by: Margaret, Jerry, Jack, Dan, Denise, Eileen, Peggy, Denis, Mike, his 17 grandchildren and many friends.

Temple Shalom Breakfast Celebrates Israel's 60th

Temple Shalom of Milton, 180 Blue Hill Ave., (Route 138) in Milton will celebrate Israel's 60th birthday with a special Challah French-toast breakfast to benefit the Temple's Passport to Israel program Sunday, May 4 at 9:30 a.m.

Speaker will be Dr. Eliot Epstein, who will talk about his experiences growing up in pre-state Eretz Israel and his family's prominent role in developing Zionism.

The public is invited to attend.

Dr. Epstein and his family moved from Boston to Eretz Israel in 1930, where he lived on two kibbutzim and a moshav. He returned to the U.S. to complete his education, including his PhD in soil physics from Purdue. His parents and brother remained in Israel and he makes frequent visits.

Passport to Israel is a program that raises funds for its teenage participants to travel to Israel. Temple Shalom has had several participants visit Israel with the program's help.

There is a $5 donation requested for the breakfast, and reservations are required. The Temple has ample parking available.

For more information or to RSVP, call the Temple office at 617-698-3394.

Keating Grant To Support Safe Quincy School Proms

Norfolk District Attorney William Keating is providing $500 in grant assistance to the Quincy Public Schools to promote safe, responsible and alcohol-free post-prom and post-graduation activities at the high schools.

Half the grant or $250 will go to support post-prom events at Quincy High School Friday, May 30, and $250 to support North Quincy High School's event on Friday, May 9. The funds will be used to supplement revenues raised from private sources.

"The Quincy community, particularly high school parents, should be commended for taking such a proactive and practical approach to prom safety," said Keating. "I'm proud to be able to support the community's efforts in this small way."

Quincy College Nursing School Receives Continuing Accreditation

Quincy College, a fully-accredited two-year open access institution, has announced its School of Allied Health Associate Degree in Nursing has received continuing accreditation from the National League for Nursing

Accrediting Commission (NLNAC)

The NLNAC is responsible for the specialized accreditation of nursing education programs, both post-secondary and higher degree, which offer either a certificate, or diploma or a recognized professional degree (Master's Baccalaureate, Association degree, Diploma and Practical Nursing).

Program chairwoman Kristin Parks said, "Since 1893, with the establishment of the American Society of Superintendents of Training Schools for Nurses, which is the forerunner of the NLN, nursing has been fundamentally grounded on managing and overseeing the establishment and maintenance of universal nursing education and training standards."

Accreditation facilitates transfer credits from one school to another.

President Martha Sue Harris said, "Whenever a college or specialized program is accredited, it provides for the maintenance and enhancement of educational quality, continuous self-assessment, planning and improvement, all of which are good for students, faculty and the public."

Homebuyer Education In Cantonese

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) and Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), is offering its first-time homebuyer workshop series in Cantonese.

The free workshop, consisting of two sessions, will be held Saturday, May 10 and May 17 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the fourth floor conference room of QCAP, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Attendance at both sessions is required to receive a certificate.

QARI Executive Director John Brothers said the workshop will serve the needs of the many Cantonese speakers moving to the South Shore. "Cantonese speakers need to know about and be able to take advantage of the same home buying opportunities as other home buyers," he said.

The workshop will provide a comprehensive review of the homebuying process. Cantonese-speaking real estate professionals will discuss topics ranging from mortgages to home insurance.

In addition, participants who complete the 10-hour program may be eligible for downpayment/closing cost assistance of up to $10,000 and for the soft second program. Participants may also use their certificate of completion to obtain a low rate loan through Mass Housing or Mass Housing Partnership.

For more information about the program, and to register for the workshop, call QARI at 617-472-2200.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt.
Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly be-seach you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times).
Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. P.P.

wave of commercial structures built in the 1980's without regard for environmental issues or fuel savings.

"No developers are going to come in if we can't occupy the buildings we have," Harrington said.

At Monday's meeting, Chief Assessor Marion Fantucchio said that taxes for commercial buildings represented 16% of the city's income in fiscal year 2008.

"It used to be 40%," said Fantucchio who noted it takes a considerable amount of residential property to equal the commercial taxes.

Committee Chairman John Keenan called the vote a "major step" which tells outside developers, "We welcome you in a green way," and are willing to offer "incentives to come to the City of Quincy."

Mayor Thomas Koch also viewed the vote as a breakthrough, calling the committee's approval "...exactly the kind of economic incentive our city needs for new tax growth."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said the building offers "a new face on the gateway" to the city and just as importantly, new jobs for residents.

"The residential taxpayers are going to see this as beneficial because it helps offset residential taxes."

Griffith Properties purchased the 10-story building which formerly housed Blue Cross Blue Shield offices last summer for approximately $17 million. All but one floor has been vacant since August.

Griffith Properties, LLC, has since invested $12 million of their planned $26 million investment in improvements ranging from windows, lighting, air circulators to a new three-story garage, according to Tod Brainard, Principal.

Brainard said that the tax breaks will be passed on to the building's tenants who will be required to provide a specific percentage of jobs to Quincy residents.

"Our goal is really urban tenants from Cambridge and Boston," Brainard told the committee, "The TIF clearly benefits the tenants."

Brainard said that the type of large urban tenants he is courting count every fifty cent savings on a square foot as important. In addition, tenants in green buildings will be able to apply for significant tax credits through state programs.

"We have to do what we have to do to bring in business," said Council President Jay Davis of Ward 4 who had previously questioned the proposal.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee opposed the TIF agreement for Griffith properties after noting that the new owners constructed a new parking garage that will invite more traffic into an already congested area.

Councillor Michael McFarland, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi favored the TIF and voted with Keenan, Coughlin, Gutro, Davis. Councillor Joseph Finn was absent.

BANNERS displaying the words 'Discover Quincy: Celebrate Adams' surmounted by images of John Adams and his wife, Abigail, the theme of the exciting tourist season of 2008 in the City of Presidents, will soon be flying along major highways in the city.

'John Adams' TV Series Sparks Interest Tourism Up A Quick 200% As 'Best Season Ever' Seen

By TOM HENSHAW

The season is little more than two weeks old and already tourism in Quincy is up 200 per cent over last year, a tribute to the televised drawing power of John Adams, 182 years after his death.

"And the tourist season hasn't really started yet," said Mark Carey, executive director of Discover Quincy, the city's publicity arm. "If it continues, this promises to be our best year ever."

In all of last year, from April to November, a total of 230,000 people visited the Adams National Historical Park with the bulk of the visitors arriving in the traditional vacation months of July and August.

"If the trend continues we will exceed our best years significantly," said Caroline Keinath, the assistant superintendent of the Historical Park, whose facilities have been strained by the early rush of visitors.

"We're doing the best we can," she said. "We set a goal of eight new members of the staff and we're still trying to meet that goal. We're in the middle of it now."

"The gift shop at the visitors' center has sold out of the hard cover book 'Dearest Friend' and the most popular item, a paperback about the Adams Family ($12.95), is a hot seller.

"We're trying to keep everything in stock."

Carey noted that, for the first time, the city itself is getting deeply involved in the effort to lure more and more tourists to Quincy and make their visit here as pleasant as possible.

"Mayor (Tom) Koch has partnered with us to beautify the city," he said. "Flowers and plants are being planted along trolley routes and in the downtown areas. He is committed to making the city look clean."

Pretty soon, banners will go up along the main streets, promoting "Discover Quincy: Celebrate Adams," the theme for

Sees Substantial Increase Next Year Koch Blames 'Shell Game' For Coming Tax Hike

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch told City Council Monday that taxes will increase significantly next year to meet the $233,926,992 budget which he submitted for fiscal year 2009.

"Let me make it perfectly clear that, based on the structural deficit I inherited, taxes will need to be raised substantially this coming year," Koch said adding, "This city has been playing a fiscal shell game and it needs to stop."

The mayor's 2009 budget represents a three percent or nearly $8 million increase over this year's anticipated $225 million in expenditures. When the 2008 snow and ice removal costs are factored in, the budget increase will be less than $8 million.

Koch said there are no new programs and his requested $233 million budget only maintains the city's current programs and covers debts incurred prior to his election.

However, Koch charged that tax increases were avoided by the previous administration in an election year gambit which ignored financial realities.

"It was clearly an election year tax rate creating a structural deficit that we now have to deal with," Koch said of last fall's transfer of $2 million to offset a tax increase.

"I will continue to look for efficiency in government and am open to ideas from this body," Koch told councillors.

Koch noted that hefty debts and obligations were not included in the original 2008 budget of $202,148,424 which, ultimately, increased by ten percent or $24 million to the current sum, $225,938,928.

Not included in last year's budget figures, Koch said, were such items as labor contract costs of $2.1 million, payments for the Honeywell energy contract of $2.7 million, snow and ice removal costs, and lease purchase payments for fire department apparatus.

"We began building the budget based on revenue projections and commitments already in place," Koch said, noting, "The expenditure side is extremely challenging because of prior year's commitments made with no funding identified."

"When we took office in January, we faced some difficulties with illegal change orders, people placed in positions that did not exist, and dozens of grievances on hiring practices," said Koch.

"We are still working our way through the sewer and water enterprise deficit of more than $3 million."

On the brighter side, Koch said the increased taxes will be within the Proposition 2 1/2 levy limit. He also, noted that the administration will save funds through a tri-town

John Q. Adams $1 Coin Out May 15

A $1 coin commemorating John Quincy Adams, the sixth in the Presidential Coin series, will be released Thursday, May 15, and available at local banks and the Discover Quincy/Quincy 2000 Collaborative offices, 1250 Hancock St.

Similar coins honoring the first five presidents, George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe, were issued last year.

A number of activities have been scheduled around the John Quincy Adams coin, including an appearance by the sixth president of the United States who will greet visitors at the National Park Service Visitors' Center.

There will also be an exchange of coins and promotional materials, hot dogs and refreshments by Sir Franks A-lot and other surprises and promotional programs by local merchants.

But the real celebration is reserved for July 11, John Quincy's birthday, when the annual presidential wreath is laid on his grave in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

The events are sponsored by Mayor Tom Koch, the Adams National Historical Park, The Patriot Ledger, Discover Quincy, the Quincy 2000 Collaborative and The Quincy Partnership.

Grasso Park Closing Needs State Approval

The City Council Monday voted unanimously to ask the state legislature to approve the closing of Grasso Park in South Quincy.

Councillors acted after City Clerk Joseph Shea reported that the Park and Recreation board had voted unanimously that evening to relinquish the park.

The Grasso Park site is part of a larger plan for a Lowe's Home Improvement Center at Burgin Parkway and Penn Street.

The state legislature must approve the abandonment of the park by a two-thirds vote.

Shea, also, distributed the complete application for the planned 151,000 square foot retail center with parking for 435 vehicles.

If approved for a special permit, the building be constructed on approximately 13 acres on Burgin Parkway, Penn Street and Columbia Street. Egress will be from Burgin Parkway at Penn Streets.

Attorney Edward Fleming filed the application, along with the $6000 filing fee.

Babe Ruth World Series Fundraiser Friday

The Quincy Babe Ruth World Series Committee will be holding a fundraiser on Friday, May 9 from 7:30 p.m. to 12 midnight at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., Quincy.

The fundraiser includes a pasta dinner, a DJ; a silent auction with various sports memorabilia and a meat and seafood raffle.

Tickets are $15 per person and $25 per couple and are available at the door.

The 14-Year Old Babe Ruth World Series will take place at Adams Field in Quincy from Aug. 16 - 23, and will include teams from all areas of the United States.

Koch Blames 'Shell Game' For Coming Tax Hike

trash collection contract. In addition, Koch has directed his administrators to review the city's fee schedules which he believes are lower than fees in other municipalities.

The council's Finance Committee headed by Chairman John Keenan begins its budget review with a public hearing Tuesday, May 13, at 6:30 p.m. and will follow with at least five meetings on department budgets.

"It's going to be painful," said Keenan who outlined the council's repeated efforts to get exact financial figures during the past administration.

Keenan, also, urged council members to scrutinize the budget during the committee hearings because, "When we pass the budget, we're setting the tax rate."

In the past and last night,

Keenan warned councillors that the city must increase Stabilization Fund before the $46 million in bond payments for the high school come due.

At this time, the Stabilization Fund has approximately $12 million, considerably less than the $20 to $30 million recommended by Keenan and the city's bond counsel.

Koch's 2009 budget does not include additional reserve funds.

To Reduce Collections Costs Historic 3 Community Trash Pick-Up Starts July 1

Capital Waste Services, Inc., of Hyde Park will begin collecting trash in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth July 1 under a landmark tri-partite contract aimed at saving money for the three communities.

The contract, unique to the South Shore, is for five years with two options for two year extensions. Capital will collect trash from about 54,000 households in the three communities.

"The fact that we'll actually be able to reduce our trash collection costs in the upcoming year shows just how beneficial this concept is," said Quincy Mayor Tom Koch.

"With this new agreement we hope to provide services and increased recycling in a way that's cost effective."

As a result of the contract, curbside collection fees will remain at current levels in the coming fiscal year while other cities and towns face major increases due to rising gasoline and other costs.

The city of Newton, for instance, expects to pay 15 per cent more for trash collection in the next fiscal year and Milton figures to pay 5 per cent more.

Other highlights of the agreement include:

- A grant from Capital to pay for expansive outreach efforts, including mailings and other communications tools.

- A grant from Capital to pay for a solid waste coordinator, whose job will be to oversee the contract and trash collection operations.

- An improved recycling program called "Single Stream Recycling," which will allow residents to put recyclables into one large container without sorting or the separation required by collection workers at curbside. This will result in cost-saving for trucks and manpower.

Talks of a three-community trash coalition began early this year shortly after all three mayors began their first terms in office. A formal request for proposals was issued in March and negotiations began in earnest.

Under terms of their agreement, each of the three communities will maintain degree of autonomy through their respective Departments of Public Works, which have traditionally overseen trash contracts.

"A lot of people worked very hard to make this agreement happen," said Koch, "and hopefully it is a sign of things to come in terms of providing more efficient and cost-effective services for our residents."

Rain Barrel Program Is Continued To June 17

The rainwater barrel program in Quincy has proven to be such a hit that they're going to do it again.

Under the program, 55-gallon barrels are distributed at a discounted price of $66.50 each to residents to catch rain to help conserve water, save money and reduce storm water runoff. The barrels retail at $99 apiece.

A new distribution date of Tuesday, June 17 from 4 to 7 p.m., has been established for picking up the blue plastic recycled containers at the Public Works yard, 55 Sea St.

To order a rain barrel, call the New England Rain Barrel Company at 877-977-3135.

Koch Speaker May 13 At Adams National Historic Neighborhood Spring Meeting

Mayor Tom Koch will be featured speaker when The Adams National Historic Neighborhood Association (ANHNA) have their spring meeting at 7:30 p.m. May 13 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club on Glendale Road.

Issues discussed will include zoning, the Furnace Brook flood plan, traffic issues with proposed increased traffic on Adams Street, and an update on various projects throughout the Adams Street neighborhoods.

ANHNA began in 2005 when neighbors began working together in preserving the Adams Street and Furnace Brook neighborhoods from zoning changes and the development of open space.

What kind of mortgage are you looking for?

• If you're a first-time homebuyer, you probably have lots of questions. That's fine. We're happy to give you the time you need. That's the kind of bank we are – that's the kind of people we are.

• If you're an experienced homebuyer putting down a significant amount on a new home, a quicker-payoff, shorter-term mortgage might be right for you. Or maybe you'd rather have a 30-Year Loan. It's your choice!

• And if you want to refinance using your equity, we can help make that happen too.

Colonial Federal is a dependable, trustworthy community bank. Our loan officers are not on commission so their only goal is to help you get a loan you understand and can live with. If you pay your loan off early, we don't hit you with pre-payment penalties. And we're here to answer your questions after the closing too. Sound good? Come see us or call Angela Blanchard, Cathy Barry or Eileen Flibotte at 617-471-0750.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 10, 1749, the 10th and final volume of Henry Fielding's "Tom Jones" is printed. The novel tells the humorous story of the attempts of the illegitimate but charming Tom Jones to win his neighbor's daughter, despite her father's objections to his uncertain parentage.

• On May 7, 1789, President George Washington attends a ball in his honor. The event provided a model for the first official inaugural ball. Since 1809, formal inaugural balls have been held to celebrate new presidential terms.

• On May 6, 1937, the airship Hindenburg, pride of Nazi Germany, bursts into flames while attempting to moor at Lakehurst, N.J., probably after a spark ignited its hydrogen core. Rapidly falling 200 feet to the ground the hull of the airship incinerated within seconds.

• On May 5, 1945, in Lakeview, Ore., six people are killed while attempting to drag a Japanese balloon out of the woods. The explosive balloon was one of a handful of Japanese attacks against the continental United States, which were initially conducted by Japanese submarines and later by high-altitude balloons.

• On May 9, 1950, Ron Hubbard publishes "Dianetics: The Modern Science of Mental Health." Hubbard's book introduced a branch of self-help psychology that morphed into a belief system boasting millions of subscribers: Scientology.

• On May 8, 1988, Stella Nickell becomes the first person to be found guilty of violating the federal Anti-Tampering Act when she is convicted on two counts of murder. Nickell put cyanide in Excedrin capsules in an effort to kill her husband.

• On May 11, 1997, chess grandmaster Garry Kasparov resigns after 19 moves in a match against Deep Blue, a chess-playing computer developed by IBM. Kasparov, conceding defeat for the first time in his career, said of his decision, "I lost my fighting spirit."

Remember 'The Meanest Mother'?

She might draw a little criticism today. But "The Meanest Mother" is still fondly remembered.

She first appeared here 37 years ago as a Mother's Day tribute in 1971.

For many readers it brought nostalgic memories of their own mother.

We have never been able to determine where the article came from. Or who wrote it.

From time to time we have requests to reprint it as Mother's Day approaches.

But as you read it, you get to thinking that times and family values have changed somewhat since 1971.

The article seemed most appropriate back then. But today, some readers might take issue with part of it. Might even see child abuse in it.

We thought back then it was a fitting tribute to all the "mean mothers" everywhere who raised their children strictly, but with love and care.

Mothers who took the time to guide their children through those early years, those crucial years.

Someone who wanted to know where her children were. Who they were with. And, what they were doing. Mothers who were always there for them.

We still think the article is quite appropriate as a tribute to mothers.

But take a look. See if you think it's still on track.

It goes like this:

"I had the meanest mother in the world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs and toast. While others had cokes and candy for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich.

As you guessed, my supper was different from other kids, too.

But, at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang. She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing.

She insisted that if we'd be gone one hour that we be one hour or less—not one hour and one minute.

I am nearly ashamed to admit but she actually struck us. Not once, but each time we did as we pleased.

Can you imagine someone actually hitting a child because he disobeyed? Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come.

We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends.

So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake at night thinking of mean things for us to do.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It nearly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running. She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a compete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of his country.

And, whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean mother.

Look at all the things we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade, nor to take part in a riot and a million and one things that our friends did.

She forced us to grow into God fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as background, I am trying to raise my three children. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because you see, I thank God. He gave me the meanest mother in the world."

Times and values have changed in the last 37 years.

But frankly, I hope that mean mothers don't go out of style.

Kids need them. The country does, too.

And, just let me add: Happy Mother's Day, all you "mean mothers."

Applications Available For Sheriff's Youth Summer Academies

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces that applications for his youth summer academies are available now in all 28 Norfolk County communities.

The applications for the free-of-charge programs — the Youth Leadership Academy and the Future Captains Basketball Academy — are available at all city and town halls, local police departments, middle schools, town libraries and recreation centers.

Free Senior Medical Trips

Medical transportation with curb to curb service Mondays through Fridays is provided at no cost to Quincy seniors.

The service requires two weeks notice for trips, including those to Braintree Hospital, Carney Hospital, Milton Hospital and eight major hospitals in Boston.

"These programs are extremely popular with kids and parents alike," Bellotti said. "The academies prove that kids can learn valuable life lessons while having a whole lot of fun at the same time."

Applications can also be obtained by contacting Bellotti's staff member, Becky Lee at blee@norfolksheriffma.org or by calling her at 781-751-3522.

To request a trip, call the Transportation Office at 617-376-1242.

Academy, which features an aerial ropes course, is open to boys and girls age 10-14. The academy will be held in seven one-week sessions beginning July 7 and continuing through Aug. 22.

The program includes problem solving activities, team building skills, group support, patience, planning, trust, leadership and listening skills.

The Future Captains Basketball Academy is aimed at girls and boys age 12-14. In addition to honing fundamental basketball skills, the academy emphasizes and develops leadership traits that lead to players becoming team captains.

Included are presentations about defining roles of a team player, the role of officials, bullying/hazing, sportsmanship, substance awareness, academics, rules, respect, peer pressure, decision making, character, and social life.

There are three one-week sessions for boys and girls; three one-week sessions for girls, kicking off July 7 and ending Aug. 15.

"Both these academies emphasize values and education in a way that ultimately enhances public safety," Bellotti said.

The programs are held at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Braintree Public Safety Complex.

The summer youth programs were suspended last summer due to budget constraints.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A c.1920 real photo postcard view of Hancock Street looking north in Norfolk Downs. Billings Road crosses in the foreground. The store on the left, now home to a Japanese restaurant, was a drugstore owned by Forrest Richardson. At the time, there were over 20 independently owned drug stores in Quincy. Over the next 10 years that number doubled. On the opposite corner Albion MacKay had his newspaper store and next to it was one of seven grocery stores operated in Quincy by the John T. Connor Co. The old gasoline pump with the glass ball on top was in front of the Norfolk Downs Garage where Harold Fratus sold Paige automobiles. The large house beyond the stores was moved to make room for the Sacred Heart Church and later served as the church's rectory. It is now located on Pierce Street. Quincy's Yesterdays

Fire Sirens Sounded On V-E Day

By FRANK McCAULEY

President Harry Truman proclaimed victory in Europe but told the nation its fighting job would be finished only "when the last Japanese division has surrendered unconditionally."

The City of Quincy, with a global war half won and Quincy boys still fighting in the vast reaches of the Pacific, observed V-E Day quietly, a bit grimly but with reverend thanks.

Mayor Charles A. Ross, upon hearing that the war in Europe was over, called fire headquarters and ordered sirens to be sounded.

Quincy 14,000 school children observed the victory with appropriate exercises in various schools and then dismissed for the day.

Practically all liquor establishments in the city locked their doors and a large number of stores closed for the day. City Hall was ordered closed from noon to three in the afternoon.

Thank You For Supporting The MOVE Program

I would like to thank The Quincy Sun and all of the very generous and kind hearted people who have donated to the MOVE program to help Mother Theresa's Home for ill and abandoned children in Calcutta, India.

My 21-year-old daughter Julia, who currently attends

St. Michael's College in Vermont, will be traveling with a group of students to bring supplies and to work at Mother Theresa's home for three weeks beginning May 19.

The outpouring of funds, medicines and clothing for Julia and her classmates to bring to India is a testament to the kindness and generosity of the wonderful people of Quincy.

I am sorry for the confusion that was caused by the similarity of our names, but while Julia is in India working with the poor, I will be staying here in Quincy.

If anyone would like to send funds to help Mother

Theresa's orphanage, please send a check payable to MOVE and send it to MOVE, Box 395, One Winooski Park, Colchester, VT 05439.

Therapy For Smoking Addiction

One of my first recollections of childhood was being woken up by Grammy pleading, "please, Tootie, please, just half a cigarette!" She was having a tobacco D.T.

It would have taken a cold cruel woman to ignore

Grammy's plea-or to stomp in the bedroom and slap her offside the head. I'm proud to say that my mother is not a cold cruel woman.

Undoubtedly the tobacco D.T.s occurs in a place now proud to be smoke free. I'm curious what methods are employed by way of therapy as mentioned in the article because I am, like my grandmother was, addicted to smoking-not tobacco: smoking!

If the reason Quincy Medical Center enacted a zero tolerance policy (both indoors and out) was in response to smoking-related illness, then the onus is upon them to provide the therapy to help people like myself, and my grandmother if she was still alive today.

If the extent of this therapy is of a "tough love, cruel to be kind" then that's nothing more than an excuse to be mean-spirited. If these are the conditions I encounter, I would sign myself out at the first possible moment.

But if, on the other hand, I am provided with effective humane, psychosocial therapy, I'll be the first to sing the praises of the Quincy Medical Center.

Award-Winning Mexican Film On Library Agenda

The Mexican film, "The Violin," winner of three Ariel Awards (Mexican Oscars) will be screened Thursday, May 8, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The flick tells the story of Don Plutarco, his sons and his grandson, musicians and humble farmers on one hand, supporters of a peasant guerrilla movement against an oppressive government on the other.

When the rebels are forced to flee to the hills, leaving behind their ammunition hidden in a cornfield, Plutarco plays the role of a harmless violin player in order to spur the recovery of the ammunition.

The screening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Hall Curator To Unveil Quincy Baseball Mystery

The chief curator of the Baseball Hall of Fame will explore a near forgotten piece of history linking Ban Johnson, founder of the American League, to the semi-pro Quincy City League of the 1920s in a talk Thursday, May 15, at 7:30 p.m. before the Quincy Historical Society.

Ted Spencer, a Quincy native himself, will explain how the longtime president of the American League came to donate the Ban Johnson Trophy to the Quincy League champion and the process of research and detection by which the story was discovered and pieced together.

It also involves Kennesaw Mountain Landis, the first baseball commissioner; John Heydler, president of the National League; Bob Quinn, president at different times of both the Boston Red Sox and Braves; and Fred Doe, a colorful force in New England baseball for 50

The Ban Johnson Trophy itself will be on display for the first time in 80 years.

Researching the story behind the Trophy was a collaboration among Spencer, the Hall of Fame, the Quincy Historical Society and the Thomas Crane Public Library.

As chief curator, Spencer is responsible for the Hall of Fame Museum in Cooperstown, N.Y., its exhibits and its vast collection of baseball artifacts, memorabilia and history. A major traveling exhibit, entitled "Baseball As America," will be at the Museum of Science in Boston in June.

The annual meeting of the Historical Society will be held the same evening at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center. Other Quincy baseball artifacts and photos will be on display. Baseball-themed refreshments will be served. All are welcome. There is no charge.

Quincy Author To Read From New Novel May 12

Author Richard Marinick, who grew up in Quincy and lives in South Boston, will read from his new novel, "In for a Pound," Monday, May 12, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The brutally authentic tour de force of South Boston noir is the long-awaited followup to Marinick's best selling debut novel "Boys."

Delray McCauley, a former state trooper wrongly convicted of beating a DEA agent into a coma during a bust gone bad, is freshly released from prison. His former colleagues despise him; Southie boys don't trust him.

He is barely getting by as a bartender when he gets an offer he can't refuse — track down a safe stolen from a lawyer's office. His problem is that others are looking for the same thing.

Marinick himself, a graduate of North Quincy High School, has worked as a state trooper, a "sand hog" on the Big Dig, a teamster, a bouncer and member of a bank robbery ring, who served 10 years in prison.

He is presently a reentry instructor at the Norfolk County House of Correction. Copies of "In for a Pound" will be available for purchase at the reading.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Las Vegas Night May 10 At Quincy Yacht Club

The Houghs Neck Community Council will host a Las Vegas Night Saturday, May 10 from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St.

Admission is $10 and includes food and access to blackjack, craps, roulette and more.

All proceeds will benefit the Houghs Neck Community Council programs, the Houghs Neck Community Center Renovation and the Scholarship Fund.

For more information, call either Lugelle at 617-835-1681 or Margaret Laforest at 617-471-1806.

Open House Saturday At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, recently designated a National Historic Landmark, will offer its first public open house this season Saturday, May 10 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour beings at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

That afternoon, the Red Herring Morris Dancers will perform on the Homestead's grounds.

Dating from 1686, the house is 322 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, it was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was a childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Homestead is nearing the completion of an extensive restoration which includes painting the exterior.

For more information, visit the Homestead's website: www.nscda.org/ma/quincyhomestead.htm

Elizabeth McEvoy Leads Trip To Help Costa Ricans

Elizabeth McEvoy, a senior at St. Anselm College, Manchester, NH, led a "Spring Break Alternative" (SBA) trip to Costa Rica where students worked with the local residents.

SBA projects sponsored by the Campus Ministry focus on Christian service and hands-on volunteer work. The Costa Rica trip sponsored by Campus Ministry enabled St. Anselm students to spend their break living and working on construction and renovation projects in that country.

McEvoy was one of 22 student leaders overseeing community service projects undertaken by 140 St. Anselm students. She is the daughter of Anne McEvoy of Quincy.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Muffin Tin Meat Loaves

During the years of preparing food for our children, there were so many ways to make a meat loaf. It could be either in a loaf pan, or shaped in a roll on a cookie sheet or the way the kids used to love and that is in muffin or cupcake tins.

Today's recipe is a meatloaf with spinach, but if you're not a fan, it could be made without it. Sometimes when turkey is used, it can be bland if not seasoned. Any kind of herbs or seasoning can be used.

Mini Meat Loaves

- 1 1/2 pound ground turkey (or beef if preferred)
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon or so of fresh parsley (chopped) or basil if preferred
- 1/4 cup Parmesan grated cheese

- salt and pepper to taste
 - 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
 - 1 package frozen chopped spinach (thawed and drained)
 - 2 slices bread (wet and squeezed) or 1/2 cup of bread crumbs
 - 2 tablespoons chopped onion
 - 2 tablespoons ketchup (optional)
 - mashed potatoes for topping (optional)
- Mix together the eggs, parsley, cheese, garlic powder onion. Then add the turkey, spinach and all the other ingredients except the potatoes. Mix until well blended. Grease each cupcake tin and fill them until they look like the shape of a cupcake when done.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 20 minutes, until cooked through. Serve with the mashed potatoes on top. They resemble a cupcake with frosting.

Marina Bay Plans To Celebrate National Nursing Home Week

Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center will celebrate National Nursing Home Week by recognizing its staff and residents with seven days of fun and festivities.

This year's theme will be "Touching Lives With Care." More than 100 guests are expected to attend the Mother's Day Brunch Sunday, May 11, with live entertainment on each floor.

The opening ceremonies will begin Monday, May 12, with entertainment by Dave Becker and appreciation from Administrator Rosemary McLaughlin, to the staff for their compassionate care of residents throughout the year.

Mayor Tom Koch is expected Tuesday, May 13, at 10 a.m. to speak with some residents.

Other festivities will include an essay contest, staff spa day, an International Day with "potluck" lunch and a dessert "bake off," an Elvis show with Mark Stanzler and dressing in glamour for the "Marina Bay Gala" with entertainment from the Kadima Band.

The celebration will conclude with a County Fair, Saturday, May 17, from 1:30 to 4 p.m., including pony rides, a moonwalk, Lara Belle and Joy the clowns, live animals, face painting, balloonists and more.

For more information call 617-769-5100.

Morris Dancers To Perform At Quincy 'Ale' Saturday

An old English "ale" will be held in Quincy Saturday, May 10, complete with jingling bells, clashing sticks, waving handkerchiefs and colorful costumes by morris dancing teams from as far away as New York and Canada.

A church "ale" is a festival from 16th century England in which a church provided entertainment by teams of morris dancers, and sold ales to its parishioners.

Morris dancing teams sport distinctive costumes, or "kits," with small bells worn on shin pads, carrying wooden sticks that they strike together or handkerchiefs that they wave as they dance.

The Quincy ale has been held annually by the host team, the Red Herring Morris, in several different cities and towns in the Greater Boston area since 1994.

The first performance of the day will be on the grounds of the Thomas Crane Public Library from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon with each of eight teams performing individually, then joining as a unit.

The dancers next will appear at the Adams' Old House at the corner of Adams Street and Newport Avenue from 1 to 1:45 p.m.; 17th century dances performed on the grounds of an 18th century house, as it were.

Finally, the eight teams will assemble at Maypole Park at the corner of Samoset Road and Ridgeway Street at 3:30 p.m. to commemorate Thomas Morton's raising of the Maypole on the site in 1627.

Jack Dempsey, author of "New England Canaan" by Thomas Morton of Merrymount: Text and Notes," will discuss new interpretations of Morton and the public will be invited to join in Maypole dancing.

MORE FOR YOU HERE AT HOME

Willard Veterinary Clinic, Inc

In 1985, Dr. Jack Blake opened Willard Veterinary Clinic in its humble location at 126 Willard Street in Quincy. After working at South Shore Veterinary Associates since its inception, Dr. Blake went out on his own and continued to serve the pets of Quincy and surrounding area. As the practice grew, it was evident that Dr. Blake needed an associate and he hired Dr. Meg Connelly in 1987. Dr. Meg (Margaret Panora) Connelly, a graduate of Milton High School had known Dr. Blake since she took her family dog to him when she was in the 8th grade. As the practice continued to grow, Dr. Sarah Lentini joined the practice. Both Drs. Connelly and Lentini graduated from Tufts Veterinary School and Dr. Lentini has the honored distinction of being the first doctor to ever graduate from Tufts Veterinary School.

In 1997, Dr. Blake sold the practice to Dr. Connelly and she has maintained the same family atmosphere that was established by Dr. Blake. Due to the great word of mouth advertising that Willard Vet has been fortunate enough to receive, the practice has outgrown its previous location and has moved 2 blocks away to 176

Willard Street. While the new facility boasts new technologies, equipment and a bereavement room, it continually strives to keep the same family atmosphere that the clients have grown accustomed to while providing additional services and better medical care for the family pets in the area.

Dr. Blake retired from veterinary medicine several years ago but Dr. Connelly and Dr. Lentini continue to practice medicine at the new location. Dr. Jamie McVicker, upon completing her internship at Tuskegee Veterinary School joined the practice in 2006 and she brings a touch of southern hospitality to the practice.

Willard Veterinary Clinic concentrates on client education and preventative healthcare for their clients and they are able to maintain the high touch medical care that is so often missing from today's fast paced world. Seeing three appointments an hour, they feel that the extra time they give their patients will add to the quality of life for those pets that receive their medical care at Willard Veterinary Clinic. Open until 8:00 pm Monday through Thursday as well as being open on Saturdays makes it possible for the working people to receive wellness care for their pets without taking time off from the job. Dr. Meg invites anyone to check the clinic out and discover for themselves what a different experience Willard Veterinary Clinic can offer. Willard Veterinary Clinic is truly one of the many great resources in the City of Quincy.

Pageant Field Out, Faxon Field In For New Track Site

The Quincy Park and Recreation Board has voted to preserve Pageant Field in its present state and voiced strong support to build the new track at Faxon Field.

The board voted 7-1 to rescind its vote of last year's to locate the track at Pageant Field, and also voiced support for the Park Department's preliminary plans to build the track at Faxon Field next to the new Quincy High School, a site recommended more than three years ago.

"We cannot match the beauty or the utility of Pageant anywhere in the city, and the board's vote recognizes that fact and comes with the expectation that we will be moving as swiftly as possible to build a state-of-the-art track at an appropriate site," said Kristen Powers, Executive Director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who has pledged to protect Pageant Field for the last several years, spoke before the board at its meeting Monday, urging members to preserve the site.

Koch highlighted $500,000 in improvements to Pageant Field over the last decade to restore it to its natural beauty, something originally envisioned when the Adams family donated the land to the city.

As well as being one of the last open spaces in the city, Pageant Field is probably the most used park in all of Quincy, Koch said. He noted that in addition to two softball diamonds, there is room at the park for several youth sports events at once, room for large-scale family picnics, and plenty of space for residents to simply sit, relax and enjoy the pristine view of Quincy Bay.

The decision by the park board saves more than a dozen trees-including some of the oldest oak trees in the city; and protects a picnic pavilion that is now the site of dozens of family reunions and other events during the summer.

"I wish to thank the Park and Recreation Board for this decision, and our administration remains committed to building a new track at a suitable site-Faxon Field," Koch said

MCAS Rally Sharpens Sterling Students' Skills

Some 280 students sharpened their knowledge and test-taking skills recently when Sterling Middle School teachers held their First Annual MCAS Rally patterned after the popular "Jeopardy" television show.

Sterling's game show designed by eighth grade teachers Teresa Rand and Jill Boussy featured Richard Osterman, Grade 8 Special Education teacher, as host.

Osterman did his best Alex Trebek impersonation as he judged responses to the 80 MCAS practice question and test-taking skills recently when Sterling Middle School teachers held their First Annual MCAS Rally patterned after the popular "Jeopardy" television show.

Each grade competed in three rounds with a championship round at the end. Students not only had fun, but the winners took home gift certificates for ice cream and books.

"It was a huge success with the kids," said Sterling's Acting Vice-Principal Nicholas Ahearn who expects the rally to become an annual tradition.

MCAS stands for the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System which was created to measure and improve the performance of students and schools in English language arts and mathematics through standardized testing and the establishment of minimum scores for high school graduation.

Gutro Elected To Statewide Board

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro was recently elected as a District 4 representative to the Massachusetts Municipal Councillors Association (MMCA), a member group of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA).

Gutro will also serve on the MMA Board of Directors where he will play a key role in advancing the needs of all communities.

The District 4 seat was a position once held by late Senator and Councillor Paul Harold and most recently by the late Paul Leary, Weymouth Town Councillor.

"Councillor Gutro is recognized by his colleagues as an innovative leader in his city and across the state," said MMA Executive Director Geoffrey C. Beckwith. "We are very pleased that he has been elected to this leadership position. I am confident that he will be a forceful and effective advocate on behalf of local officials and taxpayers in all cities and towns."

The Massachusetts Municipal Councillors' Association meets regularly with its membership throughout the state to discuss issues affecting local government and to find ways for state and local government to cooperate in delivering services to taxpayers.

"It is indeed a privilege to follow in the footsteps of Paul Harold and serve on this prestigious board," said Gutro. "The MMA has been a strong and long-respected voice for local government in Massachusetts. This opportunity will provide another important platform to help advocate for the Quincy taxpayers as well as other communities facing similar challenges throughout the state."

The MMA is a private, non-profit, nonpartisan association of cities and towns that provides its member communities with a broad range of services, including lobbying and advocacy efforts, training and education, publications, policy research, insurance and management assistance.

Mariano Secures $20 Million In MWRA Ratepayer Relief

State Rep. Ronald Mariano of Quincy announces the inclusion of $20 million for Massachusetts Water Resources Authority ratepayer relief in the fiscal year 2009 state budget, which was approved recently by the House of Representatives.

The funding increase, which was added via a Mariano sponsored amendment, will go toward debt service assistance, thereby lowering costs borne by taxpayers.

"Every year we have to fight for this vital funding," said Mariano, who serves as chairman of the MWRA Caucus at the State House. "We have an aging water and sewer system, along with costs related to the ongoing clean-up of Boston Harbor. This funding means real dollars for real people, all across Eastern Massachusetts."

"MWRA ratepayers have a champion in Representative Mariano," said Joseph Favaloro, executive director of the MWRA Advisory Board. "The Advisory Board looks forward to working with him to ensure that the final FY09 state budget includes the pro-ratepayer initiatives that the House embraced."

The $20 million in state-wide Debt Service Assistance will contribute to lowering preliminary assessments to MWRA communities, which were projected to increase by an average of 5.9%.

Led by Mariano, the legislature created the sewer rate relief fund in 1994, to help control increases in water rates, resulting from the court-imposed clean-up of Boston Harbor. Over the past 10 years, the rate relief fund has reduced payments by over $300 million.

The FY09 state budget is headed next to the Senate for consideration.

Tourism Up A Quick 200% As 'Best Season Ever' Seen

what promises to be the city's busiest summer ever.

The reason behind all this flurry of activity, of course, is the seven-part HBO miniseries "John Adams," based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning book "John Adams" by David McCullough.

"HBO has been very helpful" said Carey. "They have provided us with DVDs of the series so we can give free screenings throughout the summer."

Efforts are being made, he said, to collaborate with Braintree, which has the biggest shopping mall on the South Shore, and Weymouth, which has Abigail Adams' birthplace, in pursuit of the tourist dollar.

Carey, along with Caroline Keimath and Dr. Ed

Fitzgerald of the Quincy Historical Society are trying to develop a mini-tour of walking sites for those tourists waiting for the main tour to start.

The mini-tour would include such places as the Hancock Cemetery, United First Parish Church and others within walking distance of the Historical Park's visitors' center.

Ayers, DCR Commissioner Tour State Parks In Quincy

Rep. Bruce Ayers and Department of Conservation and Recreation Commissioner Rick Sullivan toured state-owned parkland in Quincy last week to assess conditions and discuss possible improvements.

The tour visited Squantum Point, Moswetuset Hummock, Wollaston Beach and Furnace Brook Parkway, all of which are administered by the DCR.

"This was a great opportunity to be pro-active and review the importance of the maintenance programs and other state-related issues that have been brought to the delegation's attention," said Ayers.

The legislator from Quincy, who is vice chair of the Legislative State Parks Caucus, outlined for the commissioner a list of state-related issues/topics worked out with the City Council and the Mayor's office.

BRUCE AYERS

He also emphasized the importance of working in collaboration with the state police.

"Now that renovations are near completion at Wollaston Beach, it is important that we have proper police patrols to protect our investment and deter speeding, loitering, littering and other quality of life issues, particularly during the summer months," he said.

National Nurses Week is May 6 - May 12

Every day, our nurses show that when it comes to our patients, the heart is still the most vital organ.

It's easy to see the heartfelt care our nurses put into their work - and compassion for their patients - every day of the year. So now, during National Nurses Week, we just want to take a moment to show how much we appreciate them.

Quincy Medical Center nurses are highly-trained professionals, playing an essential role in every step of our patients' care and bringing expertise across all areas of medicine to our clinical practice.

Of course, their commitment to providing the best care is well known, and is reflected in QMC's consistent top marks from accrediting agencies. It's their drive to making every patient and family feel cared for and valued that sets them apart.

Join us in saying "Thank You" to our nurses this week, for everything they do to care for our patients all year long.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Fire Prevention: Important Odds & Ends

Can emergency personnel find you in your time of emergency?

Massachusetts' law requires that every building with the Commonwealth have a number which identifies the address of the building, prominently displayed, and visible from the street. This law was created so that emergency personnel can locate your property in the event of an emergency. Please help us help you. Make certain the numerical number of your building is prominently displayed near or at the front door in contrasting color to your building.

Exit access is of no more importance than in your own home.

Keep two means of leaving your home free and clear at all times. Keep in mind that windows can be used as alternate exits in an emergency. Growing up within a firefighter's home, each bedroom had a window made easily accessible and easy to open should an emergency arise while family members were sleeping. For that matter, bedrooms in basements are discouraged if windows are small and alternate means of exiting are not available.

Comply with Nicole's Law

Residential property that contains fossil fuel burning equipment (oil, gas, wood, coal, etc.) or contains enclosed parking is required to have carbon monoxide alarms. Residential property includes any one- or two-family home, multi-family buildings, apartments, condominiums, townhouses, etc.

The alarms are required within homes on every level except for basements and attics that do not have habitable living spaces. An entirely finished or partially finished basement or attic requires an alarm. On levels with bedrooms, the alarms must be placed within ten feet of the bedroom doors.

Are your smoke detectors working?

Smoke alarms should be on every level of your home, at the base of cellar stairs, at the base of the stairwell on the first floor, outside any bedroom on the first floor and on the second floor hallway outside bedrooms. All should be mounted on the ceiling. Change the batteries at least once a year. An easy way to remember is to change the batteries when you change your clocks. Test the smoke alarm monthly by pressing the test button. A "chirping" sound indicates that it's time to change the batteries.

There are certain aspects of fire prevention worth noting over and over again. Maintain unobstructed exits, be mindful of alternate means of escaping your home in an emergency, be vigilant and maintain early detection devices such as smoke and carbon monoxide detectors while helping us help you with contrasting numbers in front of your home in the event of an emergency.

Adhering to the messages within these topics can make the difference for you and your family in the event of an emergency. It pays to be prepared; please do so.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

KNOW THE SYMPTOMS OF METATARSALGIA

The metatarsal area of the foot, also called the "ball" of the foot, encompasses the area just below the big toe and the next three toes. When the area becomes inflamed and painful, it is called metatarsalgia. Tight-fitting shoes (especially women's) that crowd the toes put pressure on the metatarsal area and can cause metatarsalgia. High-heeled shoes also put a lot of pressure on the balls of the foot and cause the condition. Experts recommend that people with metatarsalgia wear shoes with a wide toebox, giving the toes and the ball of the foot plenty of room. A sole that "rocks" so that all the pressure is not always on the toes can also be helpful.

If adverse conditions such as metatarsalgia hinder mobility and activity by causing pain, the entire body can be affected. Don't fall victim to the situation. Seek professional podiatric diagnosis and treatment before little problems grow into big ones. And remember, every step you take does not have to be a painful one, especially when we are close by at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, offering complete footcare for you and your family. Please call us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment. Office hours also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

Ceremony Spotlights Electrical Safety Month

State Fire Marshal Hails Safety Upgrades At Adams National Park

By LAURA GRIFFIN

State Fire Marshal Stephen Coan called the number of electrical fires statewide "unacceptable" and, in many instances, preventable, when he launched the state's observance of Electrical Safety Month at Adams National Historical Park on May 1.

This year's safety campaign targets older homes where the wiring may not be equipped to handle the power-hungry technology available today.

Speaking on the lawn of "The Old House," Coan praised National Park Service officials for their foresight in authorizing electrical safety upgrades called "arc fault circuit interrupters," or AFCI, at the Adams' landmarks.

Thanks to donations by the Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) in conjunction with National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), the AFCI system will be installed at no cost for the National Park Service's Adams sites in Quincy.

Not only will the AFCI's be installed at The Old House, the Carriage House, the Library and the Beale House on Adams Street, but, also, at the birthplaces of both John Adams and John Quincy Adams on Franklin Street.

Electricians will, also, install tamper-resistant outlets which have built-in shutter systems that prevent children from inserting foreign objects, such as forks or toys, into the outlets.

"This event is the first of many educational efforts that will be focused on this month," said Brett Brenner, President of ESFI, after noting that the donation "is just one example of how new technologies...can enhance home fire safety."

"A lot more needs to be done to protect all our families' legacies," said NFPA President James Shannon.

"This is the latest technology in electrical safety," said Lorraine Carli, Vice President, Communications, NFPA, Batterymarch Park, Quincy. She added that AFCI's and the safety outlets are available, at a reasonable cost, to all homeowners.

According to Carli, the AFCI's are more sensitive than circuit breakers as they may detect loose wires, even a staple on the rubber of a wire, deteriorating cords or outletstrips, faults not caught by circuit breakers. The systems are now required by the National Electrical Code for all new homes.

In 2007, electrical problems caused 613 structure fires in Massachusetts, according to Coan who called the losses "unacceptable. Many could have been prevented.

"These fires caused six civilian deaths, 40 civilian injuries, 61 fire service injuries and an estimated dollar loss of $23.2 million."

"Many fires are caused by the things people do—overloading extension cords and power strips," said Coan who then described two fatalities last June due to electrical fire caused by a faulty plastic outlet strip. One of the victims was a 13-year-old girl.

"So many of our historical treasures have been destroyed by fire," Coan said, adding that electrical fires are a major cause of all home fires and the third leading cause of fire deaths in Massachusetts.

Electrical fires account for five to seven percent of fires reported nationally, statewide and locally, but the costs in life and property are disproportionately high, according to Coan's statistics.

Coan, also, cited the loss to the country and to individual families of legacies in records, heirlooms and photographs.

"I am thrilled," Caroline Keinath, deputy superintendent of Adams National Historical Park, said of the state-of-the-art equipment which will help protect "200 years of American history," and should be installed by mid-summer.

When Keinath was first approached about the new equipment, she said, "I thought, 'How much is this going to cost? The donation (represents) a tremendous cost savings."

"The Adams family was very concerned about safety," said Keinath, then added that Adams family members wanted to protect their legacy but, "They also realized time moves on."

Keinath pointed out that the Adams Library which houses approximately 14,000 of the Adams presidential papers, and books was built in 1870 on a fireproof foundation of 23 inches of crushed stone with walls of Quincy granite.

Each succeeding generation consistently installed updated equipment to protect their homes and legacies, said Keinath, referring to the 78,000 artifacts in the Quincy National Park system.

Keinath commended the Quincy Fire Department's (QFD) response to all calls from the park service, "Their record is always less than three minutes," Keinath said, adding that when she thanks firefighters, "Every single member responds, 'This is our place too.'"

On hand for the ceremony were Capt. Tom Lyons, QFD Fire Prevention Officer and QFD Fire Alarm Superintendent Bill Griffin.

Lyons said that the department is currently investigating a fire that may have been caused by a frayed electrical strip and that Quincy's rate of electrical fires corresponds to the national percentage.

"We use electricity every day and most of the time, nothing bad happens. That makes it hard to explain why and how we need to handle it with care," said Coan.

Private homeowners can check out the AFCI's and shutter proof outlets at their local hardware store or home center, according to Carli.

Four companies are currently manufacturing the AFCI's which keeps them at a competitive $30 to $40, said Carli who added that all units should be installed by licensed electricians.

In addition, NFPA distributes a compact disc featuring Dan Doofus whose careless habits overload electrical circuits and ESFI has a packet available with a checklist for older homes and for all electrical uses.

The messages urge homeowners to check all wiring and, such items as wall outlets, lamp cords, the wattage of bulbs, large and small appliances, such as hairdryers and toasters, and portable heaters.

Also present at the May 1 event were ESFI President Brett Brenner, and ESFI Program Manager Christopher Lindsay.

The National Fire Protection Association can be reached at 617-770-3000.

For Outstanding Service

16 Honored At Quincy Court Law Day Observance

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Sixteen persons were honored for outstanding service in law enforcement, citizenship, humanitarianism and social justice at the annual Quincy District Court Law Day observance.

There was standing room only in the main courtroom as the awards were presented last Friday.

The Robert F. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement, named for the Metropolitan Police officer who was killed in Milton in the line of duty in 1984, was presented by Norfolk Dist. Atty. William Keating to eight officers, three from Quincy. The Quincy officers, Paul Matthews, James Dentrement and John Leuchte were recognized for outstanding performance in the arrest of an armed suspect. Officer Leuchte received this same award last year.

Also receiving the award were Braintree police officers Brian Kelly and Michael Want, Weymouth police officers Steven Gomez and Edward Hancock, and Lt. John King of the Milton Police Department for bravery and execution of duty in similar, dangerous situations.

The Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award, named for the former District Attorney, teacher, and mentor was presented to Quincy Court prosecutor Jason Mohan of South Boston.

The Alfred P. Malaney Man of the Year Award, offered by the Quincy Bar Association, went to Atty. Daniel O'Malley, originally from Quincy. Jay Davis, president of the Quincy Bar Association and the Quincy City Council, presented the award.

The South Shore Cooperative Bank sponsored the Dennis F. Ryan Student Essay Contest Award, which went to Dedham High School students Melissa Caissy and Chris Minor for their "What the Rule of Law Means to Me" essays. The bank has donated funds to open an account for each student.

The Mark S. Charbonnier Award, named for the state trooper killed in the line of duty in Kingston in 1994, was presented to State Police trooper Jeffery Russell by Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin for "his meritorious service in the line of duty."

The parents of Trooper Charbonnier and the mother of Officer Robert Dana attended the Law Day to honor recipients of awards named for their sons.

The Quincy Court Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award was presented by his widow, Mrs. Marion Feldman Needel, to the Norfolk County Bar Advocates for outstanding service in providing attorneys to citizens who do not have the ability to obtain counsel for themselves.

Executive Director Adrienne Clarke, who manages scheduling over 2,000 attorneys associated with the Bar Advocate Program, accepted the award.

Mrs. Sheila McIntyre and Arthur Tobin presented the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award, dedicated to "that individual who gives of himself selflessly for the betterment of man" to Judge Joseph Welch. The award is named for late Quincy mayor and state senator.

Dr. Gary Gibbons, CEO of Quincy Medical Center received the Rabbi Jacob

Mann Social Justice Award, established for Rabbi Mann's commitment to the Quincy Court and to the ideals of justice. Gibbons was recognized for his efforts in establishing the Finding Hope for Children program at Quincy Medical Center.

Dr. Gibbons had been moved when he learned of the approximately 1,000 yearly requests for restraining orders addressing domestic violence seen by the Quincy Court, and he wanted to recognize the children living in abused households and/or witnessing domestic violence.

Gibbons said, "The true credit belongs to you, as a city, for recognizing this issue and supporting this program...this is your medical center."

Arthur Tobin noted that Rabbi Mann had attended every Law Day ceremony at the Quincy District Court for 48 years.

In commending the police and probation officers, clerks and court officers who protect victims and defense attorneys, First Justice Mark Coven expressed his "gratitude to all of you who dedicate your lives to enforcing the rule of law."

David Yas, publisher of Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly, in his address, said that "the essence of a community court is very much alive here in Quincy...the role of a community court is to help people."

STATE TROOPER Jeffrey Russell received the Mark S. Charbonnier Award. From the left are Norfolk Dist. Atty. William Keating, Trooper Kenneth Halloran, who presented the award; Russell and Coil. Mark Delany, superintendent of State Police.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, April 24, at approximately 12:15 a.m., Officer Michael Powers was dispatched to the Tedeschi's Food Store at 230 Washington St. to meet with a victim of an unarmed robbery that just occurred. While enroute to the call, the dispatcher informed him that there was a language barrier with the victim and the only information that they could get was that the incident occurred on Washington Street and an Ipod was taken.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, the 20-year-old male victim appeared to be out of breath and upset. Officer Powers also noted that the victim had a speech impediment and difficulty hearing. The victim's left eye was red and swollen and he had dried blood around his mouth. According to the victim, he was listening to his Ipod as he was walked down Elm Street and turned onto Washington Street on his way home.

A male wearing a white tank top walked up to him and asked if he had any "weed." When the victim said that he did not, the suspect punched the victim on the left side of the head, and then followed with a volley of punches that resulted in the victim falling back to the ground. The suspect then reached down and took the Ipod, then ran off.

The victim took out his cell phone, called "911" and ran to Tedeschi's for help. Officer Powers advised responding units that the suspect was wanted for "Unarmed Robbery" and gave out the description. An ambulance arrived to examine the victim, who was complaining of head pain and an earache.

The victim declined to go to the hospital but did take an ice bag to reduce the swelling. Officer Michael King spotted a male matching the description of the suspect, walk into the front entrance of a building on Elm Street. The building was in the direction that the suspect was last seen running.

Officer King requested additional units in order to surround the building so that the suspect couldn't sneak out another exit. Officer Powers then transported the victim to the location where the suspect was last seen so that he could have the opportunity to confirm or deny the identity of the suspect. Officers Mike Flaherty and David Cooper joined Sergeant Joe Lencki in securing the perimeter. After trying to raise anyone in the apartment building without success, Officers' King and Flaherty went to the rear of the building, where they heard loud voices on a second floor porch. They found the door open and proceeded to the common area (open and used for all) porch, where they located four males drinking alcohol and smoking cigarettes.

One of the males was wearing the clothing description given by the victim and Officer King confirmed that this was the same male he saw walk into the building moments earlier. Officer King questioned the suspect, who denied that he just entered the building by saying, "I was here all night on the porch drinking", supported by one of the other males who said, "he was drunk earlier and passed out. He just woke up and came out from sleeping on the couch." Officer King told the suspect that he was lying because he just saw him come in the building.

The suspect grew angry and continued to deny the allegations. The suspect was asked to step outside of the building to speak with the Officers, but he refused. This was done in order to give the victim a chance to see the suspect. The other males grew agitated and demanded that the Officers get "warrants" because "you are overstepping your boundaries." At this point, Sergeant Lencki had Officer Powers bring the victim up the steps to make an identification check. The victim was frightened because he didn't want to "get beat up again." The victim was assured that there were many Officers on scene and he was safe.

As the victim climbed the steps, the suspect was brought under a light. As soon as the victim saw the suspect, he said, "That's him." He added that he was 100% sure that the suspect was the man who assaulted and robbed him. After the suspect was placed in handcuffs, he became enraged, making threats to harm the Officers. As Officer Cooper led the suspect down the steps, the suspect angrily told him, "I'm gonna %$#@

Parents Protest Plans For Senior Center At Beechwood On The Bay

By LAURA GRIFFIN

A dozen parents representing Beechwood Community Center picketed City Hall Monday as the City Council Senior Citizens Committee began hearings on Mayor Thomas Koch's plans for a new senior center.

The parents protested Koch's plan to establish a new senior center at Beechwood on the Bay which now houses their daycare programs and children's programs.

The building is the former Myles Standish Elementary School at 440 East Quantum St., North Quincy and is owned by the city.

"It's a big concern for many parents," said Tom Angus who spoke for the parents of the infants and toddlers and older children in Beechwood's daycare and enrichment programs. Beechwood is a non-profit 501C agency.

The committee met at the request of Councillor Joseph Finn who questioned Council on Aging Director Tom Clasby regarding the mayor's plans. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi is chairman.

Finn asked how the mayor could ask the Beechwood program to be moved by Sept. 1 when there is no budget and no indication of operational costs for the senior center.

Clasby told councillors that the mayor intends to work with the Beechwood Board of Directors to help find a new location for the daycare and children's programs.

"We have asked the Board of Directors to relocate the children's programs," said Clasby who said there was no timetable and the city would work with Beechwood's Board of Directors.

Clasby cited such possible locations as Star of the Sea Church or the Nickerson Legion Post.

Raymondi suggested that officials consider asking Quincy College to reinstate their daycare program.

"Their concerns are our concerns," said Jim Fatseas, the mayor's Chief of Staff, adding the mayor and his staff know, "It's very difficult to get infant daycare."

"We're only five weeks into this; we have a concept," Clasby said several times, calling Koch's letter to Judy Paul, Chairwoman of Beechwood's Board of Directors, a preliminary step.

"The mayor is very flexible. He's listening," said Clasby, who outlined the $3 million to $5 million spent by other cities and towns for senior centers half the size of the Myles Standish School which is one-level, easily accessible by public transportation and in a beautiful location.

The COA will continue to offer meals for seniors, as well as such programs as computer lessons, fitness programs, movies and writing workshops, said Clasby.

"We will not seek any money in the budget," said Clasby, recalling that the previous mayor planned a $3 million investment in a brand new facility at Merrymount Park.

Clasby outlined the benefits of the location for a senior center and presented a letter from Edward Flynn, Jr., Executive Director of South Shore Elder Services, Inc.

Flynn pledged continued support for Quincy operation after writing, "I believe that the location that he has chosen is a good one and will work well for Quincy seniors."

Councillor Finn questioned Clasby and asked repeatedly for specific details on the mayor's plan.

"Are they going to be out by September?" Finn asked, but Clasby said there is no specific date.

Paul told the committee that the uncertainty of Beechwood's future has been difficult for the center's teachers and parents. Paul's late husband, Cecil, found the Beechwood concept when the Beechwood Elementary School closed in the 1980's.

"We're trying to come up with a plan," Paul said, adding "It's not an easy thing. We're trying to be reasonable in an unreasonable situation."

"I know it's going to be difficult," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who commended the mayor for the plan. "I think he's on the right track."

McNamee said that the city can not afford not to use city-owned buildings and noted that the city is currently paying half a million dollars in rent to private landlords.

Bill Farrell, Treasurer of the Beechwood Community Center, outlined the considerable funds that the group has paid to upgrade and maintain the Standish School facility.

According to Farrell, the Beechwood group has paid $81,000 a year for building and grounds or over $900,000 during their 12 years, paid for a new roof for the facility, and covered over $1.2 million in senior programs.

Raymondi said his committee will continue to seek information as the mayor's plans progress.

However, he noted the council will have no vote on the move as Koch said there will be no new funds expended on the project.

SPRING CAR CARE

Recycling Used Motor Oil

(NAPS) - Here's a slick idea: Changing your car's motor oil is an important part of maintaining engine protection and performance. What most people don't realize is that what's done after the oil change is just as important.

Almost half of the oil changes done in the United States are performed by car owners who do it themselves. Although the majority follow proper procedures, one oil change, improperly disposed and not recycled, can contaminate a million gallons of fresh water; a year's supply for 50 people.

To properly dispose of used motor oil, remember the four "C's":

1) CHECK: Check the mileage on your car. Maintaining proper oil change intervals is an important way to maximize engine protection and performance. You can also check your vehicle's manual for oil change information.

2) CONTAIN: Use a funnel to prevent spills. Transfer the used oil to a proper recycling container that is leak-proof with a screw-top lid, such as a motor oil bottle or a sealable approved drip pan.

DO NOT use a container that previously held household chemicals, such as cleaners, solvents, fuels (gasoline), paint or bleach.

3) CLEAN: Some oil drip pans double as a recycling container, if they can be sealed for transport. Be sure to let excess motor oil drain into a recycling container.

DO NOT rinse the residue oil down the drain. The drip pan should be stored in a plastic bag for reuse during the next oil change.

4) CARRY: Carry the sealed recycling container to a recycling center. There are more than 30,000 such centers nationwide and many automotive shops and quick lube retailers will take used motor oil in a proper container.

REAL ESTATE

Top 10 Tips For Financing A Home

Warmer weather and the conclusion of another school year are two signs that summer is almost here. While many Americans get ready for summer travel, barbecues and other rites of the season, thousands will be taking advantage of a buyer's market by looking for a new place to call home.

This buying season is unprecedented, as the real estate market has gone through changes that no one could have imagined even one year ago. Whether you are buying your first home, looking for a larger home or even buying a vacation home, the timing could not be better, as the prices have come down in many markets and there are plenty of homes to choose from.

While researching and walking through properties is what most people think of when buying a new home, prospective buyers also need to be aware that lining up proper financing is now more important than ever before. However, while lenders have tightened credit standards, buyers should not be intimidated by the process of getting a mortgage. In fact, working with a lender early on is the first step to take before you begin paging through the Sunday Real Estate section.

"Working with a mortgage lender early in the homebuying process can make the entire homebuying process much smoother," says Frank Destra, managing director and senior vice president of national sales for Internet lender Ditech. "With a credit preapproval, you can start searching for homes with a much better idea of your price range, and in turn save time as you will know which homes to focus on. A preapproval also may offer more confidence to home sellers in your ability to purchase the home."

Here are 10 tips from Destra to help make the home financing process easier for you:

1. Attend a home-financing seminar or read information available from online mortgage lenders to gain a clearer understanding of the process.
2. Understand your credit. Be aware that your credit history may impact the interest rate charged and the type of loan program for which you may qualify.
3. Become familiar with all mortgage-related terms such as Annual Percentage Rate (APR) and Private Mortgage Insurance (PMI). Your loan officer should be able to explain these terms to you.

4. When shopping for a lender, compare not only interest rates but other related fees and charges, as well. All lenders should automatically provide this information so you can make comparisons.

5. Ask your loan officer if you may benefit from credit counseling services.

6. Ask your loan officer for a list of what information you will need to complete an application. Having the correct documents ready may help the lender provide a faster loan decision.

7. Request a credit preapproval decision from your lender. It will determine how much you may be able to afford and can speed up the mortgage process once you find a home.

8. Review several types of mortgage products offered by your lender. Discuss these options with your loan officer to determine which may be right for you.

9. Save money for down payment and closing costs. Ask your lender how much money you will likely need for the type of mortgage and loan amount that you are receiving.

10. Carefully review the Good Faith Estimate you receive from your lender and be sure to ask questions. A Good Faith Estimate is a form required by federal law that discloses an estimate of the cost associated with your mortgage transaction. It is important that you fully understand all fees and charges associated with securing your loan.

By keeping these tips in mind, you will be better able to navigate through the homebuying process. Soon you will be settling into your new home, just in time to enjoy the summer season.

Your Garden

Tips On Conserving Water

(NAPS)—From space, our blue planet seems rich in water. In reality, 97 percent of the planet's water is saltwater, 2 percent is in the form of snow and icebergs and just 1 percent is useable freshwater.

Water conservation should be practiced at all times and not just in times of water shortages. Using it more efficiently can start in the yard, and done correctly, it's possible to keep your lawn and garden healthier while using less water. To get the most out of your lawn and garden, the experts at Rain Bird—a leader in the irrigation industry—advise following these tips:

Don't Drown

The greatest waste of water comes from applying too much, too often—much of the water is never absorbed. Instead of watering for one long session, water a few times for shorter periods and take 15-minute breaks in between each session. This will allow water to soak in while minimizing runoff.

Watch the Clock

Water between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m.—when the sun is low, winds are calm and temperatures are cool. Midday watering tends to be less efficient because of water loss due to evaporation and windy conditions during the day. Watering in the evening isn't a good idea either because leaves can remain wet overnight—an open invitation for fungus to grow.

By watering in the morning, leaves have a chance to dry out during the day.

Divide by Zones

Different plants need different amounts of water. Divide your yard and landscape areas into separate irrigation zones so that grass can be watered separately from and more frequently than ground cover, shrubs and trees. Both sprinkler and drip irrigation can be incorporated to achieve more-efficient use of water.

Water Only: Things That Grow

If you have an automatic sprinkler system, make sure the sprinkler heads are adjusted properly to avoid watering sidewalks and driveways. A properly adjusted sprinkler head should spray large droplets of water instead of a fine mist, to minimize evaporation and wind drift.

Consider Dripping

When it comes to watering individual trees, flowerbeds, potted containers or other nongrassy areas, consider applying water directly to the roots using low-volume drip irrigation. This will reduce water waste through evaporation or runoff, and will prevent unwanted weeds from growing.

Let It Rain

Install a shutoff device that automatically detects rain. They are inexpensive and let you take advantage of nature's precious gift without paying for it.

Conway Charity Golf June 16

The 24th annual Conway Country Charity Golf for the Homeless will be held Thursday, June 12 at the Easton Country Club.

The event, run by Jack Conway & Co., will benefit homeless causes throughout Southeastern Massachusetts. The tournaments have raised over $400,000 for shelters like MainSpring House in Brockton, Conway House in Middleboro and Evelyn House in Stoughton.

The four-person scramble format begins with a shotgun start at 8 a.m. There will be prizes for a hole-in-one, closet to the pin, long drive, low gross (individual play), and a low gross scramble (team prize.)

The $125 player fee also includes a cart, luncheon buffet and raffles.

To register as an individual player, or an entire foursome, call Denis Lilla at 781-871-0080, ext. 327.

Crawl Spaces Help Keep Home Healthy

DEAR HAMMER: A few women I know bought houses recently, and we have compiled some questions for you. — Thanks From the Girls in Philly

DEAR PHILLY: Thanks, girls! Since each of these questions is quite relevant to all homeowners, I'll tackle them one at a time. Watch for the second article in this three-part series next week.

Q. My house has small metal grates that lead to small crawl spaces on the outside of my house. A rat is the only thing that can move in the crawl spaces or vents. What are these for? This house could be 55 to 100 years old.

A. The grates and crawl spaces are part of the home's "air envelope," a system of vents and open spaces between the outer and inner walls that permit drafts of air to flow freely through this space.

Why would you want drafts coming into your home? Actually, these drafts prevent mold and mildew, dampness and rot from silently destroying the house (and even the health of its occupants).

Don't block up the vents. You might consider having a mesh screen installed behind the grate to dissuade pests, but make sure that the screen does not reduce airflow. A little extra moisture in an old wooden house can do a lot of damage to the structure.

Do have a pest-control specialist come in and get rid of rodents (and their nests, which can block airflow) before screening the grates. It's a good idea to check all the crawl spaces around the house (or have them checked). Don't forget the attic, which is one of the chief airflow areas — its vents should be open and free of obstructions, and the attic should be clean and dry.

Conway Management Attends Global Conference

About 800 real estate brokers, managers, relocation professionals, sponsors and guests from the U.S. and 11 countries around the world participated in the annual event.

Highlights included Networking Night, the popular conference kick-off which featured exhibits from more than 60 sponsors and affiliate companies, and the Gala Awards Dinner and Ceremony, where the networks top companies were recognized.

An impressive line-up of speakers included keynote Dr. Joseph Michelli, bestselling author of The Starbucks Experience: 5 Principles for Turning Ordinary into Extraordinary.

primary, who shared insights on Creating the Total Customer Experience.

Rounding out the program were LeadingRE member brokers, relocation directors and technology and marketing professionals, who shared success strategies on a variety of topics.

"While the real estate market has slowed in most areas, the fact is there were still 5.6 million home sales in the U.S. last year," Pam O'Connor, president/CEO of LeadingRE said. "In this industry environment, the best brokers distinguish themselves, and participating in this conference reflects a real commitment to continuously elevating the level and types of services provided."

"Being a part of LeadingRE is just another piece of customer service Conway can offer our clients," said McCaffrey. "It's a network we can trust, and we can pass that on to our customers."

Where Are Your Key Documents?

If something happens to you, where is all your important information? Whether it's due to death or disability, those around you need to have fast access to your financial and legal information.

There's a publication that can help you pull all your information together in one place: "If Something Should Happen: How to Organize Your Financial and Legal Affairs," by Marla Brill of the American Institute of Economic Research.

This publication is surprisingly comprehensive for its low price ($10) and small size (44 pages). It's the small size that makes it easy to use. Besides providing space for you to fill in all your information, it provides resources for questions you might have on a number of topics without overloading you with information.

The publication is broken into three sections: Taking Stock, Planning and Organizing Your Records.

"Taking Stock" covers areas you need to consider first: Is your estate plan up to date? Have circumstances changed since you made out a will? Will those responsible for handling your affairs have access to your money to pay bills?

The "Planning" section covers the roles of wills, living wills, health-care proxy, power of attorney, executor, guardian and trustee in your estate planning, offering guidelines and warnings where appropriate.

The "Organizing Your Records" section is the place to record all your information: People to contact, your attorney, location of your personal papers, the name of your executor, medical information, your assets and liabilities, your computer e-mail address and passwords — and much more.

Because so much information can be recorded in one place, give thought to where to put "If Something Should Happen." If you do fill out all the information and it falls into the wrong hands, you could be at risk for identity theft, at the very least. Because of the format (a thin volume the size of regular printing paper) it can be hidden in a bookcase, or under folders standing upright in a file cabinet. If you put it in your bank box, give consideration to who will have access. Ask the bank: You might need a co-signer (with a key) on the bank box registration.

"If Something Should Happen" can be ordered directly from AIER by calling 413-528-1216 or online at www.aier.org.

Spring Into Sunny Weather But Stay Sun Safe

As the weather grows warmer, people's thoughts turn to outdoor activities and enjoying the sunshine.

Dana-Farber Cancer Institute physicians and nurses are encouraging people when they are outside, whether they are spending a day at the beach or a few hours working in their yard, to be aware of the dangers of overexposure to the sun and to practice sun safety.

Prevention and early detection are critical to reducing the dangers of skin cancer and melanoma.

To stay sun safe, remember to think about:

- Applying a sun block with a rating of SPF 15 or higher

- Reapplying sun block every two hours, and immediately after swimming or heavy perspiration

- Providing additional protection by wearing a broad rimmed hat, sunglasses, long-sleeved shirts and pants

- Avoiding excessive exposure to the sun, especially during the peak hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Because sunscreen contains ingredients that lose potency over time, bottles that have been sitting on the shelf for more than a year may not provide adequate protection.

Melanoma can be hereditary; people with family members who have had melanoma are at a higher risk for melanoma. People who have had melanoma and moles are at greater risk of developing the disease. Excessive sun exposure and sunburns increase a person's risk of developing not only melanoma but other skin cancers as well.

Skin cancers present a range of symptoms. Melanoma symptoms include changes on the skin, including new spots or moles or existing spots or moles that change in shape, size and color. Basal cell carcinomas usually appear as flat, firm, pale areas or as small, raised, pink or red waxy areas. Squamous cell cancer may appear as lumps with rough surfaces or as flat, red patches that grow slowly.

Recognizing changes on the skin is key for early detection and treatment of skin cancers. The American Cancer Society recommends using the ABCD rule to help determine when a skin or mole change should be seen by a physician:

A for asymmetry: one half is differently shaped than the other

B for border irregularity: jagged or blurred edges

C for color: the pigmentation may not be consistent

D for diameter: moles greater than six millimeters (the size of a pencil eraser)

People who experience any of these symptoms should notify their physician immediately.

Vitamin And Dietary Supplement Safety Tips

By: Paul Reyes, RPH

Each day, millions of Americans take dietary supplements, including vitamins and minerals, in an effort to stay healthy and fill dietary gaps.

However, they are not risk-free. Some supplements can be dangerous if taken with certain medications or may have harmful side effects. Talking to your doctor or pharmacist before taking a supplement can help you find out if it is safe for you to use. Here are some guidelines to follow before taking a supplement:

- Drug interactions: Remember to tell your doctor about any dietary supplements you are taking when starting a prescription medication. Certain supplements, especially when taken in excess, have serious side effects and can have dangerous interactions when taken with prescription medications.

- Follow guidelines: There are different types and amounts of vitamins and supplements that are needed, depending on your age, gender and lifestyle. Talk to your doctor about which one is right for you.

- Keep your guard up: Just because the label says "all natural" doesn't mean that the product is safe or effective. The supplement industry is generally unregulated, so potency and ingredients can vary widely. Also, be wary of any curative claims made about a product without sound scientific research to back it up.

- No substitutions: Never substitute prescribed medications with vitamins or supplements. Chances are it will not have the same effect and may even be dangerous. If cost is an issue, discuss lower-priced medication options with your doctor, such as switching to a generic drug or using a mail-order pharmacy for medications taken on an ongoing basis.

- Don't overdo it: If you are taking a supplement, don't exceed the recommended amount. Some products can be harmful when you take a large dose or take them for a long time.

- Do not self-diagnose: The best thing you can do before taking vitamins is to ask your doctor or pharmacist what your needs are and what's safe and effective for you. Remember that supplements are not intended to treat, prevent or cure a disease.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

GUMMING UP THE WORKS

The mouth is teeming with bacteria, some good, some bad. The harmful bacteria are contained in the sticky film called "plaque" that builds up on teeth daily and can irritate gums. Gingivitis, or inflammation of the gums, is the beginning phase of what could become a more serious case of periodontitis (gum inflammation). Left unchecked, the supporting structures of the teeth can degenerate to the point where teeth become loose or lost. According to the American Academy of Periodontology, periodontal disease, also known as gum disease, is a "chronic bacterial infection that affects the gums and bone supporting the teeth." Periodontal disease will affect up to 90% of adults at some point in their lives.

Our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. Good oral health is important to your overall well-being. Daily preventive care, including proper brushing and flossing, will help stop problems before they develop and are less painful, expensive, and worrisome than treating conditions that have been allowed to progress. Knowledge about gum disease is, therefore, imperative to dental health. If you need answers to questions about gum disease, or any other dental health care, don't hesitate to contact us at 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Nearly 30% of the U.S. population may be genetically susceptible to gum disease.

The softball game last Friday night between Quincy and North Quincy quickly turned into a coming out party for Presidents' freshman hurler Kori Sorensen.

Sorensen was flat-out dominant.

She finished the game, a huge 3-1 Atlantic Coast League victory, with 13 strikeouts, no walks and just four hits allowed. She stuck out the side in the second and fourth innings, and finished the game by throwing just six pitches out of the strike zone.

"She was pretty much unhittable," said Quincy head coach Mike Sedar. "She looked good during warm-ups and the bad weather (cold & rainy) didn't seem to cause her any problems. She was flawless."

Quincy (8-2 overall, 5-0 in league play) was the away team and North Quincy's Brittany Folkins set them down in order in the top of the first. The defensive highlight of the inning was a diving catch by junior center fielder Siobhan Carnell.

Sorensen, 8-2 on the year with a 75:1 strikeout to walk ratio (that is not a misprint) came out in the bottom of the first and quickly allowed a leadoff single to NQ senior captain Kasey O'Connell.

O'Connell stole second to get into scoring position, but Sorensen bore down and struck out the next two Raider batters. With two outs, senior left fielder Rebecca Goreham drove in O'Connell with a big two-out RBI single to center. But that would be all the Raiders would muster offensively the rest of the way. Sorensen finished the first with her third punchout of the inning.

Folkins (seven innings, seven Ks) retired the first two Quincy batters in the top of the second on strikeouts, but then, with two outs, the wheels temporarily fell off the Red Raider wagon.

A single by Quincy's Erin Curran extended the frame, Sorensen helped her own cause by singling to left to put runners on first and second and a walk by Folkins loaded the bases with two outs. A single scored Curran with the first run and then things went haywire for North.

With the bases still filled with Presidents, Folkins got Jamie Shaunessy to hit a two-hopper back to the mound. Folkins fielded the ball cleanly, but her throw to first was off-line and the ball ended up down the right field line and Quincy plated another two runs.

At the end of an inning and a half, Quincy and Sorensen held a 3-1 lead. It would be all the offense that she would need.

Up 3-1, Sorensen came out for the bottom of the second and set down three straight batters via the strikeout. She mainly used a deadly fastball, but her pitching arsenal also includes a rise ball, two types of change-ups and a cut fastball. But on this night it didn't matter what she threw, everything was on point and very accurate.

"Kori can throw so many different pitches," said Sedar about his freshman phenom. "Against North, she was locating all of her pitches for strikes and it made it difficult for their offense to get going. She was locating her fastball outside and inside and our catcher, Olivia Berry, called a solid game.

"Her ability to hit her spots is allowing us for the first time in years to set our infield and outfield defense on each pitch. It is a treat to watch her pitch."

For as well as Sorensen pitched, Folkins was equally as impressive for North Quincy in the pitching circle. After allowing the three runs in the second, she clamped down and didn't allow a hit the rest of the way, setting down Quincy in order in the third, fifth and sixth innings.

But in this pitching duel, it was Sorensen who was at her best.

"Her attention to detail is unmatched," added Sedar. "The rest of the team, both on offense and defense, feeds off of her emotion and for a freshman she has really stepped up."

"Last year the ACL leader in strikeouts after twenty games was around 70. In ten games, Kori has already eclipsed that mark and her 0.89 ERA is one of the best in the area. And on top of that, she fields her position really well. She is special."

The Presidents are a young team, but Sedar spoke highly of the play and leadership of senior shortstop Mary Beth Torpey.

"MB has been a great voice of experience this season. She is hitting .500 and plays a solid shortstop. We are a young team, but Mary Beth settles them down and her defense has been a major factor in the early success Kori has had. She is a great kid."

At 8-2 overall and 5-0 in the ACL, Quincy finds themselves in the driver's seat of the ACL's North Division. But the team was to be tested again this week when they were scheduled to play the ACL's South Division leader, Dennis-Yarmouth (8-2, 6-1) on May 5.

"We don't worry about winning league championships, but it would be a nice accomplishment if we do," said Sedar. "The most important thing is to be ready to play come post-season. But the win over North, a very strong team, was big."

Notes: NQ junior third baseman Kathleen Lynch had two of her team's four hits... The Raiders are 7-3 overall, 5-1 in league play... Quincy & North play again on May 21 at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

Young Red Raiders Defeat Quincy, 4-1

BASEBALL

The young North Quincy Red Raider baseball team defeated cross-city rival, the Quincy Presidents, 4-1, last Friday night at a cold and rainy Adams Field.

The win improved the Red Raiders overall record to an even 5-5. And the 4-1 victory was North Quincy's third straight win.

Sophomore Keith Morreale was outstanding on the hill for North. Morreale pitched a complete game (seven innings), giving up two hits, striking out seven Presidents and issuing zero base on balls.

The Raiders played mistake-free ball in difficult weather conditions and the result was a much-needed win over an Atlantic Coast League opponent.

"This was a game that was going to go to the team that made the least mistakes," said NQ head coach John Fidalgo. "When your pitcher doesn't walk anyone, it takes pressure off the fielders. You can play comfortable when no one is on base."

Senior Alex Tragellis was the offensive star of the game. Tragellis finished the game 2-for-2 with a walk, three RBIs, three stolen bases and scored a run. He also played spectacular defense at shortstop, making several outstanding plays that helped to prevent Quincy from gaining any momentum.

"He (Tragellis) will remember this game for a long time," Fidalgo added.

"This was special.

"The most impressive part was that both hits came with two outs and two strikes. He really stayed focused and didn't try to over swing. Alex shortened up and went to right field with both hits."

Leadoff hitter, junior Matt Rodriguez, continued to set the table for the rest of the North Quincy lineup. Rodriguez reached base three times, twice via the walk and the other on a single. He also stole two bases, giving him ten on the season.

Sophomore Ryan Louis finished the game 2-for-3 with two runs scored hitting out of the cleanup spot.

Batting second, John Ainsley, finished the game 1-for-4.

On May 1, the Raiders doubled-off Silver Lake HS by an 8-4 score.

Louis started the game on the mound and went four innings, allowing three runs and eight base runners (four hits, four walks). Joe Edgerly pitched three innings of relief to earn the win.

Edgerly allowed just one run on two hits while striking out four Lakers batters to earn the win.

Freshman Colin Ryan went 3-for-5 with two runs scored and three RBI. Others contributing at the plate included Ainsley (3-for-5, 3 RBI), Dan Richards ((2-for-4), Devin Hudson (1-for-4) and Morreale (2-for-4).

The Red Raiders were scheduled to play May 5 against Sandwich HS and at home against Nauset HS May 6 and at home against Whitman-Hanson HS on May 7.

The ever-improving Raiders will travel down to Marshfield HS today (May 8) to play in an Atlantic Coast League showdown. The team's next home game is scheduled for May 12 (Monday) versus Plymouth South HS (3:30 p.m. start).

Notes: Ryan leads the team with a .423 average... Louis leads the team with 15 RBIs... Rodriguez leads the team with ten stolen bases and 14 runs scored... Morreale's two wins lead the pitching staff. He has a 4-45 earned run average and 18 strikeouts in five games pitched... The Raiders need to win five out of the last ten games to advance to post-season play.

Office Powers asked the suspect, "How would you know if the kid was deaf or not if you have been inside all night?" After this exchange, which was important for court purposes, the suspect became enraged, fighting and kicking as four Officers led him to Officer King's cruiser.

The suspect kicked the interior of the cruiser the entire ride back to the station. After checking the other males for arrest warrants (none), the Officers left the apartment building. The Ipod was not recovered. The suspect was unable to be booked right away due to his violent behavior. It was learned that the suspect had recently been released from prison and was on parole for a prior "armed robbery" and "assault and battery with a dangerous weapon."

The suspect's Parole Officer was contacted and he said that the suspect would be going back to jail after appearing in Quincy District Court the next morning. The suspect, a 23-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Unarmed Robbery" and "Assault and Battery."

Nice Work!

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF DISABLED POLICE OFFICERS (NADPO): Recently, there have been calls about the credibility of this organization. There is limited information about them. The Better Business Bureau has no complaints about them, but NADPO has not registered with them either. According to a report from the California Attorney General's Office, NADPO used "Campaign Center Inc." as their telemarketer to collect donations. In most cases, telemarketing agencies keep approximately 80% of donations. The report also stated that NADPO donated 15% to charity. By looking at their website, it does not appear that recipients received a large amount of money.

Bottom line: not much of your donation is going to those in need.

Joe Gilmore Sinks 7th Hole-In-One

Joe Gilmore, a lifelong Quincy resident and avid golfer, recently ached his seventh career hole-in-one at the 7th hole (par-3, 110 yards) at Presidents Golf Course.

Using his seven iron, Gilmore's hole-in-one was witnessed by playing partners Dan Rawdon and Frank Storer. It was Gilmore's seventh career hole-in-one.

Gilmore's first hole-in-one was in 1954 on the old 8th hole at Braintree Municipal. His next two were at D.W. Field in Brockton and the final four

The Quincy Recreation Department recently crowned the Atlantic School Gym the 2008 Champion of the QRD's All-City Basketball Championship Middle School Division.

Atlantic defeated Merrymount by a score of 46-32 in the finals.

In the championship, Atlantic played a well-balanced game that saw seven players' record a point. Joe Brown led all scorers with 15 points and Matt Costa followed closely with 14 points of his own. Brown scored most of his points in the first half (ten points), while Costa scored ten of his 14 points in the first half.

Other scorers included Paul Cunliff (two points), Colin Evans (four), Dan Gould (three) and Walter Hannon (two). Matt Donovan played great man-to-man defense and had several steals and Joe Lawler came off the bench and showed considerable ball handling skills.

Joe MacRitchie, a veteran recreation supervisor, coached the Atlantic squad.

Jack McDonald's 13 points led Merrymount. Other scorers included Mike McGrath (nine points), Terrance Rooney (6) and Chris Keenan (4).

Brendan Cunningham and Padraig Geary played outstanding defense and James Guerin was strong on the offensive end all game. Tim Keenan was a monster on the boards and Kiley McDonald finished the game with several steals.

Merrymount veteran leader Corey Awed coached the team and was assisted on the bench by new leaders Paul Carson and Diego Arredondo.

Atlantic advanced to the finals with a 51-26 semifinal win over Montclair.

Taz Laraquente and Pat Verhault scored three points for Montclair. Aaron Welsh (seven points) and Pat Teiro (five points) also contributed on offense. Dean Zoia coached the Montclair team.

Merrymount reached the finals with a 46-42 double-overtime victory over Atherton Hough.

Cullen Brooks and Nick Lapore were AH's two players who scored in double figures. Also scoring for AH were Bill King (seven points), Peter Giuta (two) and John O'Callaghan and Nick Lapore did a fantastic job rebounding the ball.

Others playing well for AH were Tom Wahlberg, Rob Monroe, Anthony McShane and Tom White.

Long-time recreation leader Michelle Hanly coached the team. Kyle Tobin assisted on the bench.

In the quarterfinals, Merrymount beat Point Webster 39-36. Alex Bottari led Point Webster with 16 points and Connor Quinn and Keenan Daniels chipped in six points.

Atherton Hough defeated Snug Harbor 45-34 to advance to the semifinals. Mike Ryan, Ryan Forte and Dennis Nguyen all had ten points for Snug Harbor.

Jackson Lam (four points), Viet Doan, Rafael Santana, Nathan Quinlan and Jonathan Oldham all played well for Snug Harbor.

Christopher Ranft and Paul Oldham coached Snug Harbor.

Montclair defeated Bernazzani earlier in the tournament. Playing well for Bernazzani were Joey Cratelli, Mike Bina, Ryan Hughes, Aaron Savoie and Harry Veranes.

Atlantic beat the team from Wollaston/Beechwood Knoll in an early round. Playing well for Wollaston/Beechwood were Ed McDonough (20 points), Dan Mongo (ten) and David Lawlor (six).

Tina Pacetti, Robby Yee and Caitlyn Nelson coached the team.

The Middle School City Championships have been held for more than forty years and the tournament marks the end of the Quincy Recreation Department's twenty-week winter season.

Recreation Director Barry Welch presented certifications to the tournament's finalist (Merrymount) and trophies to the champions (Atlantic).

The brown, hairy gypsy moth caterpillar feeds heavily on tree vegetation in June and July. This is very stressful for the trees, killing buds, twigs and branches. Nut production stops, sometimes for years. A lack of canopy affects bird and animal populations, and leaves soil more vulnerable to wind and rain. Erosion affects water sources, disrupting aquatic life and vegetation.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You've set a fast pace for yourself. But as you approach your goal, you might want to slow down a bit in order to take time to reassess your situation and make changes while you can.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Patience continues to be a virtue for the Divine Bovine. So as eager as you might be to get things moving, remember that time is on your side. Make good use of it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) There's a wee bit of uncertainty in the early part of the week. But things clear up as more facts come to light. Spend quality time this weekend with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An old friend's return could open new possibilities for both of you. But don't let yourself be rushed into anything. There could be some factors you haven't yet explored.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This week offers a challenge you're raring to take on. And while eager to get started, do so slowly so that you can focus those sharp Cat's Eyes on every detail.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Put your skepticism aside and listen to advice from colleagues who've been where you are now. What they say could be helpful as you get closer to a decision.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family matter might again require your reassuring touch. Handle it, as always, with kindness and fairness, even if some of your kin prove to be especially difficult.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ability to tackle even the most intricate details of a project is likely to impress some very important people. A relative shares news later this week.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The Archer's aim might be focused on the big picture this week, but don't overlook checking for those details you might have missed.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might feel awkward asking for assistance, but who would refuse the charming Goat's request? Do it, then go ahead and enjoy a musical weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Pour some cold water on that simmering misunderstanding before it boils over. The sooner things settle, the sooner you can move ahead with your plans.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're in a highly productive period, which you feel can go on forever. But you could be courting exhaustion. Take time out to relax and restore your energies.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can combine a sense of adventure with a penchant for practicality. Have you considered a travel-related field?

OBITUARIES

Sybil I. Whyte, 92

John Hancock Insurance Co. Employee

A memorial service for Sybil I. (Pamplin) Whyte, 92, of Quincy, a former John Hancock Insurance Company employee, will be held Saturday, May 17 at 11 a.m. in the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Mrs. Whyte died at home April 19 under the care of Old Colony Hospice.

Born in Croyden, England, she immigrated to the United States in 1921 with her parents, the late Edgar and Clara (Walker) Pamplin, and her brother, the late Clifford Pamplin.

Mrs. Whyte was a 1932 graduate of Quincy High School.

She was employed at the John Hancock Insurance Company, as secretary of the Adams Shore EUB Church, as legal secretary to Dr. Emma S. Tonsant, Esq., and also worked at the law offices of Jackson & Sutherland, Quincy.

Mrs. Whyte was a volunteer with the Easter Seals Swim Program, the Swim with a Special Child Program.

She enjoyed knitting and made lap robes for the Veterans Administration and the Parent-to-Parent Program.

She was also a long and active member of the Quincy

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"God though to give the sweetest thing
 In His almighty power
 To earth; and deeply wondering
 What it should be one hour
 In fondest joy and love of heart
 Outweighing every other
 He moved the gates of heaven apart

And gave to earth - A Mother!" . . . Anon.

On Mother's Day - we think back . . . We know mother is someone special . . . a special person who constantly tried to shape our character for the best. In thinking back, we realize we can never repay her for her uncountable acts of kindness; her gifts of patience, love and sacrifice. Nor can we reimburse her for the tears she shed for us in times past.

Mother's Day . . . What better time is there for us to rededicate ourselves to do better - to make our lives more meaningful to God and our fellow man? Would not a message of such intent, by letter, card, phone or personal visit . . . or promise by prayer . . . be a priceless gift to her? . . .

Gregory P. 'Greg' Mullen, 48

Mechanical Engineer

A funeral Mass for Gregory P. "Greg" Mullen, 48, of Franklin, formerly of Hingham, a mechanical engineer, was celebrated Monday in St. Mary's Church, Franklin.

Mr. Mullen died April 30 at home after a courageous battle with cancer.

He was the husband of Paula (Tuite) Mullen.

Born in Boston July 18, 1958, the son of Retired Quincy Police Chief Francis Mullen and Mary (Barrett) Mullen of Norwell, he was raised in Hingham and had lived in Franklin for 17 years.

Mr. Mullen was a 1977 graduate of Hingham High School. An outstanding student, he went on to earn his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1981. While there he was selected by the faculty as one of the very few juniors to be cited for exceptional achievement.

He also received his master's degree from MIT in 1987.

Mr. Mullen had been employed by Babcock Power in Worcester for the past nine years. He was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

A strong believer in education, physical activity, and the arts, Mr. Mullen always supported the children's academics and extracurricular activities.

His happiest times were spent with his family. He especially enjoyed spending time at the beach, skiing, and taking family daytrips throughout New England.

Mr. Mullen cared deeply for everyone he met. To have known him was to respect him.

In addition to his wife and parents, he is survived by his children, Janet, David and Susan Mullen of Franklin.

He is also survived by his sister, Elizabeth Holland of Rading and brother Michael Mullen of Marshfield.

Burial was in the parish cemetery.

Alice W. Larkin, 79

Church Lead Soloist, Registered Dietitian
Veteran U.S. Army Medical Service Corps

ALICE W. LARKIN

A funeral Mass for Alice Wedd Larkin, 79, of Worcester, formerly of Quincy, a 100 percent disabled Veterans' Administration patient at the West Side House in Worcester for the past nine years, was celebrated Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. in the Holy Trinity Parish at the Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St., Quincy.

Miss Larkin died May 3.

She was born Jan. 24, 1929 to the late Dr. Richard J. and Alice Wedd (Murphy) Larkin of Quincy.

Gift with an operatic voice at an early age, she was lead soloist at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in the Merrymount section of Quincy. She performed at many madrigals during her four years at the Woodward School for Girls from which she graduated in 1946.

She was also a 1951 graduate of Simmons College in Boston with a bachelor of science degree in dietetics and home economics.

Miss Larkin served for 11 years as a first lieutenant with the U.S. Army Medical Service Corps, including over three years of active duty during the Korean War from 1951 to 1954. Despite an earlier service connected disability, she was recalled to active duty during the Bay of Pigs crisis, serving at the 354th General Hospital at Fort Meade, Maryland from August 1961 to August 1962.

Her military awards included the National Defense Service Medal with bronze star, the Armed Forces Reserve Medal with bronze hourglass and the Cold War Service Certificate.

Between active duty tours and following her discharge from the Army Reserve, Miss Larkin served as a registered hospital dietitian at several different hospitals in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Michigan. Unable to work thereafter because of her disabilities, she lived for many years in Maryland, Florida and Arizona.

An avid reader and collector of a myriad of data and documents, she was endowed with an prodigious memory for names, dates and facts which she imparted professionally to others right up to the end of her life.

Miss Larkin was a life member of the Disabled American Veterans, the American Dietetic Association and the Simmons College Alumnae Club.

She was the devoted sister of Nancy L. Dowling of Milton, James T. Larkin of Greenwich, CT, David J. Larkin of Quincy, the late Richard J. Larkin, Jr., the late John P. Larkin and the late Michael Larkin who died in infancy.

She is also survived by 13 nieces and nephews.

Interment with military honors was at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Holy Trinity Parish, c/o 227 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Daniel F. Shaughnessy, 72

Car Shifter

A funeral Mass for Daniel F. "Dan-O" Shaughnessy, 72, of Quincy, formerly of South Boston, a former employee of the MBTA, was celebrated Tuesday in St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Mr. Shaughnessy died May 2 at home.

Born in South Boston, he had lived in South Boston before moving to Quincy 26 years ago.

He served in the U.S. Air Force from June 10, 1954 to December 6, 1957. Two of the four years served in the Air Force were in the mountains of Japan.

Mr. Shaughnessy was employed as a car shifter for the MBTA for 34 years. He was also a member of the Boston Carmen Union Local #589.

He was an avid fan of the New England Patriots and Boston Red Sox.

He is survived by his wife, Patricia M. (McCarthy)

Saughnessy of Quincy; his mother, Ellen (Burke) Shaughnessy; two sisters, Mary Casey of Florida and Hummarock and Nora Loftus of Quincy; and two brothers, Thomas Shaughnessy of California and Fr. Martin Shaughnessy, S.J. of Fairfield, CT.

He was also the father of the late Patrick Shaughnessy and brother of the late John Shaughnessy, William Shaughnessy, Patrick Shaughnessy, Joseph Shaughnessy, Michael Shaughnessy and Robert Shaughnessy.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Ann's Church, 757 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02170.

Gaetano V. Schipellite, 33

Union Sheet Metal Worker

A funeral service for Gaetano V. "Guy" "Diesel" Schipellite of Quincy, a union sheet metal worker, was held May 2 in the Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Mr. Schipellite died April 24 at Quincy Medical Center.

He was the son of Guy J. and Geraldine (Coletti) of Quincy.

Born in Quincy, he graduated from Quincy High School in 1993 and worked as a union sheet metal worker for Local #17 at Harrington Brothers Sheet Metal in Stoughton.

He was a lifelong resident of Quincy and enjoyed reading and sports, especially baseball and football.

In addition to his parents, he is also survived by his sister Lisa Schipellite of Quincy and her boyfriend Angela Camarro of Lynn and his cousins Gina Camarro of Tewksbury and Paul Camarro of Chelsea.

Beatrice M. Bowes

Retired Switchboard Operator

A funeral Mass for Beatrice M. "Bea" (Gilmore) Bowes of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester, a retired switchboard operator, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Mark's Church, 1725 Dorchester Ave., Dorchester.

Mrs. Bowes died Monday. She raised her family in Dorchester and was active in St. Mark's Parish Women's Guild.

She worked for 15 years as a switchboard operator at St. Margaret's Hospital until the hospital was closed in July 1993.

Mrs. Bowes enjoyed sewing. Her family recalled how she always enjoyed calling them and saying, "come drink tea with Bea."

She was a compassionate and giving woman who was very devoted to her family. She had a special way of making people feel like they were family; she was like a mother to everyone.

Mrs. Bowes will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Wife of the late Robert J. Bowes, BPD, she was the devoted mother of Robert J. Bowes, Jr., retired detective,

BEATRICE M. BOWES

BPD, of Quincy; Nancy M. Bowes of Nashua, N.H., Janice MacPherson and her husband, John, Mary Beth Bowes, BPD, Lisa J. Bowes, all of Quincy and the late Thomas D. Bowes, BPD.

She is also survived by 11 grandchildren, 10 great-grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 3 to 8 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Burial will be in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Diabetes Association, 330 Congress St., Boston, MA 02210-1216.

A funeral Mass for Eleanor A. (Murphy) Lynch, 77, of South Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, a homemaker, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Saint John the Baptist Church, 44 School St., Quincy.

Mrs. Lynch died Sunday at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Born and raised in Boston, she was educated in Boston schools. She had lived in Quincy for 46 years before moving to South Weymouth three years ago.

She enjoyed gardening and sports, especially the Boston Red Sox and the New England Patriots.

Mrs. Lynch dedicated her life to her children and grandchildren.

Beloved wife of the late John R. Lynch, she was the devoted mother of Debra E. Boddie and her husband James of South Weymouth, Paul F. Lynch and his wife Denise of Duxbury, Georgi Jean M. Leo and her husband Norman of Quincy and Kimberly A. Lynch of Hingham.

She is also survived by a sister, Winifred M. Woods of Dorchester; a brother, Thomas Murphy of Boston and seven grandchildren.

She was also the sister of the late Lucille Barry.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m.

Presently pending in the Ordinance Committee of the Quincy City Council In Title 2 Administration & Personnel Add a new chapter:

Chapter 228 Department Of Building, Construction and Maintenance

1. Section 2.28.010 Commissioner – Appointment – Term.

The mayor shall annually on or before the first Monday in February appoint the Commissioner of Building, Construction and Maintenance (hereinafter "commissioner") who shall hold office for one year from the first Monday in February of the year of his appointment or until his successor is appointed. The commissioner shall be a registered professional engineer in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts or shall have a minimum of five years of responsible supervisory experience in the field of construction management.

Section 2.28.020 Commissioner – Duties and Responsibilities

The commissioner shall supervise the construction, alteration, repair, and maintenance of all public buildings, including the Thomas Crane Public Library. Supervision of the construction, alteration, repair, and maintenance of all school buildings shall remain under the control of the school committee, unless pursuant to G.L. chap. 71, sec. 37M the mayor, city council, and school committee agree to place school buildings under the control of the commissioner.

2. Chapter 2.36 of the Quincy Municipal Code is hereby amended by striking out the first paragraph of Section 2.36.030 and inserting in place thereof the following:

The commissioner of public works shall have supervision, direction and control of the construction, alteration, repair, care and lighting of streets, ways, sidewalks and public bridges.

3. Chapter 2.36 of the Quincy Municipal Code is hereby amended by striking out in the last paragraph of Section 2.36.060 the words: "and public facilities"

"To be acted upon by the Quincy City Council at a further date."

CLEANER GREENER Quincy Day was observed by more than 1,500 DPW workers and volunteers who removed some 250 tons of trash, dead branches and other debris from 30 parks, playgrounds, beaches and neighborhood streets.

FURNACE BROOK, a state-owned facility on the Cleaner Greener Quincy cleanup list for the first time, was a particular target of city employees, private contract and volunteers, who attacked it with everything from bare hands to back hoes.

Cleaner, Greener Cleanup Collects Over 250 Tons of Trash

More than 1,500 volunteers teamed with city crews to clean up more than 250 tons of trash, dead branches and other debris across the city during Saturday's annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy Day.

"As always, it was a great day made possible by so many volunteers who truly care about the city," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "I wish to thank everybody who participated."

Koch hosted an appreciated barbecue for volunteers at the Richard J. Koch Park Complex after the clean up.

Volunteers fanned out to more than 30 parks, playgrounds, beaches and neighborhood streets, with city workers providing the tools and picking up the trash collected by volunteers. For the first time, the event focused on the state-owned Furnace Brook, with a full team of Department of Public Works employees, private contractors and volunteers cleaning out the brook of dead trees, refuse and other materials that had built up.

A number of local businesses made significant contributions, including Hannaford Supermarkets, which donated all the food for the afternoon cookout. Other business who donated their services were:

T.C. Healy Company, Sean Farrell Excavation,

Bogan Tree Service, Derbes Construction, Aronson Trucking, North East Material, Native Landscapers, A-

1 Battery, Allied Waste and Chris Pepe Trucking.

"This event would not be possible without the contributions of our local businesses—they always come through and it is a testament to their dedication to our city," Koch said.

Beechwood Seeks Food For Pantries

Beechwood on the Bay has issued an invitation to Quincy residents to drop by and "help us, help others, year 'round" by donating non-perishable foods for distribution to the city's pantries.

This month's donation will be gifted to Interfaith Social Services.

Beechwood collects 52 weeks a year, averaging more than 200 items each week. It is open five days a week from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays the Center is open until 9 p.m.

Square Dedicated For Lt. Thomas Chiminello Army Nurse In Vietnam War 'Bares Her Report'

By TOM HENSHAW

The war in Vietnam has been over for 35 years now but for its veterans, like former Army Nurse Diane Carlson Evans, it has never really ended.

Evans, who served six years in the Army Nurse Corps, including a year in Vietnam, was the guest speaker at the annual Vietnam Veterans Day ceremonies in Quincy.

Rain forced the ceremonies under cover in the North Quincy High School auditorium and away from its usual location under the Clock Tower Memorial at Marina Bay.

The day was dedicated to Lt. Thomas Chiminello, a Quincy boy who died in a helicopter crash in Vietnam. The intersection of Elm Street and Miller Stile Road was designated Lt. Thomas N. Chiminello Square in his honor.

Evans leaned on the eloquence of Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes recalling the Civil War to explain her feelings,

'Would Cost Millions Of Dollars'

Koch Says No Route Change For Concourse

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that he will not seek any changes in design for the Quincy Center Concourse, the cross-town roadway intended to ease traffic congestion in Quincy Center.

"Simply put, the Quincy Center Concourse is too important and too far along to make dramatic changes without serious consequences," said Koch in his formal statement.

"Major changes could cost taxpayers millions of dollars and threaten state and federal money vital to the completion of this roadway project," said Koch.

Current plans for the Concourse involve the taking of nine properties, including Quincy Fair Mall, to complete a four-lane East West passage of roughly four-fifths of a mile from Granite Street to Southern Artery.

Koch had hoped to avoid the complete demolition of Quincy Fair Mall at 1563 Hancock St. as part of the Concourse project. The building, owned by FX Messina Enterprises, currently houses the Registry of Motor Vehicles, several Asian restaurants and a fitness center.

However, Koch announced Tuesday that he has determined that any change to the concourse route would be costly and unreasonable and would have serious consequences.

"Working with our Planning Department, the project's engineers, and outside consultants, we reached a conclusion that altering the route at this point is unreasonable," Koch said after noting that his administration reviewed the project after his election, during the transition period, and for two months into his administration.

"I understand that this administration is not starting the project from scratch, and this specific case requires a degree of flexibility," Koch said, referring to the project design under his predecessor, Mayor William Phelan.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington announced Monday that the City Council will be asked to approve a "taking order" for Quincy Fair Mall at their May 19 meeting. The Concourse plan requires "a total taking of the building and a partial taking of the land, ten percent of the lot area."

Plans involve the taking and demolition of all or part of the following properties: 148 Parkingway, 150 Parkingway, 1586 Hancock St., 1601 Hancock St.,

Special Activities Begin

John Quincy Adams $1 Coin Available Today

Come to the National Park Service Visitors' Center at 1250 Hancock St. today (Thursday) between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. and sample the official John Quincy Adams cookie.

That's only one of the many special events that are planned around the issuance of the $1 coin commemorating John Quincy Adams, the sixth in the Presidential Coin series.

The coin itself will be available on site through an exchange with the Quincy Credit Union and at many banks throughout the city in the days following the issuance.

John Quincy Adams himself, in the person of actor Jim Cooke, will be on hand to greet visitors at the Center and there will be discounted hot dogs from a SirFranks A-lot vehicle.

Gutro Calls Meeting On Proposed Chinese Sports Bar

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro was to hold a neighborhood meeting last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., on an application to locate a Chinese sports bar on Hancock Street.

The application for the 81-seat China Sports Bar and Grill at 671-683 Hancock St. is due to be heard by the Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday, May 20 at 7 p.m. in City Hall.

Gutro said the purpose of the meeting was to allow neighboring residents and business owners to meet with the applicant, hear a brief presentation and have an opportunity to ask questions.

Park Department Employee Charged With Gasoline Theft

Judge Mark Coven, Presiding Justice at Quincy District Court, set a July 15 pre-trial conference for a Park Department employee accused of stealing gasoline from the city's Department of Public Works pumps.

According to court records, Quincy Police charged Mark Buchanan, 48, with two misdemeanor counts of larceny on Monday. Buchanan did not enter a plea and was released on his own recognizance.

"We made it very clear from the beginning of this administration that this kind of behavior will not be tolerated," Mayor Thomas Koch said. "Ninety-nine percent of our workers do a great job, care about the city and truly understand the trust the public places in them."

"We have no place for people who violate that trust," said Koch.

Buchanan who has been employed as a parks' maintenance worker for several years was suspended without pay. His salary is approximately $36,000.

Lt. John McDonough arrested Buchanan last Friday after police, acting on a tip from a Department of Public Works (DPW) employee, conducted an investigation.

City Solicitor James Timmins said his office had been notified by the DPW of suspicious activity.

In previous administrations, Timmins said such a case would have been turned over to a private investigator. However, Timmins said the city received an $11,000 estimate for the work which was done in-house by the Quincy Police Department with videotaping and surveillance.

County Mosquito Spraying To Begin In Quincy May 26

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project will begin the morning application of pesticides during the week of May 26 and continue, weather permitting, until Sept. 30.

Fogging operations will be conducted on Thursday mornings between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. in Quincy, only if mosquito populations warrant an application.

Not all areas of the city will be entirely treated on a given date. If inclement weather occurs (high winds, rain or cold) or equipment fails, the application will be added to the next scheduled day.

The pesticide used will be Anvil, a combination of Sumithrin and Piperonyl Butoxide, applied in low volume sprayers at the rate of one half ounce per acre of finished spray.

Sumithrin breaks down rapidly in the environment and is expected to pose little risk to humans when used in small concentrations, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Residents may call the Project at 781-762-3681 after 3:30 p.m. on Wednesdays to hear a recorded message detailing the streets and areas to be treated on Thursday morning.

State Regulation 333CMR:13:04 provides a method for homeowners to exclude their property from public area-wide pesticide applications.

To have a property excluded from spraying, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at 781-762-3681.

Patrick Files Legislation

Plan Unveiled To Fix Bridges, 3 In Quincy

Gov. Duval Patrick has filed legislation that would accelerate the repair and replacement of some 250 to 300 of the Commonwealth's most neglected bridges, including three in Quincy.

Passage of the bill in some form is virtually assured since it has the enthusiastic support of House Speaker Sal DiMasi, Senate President Therese Murray and State Treasurer Tim Cahill.

Patrick said the nearly $3 billion repair and replacement plan would take eight years, create thousands of construction jobs and save an estimated $1.5 billion in avoided inflation and deferred maintenance costs.

Quincy bridges on the list include:

- The Fore River Bridge, on which reconstruction has been stalled for a couple of years with a temporary bridge carrying Route 3A traffic from Quincy Point to North Weymouth.

- The Neponset River Bridge between North Quincy and Dorchester.

- The Hancock-Sagamore Streets bridge over the MBTA's Red Line in North Quincy. It's due for preservation.

The accelerated program would be financed by using $1.1 billion in grant anticipation notes, which borrow against anticipated future federal funding, and $1.9 billion in bonds to be repaid with existing gas tax revenues.

DiMasi, Murray and Cahill quickly fell in line behind Patrick.

"Repairing and maintaining our infrastructure today will keep costs down and help ensure the safety of those on our roads tomorrow," said Di Masi. "This plan takes a reasoned approach to preserving and improving the road and bridges of the Commonwealth while also aiming to spur job growth."

"The state for too long has avoided doing basic maintenance and preventative work on its bridges, which has accelerated their decline," said Murray. "By taking action now, we can start to make up for decades of neglect and avoid repeating the mistakes of the past."

"Careful financial planning is of the utmost importance to me," added Cahill. "This proposal will allow us to fund transportation projects with transportation dollars in a fiscally responsible manner."

HONORED — Joseph Boyd of Quincy (foreground) was honored at a recent retirement party after serving 38 years in the office of the Norfolk County District Attorney. Three of the four district attorneys he served with, present Dist. Atty. William Keating, Congressman William Delahunt and Atty. George Burke attended. The fourth, Jeffrey Locke, now a judge, had a prior commitment.

City Lagging In Sign-Ups For Quincy Solar Challenge

Quincy is lagging a bit in the campaign to get 150 households and businesses to sign up for National Grid's New England Wind Fund to support local renewable energy by June 30 and win a free solar panel.

While some participating cities and towns, like Somerville and Milton, have reached their goals, Quincy at last count was still about 100 signatures short.

The city joined the plan, known as the "Quincy Solar Challenge," last February with the promise that it could earn a two-kilowatt solar panel for a local school.

Mayor Tom Koch said he has signed up his family for the Challenge and is priori-

JQA's Son And White House Weddings

John Quincy Adams, as just about everyone knows — or should — was the first son of a president to be elected president himself.

But did you know that one of his sons also holds a "first" and unique but lesser known spot in White House history?

John Adams, the second president and John Quincy Adams, the sixth, were the only father and son presidents until George H.W. Bush and George W. Bush.

After the latter's performance in office these near eight years, there must be a lot of people in the country who wish the Adams were still the only father-son presidents.

But what about John Quincy's son?

Well, Tom Henshaw, a colleague and history buff, notes that John Quincy had three sons and:

John Adams, II named for his grandfather, the second president, was the first and so far only son of a president to be married there.

He joins eight daughters of presidents to be married in the White House.

His wedding took place in the Blue Room Feb. 15, 1828. The bride was Mary Catherine Hellen.

She, Henshaw notes, had gone with both of his older brothers, Charles and George.

They must have felt jilted. Both refused to attend the wedding.

The eight daughters of Presidents who were married in the White House:

Maria Monroe, daughter of James Monroe, was the first in 1820. She married Samuel Gouverneur, White House staffer and her first cousin. A rather private affair with only 42 family members and friends invited.

A public reception was held later, hosted by Commodore Stephen Decatur, a Naval Tripoli war hero. He was killed, Henshaw says, in a duel days later.

Elizabeth Tyler, daughter of John Tyler, married William Waller in 1842. She was only 18, and died at age 26 giving birth to her sixth child.

Ellen "Nellie" Grant, daughter of Ulysses Grant, was also 18 when she wed Algernon Sartoris in 1874. They divorced.

If there was "a White House wedding of the century," says Henshaw, it was that of Alice Roosevelt, Theodore Roosevelt's daughter, to Nicholas Longworth, Ohio Republican congressman in 1906.

The Marine Corps band played the grand march, Pope Pius X, the empress of China and the Cuban government sent gifts, Douglas MacArthur was among 12 military aides and eight ushers.

But, Henshaw notes, there were no bridesmaids to take any attention away from Alice.

The event was considered such big news that it filled the entire Page One of the Washington Post the next day.

Woodrow Wilson had two daughters married in the White House: Jessie to Francis Sayre in 1913 and Eleanor to Treasury Secretary William McAdoo in 1914. Eleanor was 25 and McAdoo 55 and a grandfather.

Lyndon Johnson also had White House weddings for two daughters: Luci to Patrick Nugent in 1966 and Lynda Bird to Marine Capt. Charles Robb in 1967. Luci and Patrick divorced 13 years later.

Richard Nixon's daughter, Tricia, and Edward Cox were married in the Rose Garden in 1971.

Jenna Bush, who passed up the White House to marry Henry Hager at the Bush family ranch in Crawford, Tex. last Saturday, is the 22nd child of a sitting president to marry.

Meanwhile, it looks like a long time before another son joins the company of John Adams, II.

JENNA

SPEAKING OF THE White House but not weddings, you've got to give Hillary Clinton credit as a fighter even if she drops out or is knocked out of the presidential race.

The odds are pretty much stacked against her at this writing.

Now, do you think Bill Clinton helped or hurt her more on the campaign trail? Seems one day she says something that boosts her campaign. And next day he comes along and says something to offset it. Or loses his cool.

Don't know, sometimes I think someone should have bought him a ticket on a slow boat to China and let Chelsea take his place campaigning.

But, then again, Hillary shot herself in the foot with that whooper about sniper fire in Bosnia.

She might go down in political history as the only U.S. presidential candidate to lose the White House in Bosnia.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER and former City Clerk John Gillis, seeking re-election, has a fundraiser coming up.

Set for Wednesday, May 21, 7 to 9 p.m. at the Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy. Suggested donation: $100.

GILLIS

CONFESSION: I still get a little misty-eyed whenever I hear Glenn Miller's "Moonlight Serenade," the most popular theme song of the big band era.

And it gets me to thinking-and- longing-for those other great bands. Like Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Harry James, Benny Goodman, Freddy Martin, Duke Ellington, etc.

And wondering how some of the stuff they call music today, ever got such a stronghold.

Sad.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1924 postcard showing the recently built first commercial building on the north corner of Beale and Hancock Streets in Wollaston. In the corner store was Andros Hardware owned by Randall Andros and Harold Snow. The John T. Connor Company had one of their grocery stores on the right. Within a few years the corner store became home to the Beale Street Pharmacy and the remainder of the building was occupied by the F.W. Woolworth 5 & 10 cents store. Woolworth's had entrances on both Beale and Hancock Streets where the awnings are shown here. In the 1980's, this building was destroyed by fire and the present building, home to Papa Gino's, replaced it. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Grateful To Adams Inn For Emergency Shelter

On the afternoon of March 25th a fire broke out at a four family home owned by the Quincy Housing Authority.

It soon became evident that several families would be in need of emergency shelter for several days.

Some time after 4 p.m., a call was placed to the Adams Inn to see if they could be of assistance. Bob Galligan and his staff could not have been more helpful. There was no question that rooms would be available to the displaced families.

The City of Quincy and its residents receive far more benefits from our locally owned and operate 4d businesses than mere tax dollars.

To the owners and employees of the Adams Inn. Thank you for a job well done.

Concerned Over Dissection Of Animals In High Schools

Six million animals are killed for dissection each year in U.S. high school. Many of these animals used for dissection are mistreated during breeding and storage.

Using animals for high school class is unnecessary and cruel for purposes that can be done otherwise, such as virtual dissection. I do think dissection is a good thing when it can potentially lead to new discoveries, but killing animals to be dissected in high schools seems avoidable. Dissection helps students understand the function and relationships of internal organs by seeing the inside of animal first-hand. However, critics of dissection argue that alternatives not only are more humane but also are superior teaching tools.

Being a resident of Quincy for 18 years, I have recently become aware of dissecting in Quincy High School; here they allow students to dissect in their anatomy/physiology classes. However, if students are reluctant to dissect, other options are available. The biology classes use virtual dissection for timely reasons and rates, but don't consider using them in any other classes. After interviewing a current student of n anatomy class, I was informed that the equipment for dissecting is rusty, old, and barely able to use for cutting, therefore making mistakes becomes easier making it harder to understand concepts. If a student can't grasp the concept of a project what is the point in doing it? I feel if dissection is altogether banished at Quincy High many animals' lives will be saved and students might become more intrigued in dissection, and will want to dissect in collage..

Virtual dissection is better for high school students than actual hands on dissection because there is no use for tools saving money and mistakes, and it requires no mess allowing teaches to proceed to any class after dissection. And it also saves many animals from inhumane treatment while still allowing students to learn about animals beyond a textbook. The students are also able to expand their type of animal opposed to just a fetal pig inside a classroom. Dissection is affordable especially if Quincy High already has the program used for Biology classes, and killing millions of animals for high school dissection is cruel and inhumane. I know I would love to spare any animals life, and know that I was a hero at that moment, would you?

Virtual dissection allows students to become more interested in dissection, as well and getting those more prepared for later studies in this course.

Virtual dissection allows students to become more interested in dissection, as well and getting those more prepared for later studies in its course. If the students are still interested in dissection after high school, they will be able to do so in college in the future. QHS should get rid of dissection and focus more on getting students prepared for dissection in later years, and have them knowledgeable on all tyes of animal parts. If QHS focused on virtual dissection students and animals might be better off in the long run.

Council Reluctantly Approves $400,000 For NQHS Annex

By FRANK McCAULEY

The city council has reluctantly approved, by a unanimous vote, the appropriation of $400,000 to build a temporary annex to North Quincy High School on Teals' Pond.

Council President Arthur H. Tobin said after the roll call that the council is "serving notice to the school administration and the mayor that we do not appreciate voting for something we do not want."

Councillors accompanied their affirmative votes on the matter with accusations of "poor planning" and "lack of foresight."

Mayor Walter Hannon praised the council for a "tough decision."

HOSPITAL EMPLOYEES PICKET CITY HALL ON CONTRACT DISPUTE

Some 75 Quincy City Hospital employees picketed City Hall during Monday night's Council meeting, to bring attention to their contract fight.

The workers, some of whom carried signs charging that the city is "unfair," paraded in front of the building from 7-9 p.m.

George E. Harvey, president of Local 1139, representing DPW and non-professional hospital workers, said the union has been trying to get the city to negotiate a new contract for three or four months.

Union officials charge "unfair discrimination in the granting of raises to 'a select few, including members of the Mayor's staff' while denying the union increases."

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

QCU PROMOTES LITERACY – Celebrating the importance of reading in the lives of children, Quincy Credit Union recently participated in the 8th Annual Children's Book Drive, in conjunction with Massachusetts Credit Union League and Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless. Many new and used books were collected through the generous donations of QCU members and staff, including Maura Gilmartin (above), the Credit Union's marketing coordinator. The books will be distributed to Cradles to Crayons in Quincy to benefit local children. Last year, Massachusetts Credit Union League and 47 credit unions participated in this month-long community event and distributed 20,570 books to non-profit agencies throughout the Commonwealth.

Rick Goldin's Children Show At Beechwood Center May 29

Children's entertainer Rick Goldin will return to Beechwood On The Bay, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy, for a performance, Thursday, May 29 at 3:30 p.m.

"He's back by popular demand," said Sharron Beals, Executive director of the community center.

"Children love his live performances because they get to sing, dance and jump along with Rick and his singing animal puppets, Henry The Horse, Quackleberry Duck and others," said Amy Drinkwater, Music School Coordinator.

Drinkwater noted that Goldin's lively, interactive and humorous children's shows have made him one of the most popular children's entertainers in New England.

Goldin's latest recording, "I Like to Read," recently received a Parents' Choice Recommended Award and features songs about books, libraries and learning to read.

He has been entertaining children at live performances and through recordings since RICK GOLDIN and his puppet friend Quackleberry Duck will appear at Beechwood on the Bay Thursday, May 29 at 3:30 p.m.

1988. He presents over 150 shows a year at schools, libraries, concerts, community and family events.

The concert is primarily planned for Beechwood's preschool families and former students. A limited number of seats will be open to the public.

Call 617-471-5712 for more information.

Video Presentation May 22 At Thomas Crane Library

A free screening of the award-winning documentary video "Turning Point: The Making of Dance of the Midnight Moon" will be shown Thursday, May 22 at 7 p.m., at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

In the 51-minute video, Michael Duggan shares his experience and acknowledges how others helped him follow his passion and make his dream a reality.

The video was directed by Mark Crosby, Quincy Access Television, who won first place in the Alliance for Community Media's Music Video Award Category, and first place in the Northeast Region's Documentary Profile Award Category in 2006.

Wollaston Gardeners In Museum Exhibit

Cynthia Lewis and Pat Artis of the Wollaston Garden Club recently participated in the annual "Art in Bloom" exhibition at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

They contributed a floral design that interpreted a "death mask" from the Congo region of Africa, a serene, funeral arrangement of white calla lilies, shiny monstera leaves, bear grass and curly willow.

The five-day event, which challenges gardeners to create floral interpretations of art, is the biggest fundraiser for the Museum and draws thousands of visitors.

Orange Flourless Chocolate Cake

Imagine a flourless chocolate cake! Well I was so excited recently when I found one.

Some people are allergic to foods that contain flour. Our daughter Suzie is one of them. Now when she comes to dinner, I can make a dessert that she can enjoy along with everyone else.

This recipe is for an orange flavored one.
ORANGE FLOURLESS CHOCOLATE CAKE

6 ounces bittersweet chocolate, roughly chopped
1 1/2 sticks unsalted butter
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar (I use one cup) the zest of one large orange
4 eggs plus 2 large egg yolks
1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder powdered sugar for dusting vanilla ice cream (optional)

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Butter and flour a 10-inch round cake pan.

Melt the chocolate in a metal bowl set over a saucepan of simmering water. Stir the butter into the chocolate until melted and smooth.

Remove the bowl from the pan and add the sugar and orange zest into the chocolate mixture. Add the eggs and yolks and whisk well.

Sift the cocoa powder over the chocolate mixture and whisk the batter until smooth. Pour the batter into the baking pan and bake from 35 to 40 minutes or until the top has formed a good crust. The crust makes this cake so unique. Keep the cake in the baking pan and place it on a rack for 10 minutes. Then invert the cake onto a serving platter.

Dust with powdered sugar and serve with ice cream if desired. Unbelievable, especially for all you chocolate lovers.

Classic Homes Real Estate Celebrates 20th Anniversary!

Quincy—Classic Homes Real Estate, one of the South Shore's Premier Service Real Estate providers, is proudly celebrating its 20th anniversary!

"Helping the residents of the South Shore with their real estate needs for 20 years has been very gratifying and fulfilling" said Barry Rabinovitz, President of Classic Homes Real Estate.

First opened in May, 1988 with partner Sylvia Roffo (now retired), Classic Homes Real Estate has always had 3 distinct departments—residential Sales, Rentals, and Property Management. Mr. Rabinovitz explains, "Since we first started, we've always been a full-service real estate firm with expertise in all 3 areas of service. Whatever real estate needs someone may have, we can help them. Each department actually helps the others and has allowed us to weather the ups and downs of this very challenging industry. Investing in real estate is one of the most important opportunities that we Americans have to create wealth and increase our net worth."

For many years the company has been located on Hancock Street, Quincy in the center of the Wollaston business district. Two years ago, they purchased a prime corner across from the Post Office, Mr. Rabinovitz goes on to add... "We're thrilled with our location and the convenience of our parking lot! This allows us to continue to service our clients from a comfortable home base around the corner and gives us continuity. We're extremely proud of what our firm has achieved and look forward to many more years of helping people with their real estate needs and investments and giving them the personal service they deserve." Later adding, "...I want to personally thank the public for their support and in particular, our clients for their continued loyalty."

consumers that all start with some unique systems that they've developed during their 20 years including some of the most powerful on-line internet and web marketing in the area.

Since 1988, their exceptional reputation has been due to their commitment to deliver value to their clients and relieve the stress of buying, selling, or renting a home. Independently owned and operated, the company provides premier customer service in the purchase, sale, rental, and property management of residential real estate and investments in the Quincy & South Shore area. Located at 12 Beach Street, Quincy, MA, 02170, they can be contacted at 617-328-5800 & www.classichomesre.com.

Fundraising Celebration May 21 Quincy College To Mark Its First Half Century

Quincy College will hold a fundraising celebration of its 50th anniversary Wednesday, May 21, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Tickets to the celebration, which includes hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar, are $50 per person.

Since its inception as a junior college division of the Quincy Public Schools in 1958, at least 87,817 students have taken classes at the Coddington Street college and at least 10,058 have graduated.

A total of 1,345 fulltime students and 2,300 parttimers are matriculated at the college for the 2007-08 academic year.

The school has a faculty of 39 fulltime professors and instructors, four parttime and 245 adjuncts. Management, clerical, maintenance and other professionals total 57 fulltime and 14 parttime.

Nursing pins have been awarded to 609 practical nurse graduates and 1,132 registered nurse grads.

The College has established a baccalaureate completion program with Cambridge College and has agreements with colleges across the country to accept their credits for transfer, including:

UMass-Boston, UMass-Dartmouth, Bridgewater State College, Curry College, Northeastern University and Suffolk University.

tizing the environment and a clean economy for Quincy.

"I'm proud to support the Commonwealth Solar Challenge." It is a great way to support renewable energy and this program is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the volunteers who make it work."

The city has created a Wind Committee to look at opportunities to site wind facilities in Quincy and has joined Local Governments for Sustainability (ICLEI) and signed a Declaration on Climate Change.

Larry Chretien, executive director of Mass Energy, urged residents to support the Quincy Solar Challenge "by making a tax-deductible $5 a month contribution or $100 donation to New England Wind Fund."

Quincy residents can sign up by calling 617-524-3950 for information.

Add inexpensive decals, magnets, patches and pins along with free popcorn and John Quincy Adams cookies and you have a celebration worthy of the sixth president of the United States.

A number of other events and promotions are planned for the rest of the summer, culminating in John Quincy Adams Day on July 11 (his birthday) by proclamation of Mayor Tom Koch.

Some of the promotions include:

- A $1 cup of chowder at the Fox & Hound Restaurant, 125 Sea St., with the use of a JQ Adams coin.

- Commemorative coin sets for sale and coin holders from the US Mint for free at Quincy 2000/Discover Quincy, 1250 Hancock St.

- A $1 coin given for all purchases at Grandasia Bridal & Fashion, 663 Hancock St.

Banks offering to exchange for the $1 coin include South Shore Savings Bank, Sovereign Bank, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Eastern Bank, South Coastal Bank and Quincy Credit Union.

The Presidential Coin series issues four coins a year honoring the presidents in the order in which they occupied to office. The JQ Adams coin is the second released in 2008 following James Monroe.

Last year, his father, John Adams, another Quincy boy who became the second president, was so honored along with George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison.

The events and programs centered around the John Quincy Adams coin are sponsored by Mayor Koch, the Adams National Historical Park, the Patriot Ledger, Discover Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

Bellotti, Verizon Wireless In Cell Phone Partnership To Help Stop Domestic Violence

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti has joined with Verizon Wireless in a program to help save the lives of domestic violence victims by providing them with free cell phones, which they can use to help them avoid or escape dangerous situations.

Bellotti's Victims Services Unit collected approximately 300 old cell phones from the Sheriff's Office staff members and turned them over to Verizon Wireless. Verizon is in the process of sending out 150 brand new phones that will be given to police departments and domestic violence shelters for distribution to victims throughout Norfolk County.

"This program is so important because sometimes a phone call to police or an appropriate agency can mean the difference between life and death," Bellotti said. "The victims can use these phones to protect themselves in a variety of ways from finding safer housing to arranging meetings with advocates and speaking with law enforcement agencies."

Verizon Wireless Public Relations Manager Michael Murphy said, "We deeply appreciate all of support that New Englanders have given to the HopeLine cell phone recycling program on behalf of local domestic violence prevention agencies."

SECONDARY LUNCH MENU

Monday, May 19

Bagel pizza, tossed salad, fresh fruit or juice.

Tuesday, May 20

Roast turkey with gravy, mashed potatoes, vegetable, cranberry sauce, dinner roll.

Wednesday, May 21

Pork sloppy jo on a bulky roll, corn niblets, fruit gelatin.

Thursday, May 22

Grilled hot dog on a bun, baked beans, coleslaw.

Friday, May 23

Breaded turkey cutlet, lettuce and tomato on a French roll, potato wedges, fresh fruit or fruit juice.

NORFOLK COUNTY SHERIFF Michael Bellotti (right) has joined with Verizon Wireless in a program to help save the lives of domestic violence victims by providing them with free cell phones. With Sheriff Bellotti is Michael DesRochers, the government account manager for Verizon Wireless. He coordinates the Hopeline program that donates cell phones for domestic violence victims.

"We are reminded that cell phone recycling can benefit the environment and survivors of domestic violence as they transition out of violent situations."

Bellotti said there are numerous instances in which victims of domestic violence have used their cell phones to report threats of violence against them, and those victims have received help from law enforcement authorities.

The new phones provided by Verizon Wireless come with 3,000 minutes of usage free-of-charge. They also are pre-programmed with a toll-free nationwide domestic violence help line.

Bellotti's Victim Service Unit will distribute the phones as they are needed and can reapply to Verizon Wireless for 150 more after six months.

Koch Says No Route Change For Concourse

1563-1597 Hancock St., 1570 Hancock St., 1596-1602 Hancock St., 11 Revere Rd. and 14 Revere Rd. Buildings at 148 Parkway and 11 Revere Rd have already been demolished; 14 Revere Rd. is expected to be leveled this summer.

Phase 1 of the project is already completed and allows a cut-through from Granite Street to Burgin Parkway. Demolition for Phase 2, the Revere Road or Hancock Crossing section, began last spring and additional land-takings and demolitions are scheduled on Revere Road. Phase 3 involves roadwork on McGrath Highway.

According to Harrington, the plans and funding for the Concourse from the federal government, the state and the city are in place.

"The City has adequate funding in place for the design, acquisition, relocation and demolition activities of the Quincy Center Concourse projects," Harrington reported, citing state and city grants and the city's $30 million redevelopment authorization.

Harrington told the City Council's Public Service Committee that Phase 3, the McGrath Highway portion, will be advertised for bid again this summer. Harrington said that the original bidder from 2007 had withdrawn his bid causing a delay and the need for extensions from state agencies.

In addition, Harrington said that National Grid upgraded its facilities on McGrath Highway, without notice to the city. That utility work required additional redesign and new state approvals.

Construction of Phase 2, labeled "Hancock Street Crossing," involves the taking of nine properties, including the Quincy Fair Mall and much of that portion will be covered by Mass Highway.

Six of those properties have already been acquired, according to Harrington and nine of the ten tenants have vacated and received relocation benefits. Seven of the ten businesses have been relocated to sites in Quincy.

As for Quincy Fair Mall, Harrington said that demolition of Quincy Fair

Mall requires an engineering study, as the building is not a single demolition project but has construction sections of wood, concrete and steel.

Among the mall's current tenants are the state Registry of Motor Vehicles, several Asian restaurants and a fitness center.

"These people have had a lot of warning," said Harrington who also described recent delays due to a citizen charge that the concourse plan impacted an historic district.

"I have to respond to federal officials," said Harrington, adding, "whatever information they have is inaccurate."

Harrington said that none of the demolitions or planned demolitions "meet historic conditions."

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis requested an update on the Concourse by the Downtown and Economic Growth Committee.

The committee is chaired by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly with Vice Chairman, Councillor John Keenan and members Councillor Joseph Finn, Councillor Michael McFarland and Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro.

Dr. Franklin Cook Will Speak At Eastern Nazarene Graduation

Dr. Franklin Cook will speak Saturday, May 17, at 2:30 p.m. at Eastern Nazarene College when 220 graduates receive their bachelor's and master's degrees at commencement exercises on the college's front lawn.

Dr. Cook has written a number of books and was founding editor of Holiness Today, the official periodical of the Church of the Nazarene.

His work as a pastor in California was followed by administrative positions in the Department of World

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Thank You

Often times in the afternoon, I'll return to the office by a deliberate route to search out propane and charcoal grills on apartment building balconies.

I'll return in various ways attempting to monitor our progress at having them removed from various locations. If I find one, once in the office, I'll contact the building owner and write an order for their removal.

Fourteen years ago, I didn't know where to begin with out attempts at having them removed where the problem seemed insurmountable. There were too many at too many locations.

Today, I'm taking this moment to thank you for responding to our efforts and urgings, where the evidence now indicates that the majority have been removed, while some remain. We've made tremendous progress through your help and cooperation. I know that there are now locations where tenant agreements prohibit their use and condo bylaws specify that propane and charcoal grills cannot be used on above grade balconies. Over the years we have used various methods to gain compliance while evidence now indicates our progress. Meanwhile our efforts will continue.

The largest loss fire within our most recent history occurred when a fire started on a balcony of an apartment building it had devastating consequences and indicates what can happen when access limitations and height complicate suppression efforts. Our on going attempts at grill removal will continue in an effort to prevent a similar incident, while I'm writing to convey our gratitude for your ongoing cooperation in assisting us to do so. Thank you. Now to another issue.

I've mentioned our incidents through the winter months, which still indicate a fair amount of calls for malfunctioning heating systems. These incidents typically involve oil burners, which have not been routinely maintained. I'm writing to reiterate the importance of yearly maintenance on these burners when fuel line filters and nozzles are replaced and electrodes are cleaned and adjusted. This yearly preventative maintenance can avoid the nuisance of a smoke filled basement or worse, caused by a delayed ignition, or the inconvenience at the loss of heat until an emergency call to your technician can correct the problem. Routine, yearly maintenance on our oil burner is encouraged and can avoid a great deal of inconvenience.

So thank you for your cooperation with our ongoing efforts to remove these grills from balconies, while I'm writing to encourage and remind those of you who have oil fired heating systems to perform routine maintenance and avoid the inconvenience and hazard of a delayed ignition.

Our work continues, while of our success depends on our efforts and your cooperation. We appreciate and thank you for it.

Boars Nest Specialty Sandwiches Celebrates New Ownership

Boars Nest Specialty Sandwiches, located at 1429 Hancock St., Quincy Center, recently celebrated its new ownership with a ribbon cutting ceremony.

The Boars Nest, which has been serving great sandwiches to the Quincy area for over a year now, celebrated its new look under new owner, Dave Charbonneau. He said he is excited to take over such a great "deli" and pledges he will continue to offer fast, friendly service and great food at affordable prices.

The Boars Nest is open from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday thru Friday and 9 a.m. to 2pm on Saturdays. They offer their own specialty sandwiches, using premium Boar's Head meats, but are more than happy to cater to anyone's creative genius. In addition to great tasting quality sandwiches they offer soups, salads and several "home cooked" daily specials such as steak tips, mac & cheese, shepherd's pie, and baked daddock.

Dave Charbonneau thanks customers and the community for their patronage and support. To check out the full menu stop in or go online to www.boarsnestdeli.com. The Boars Nest also offers corporate catering and delivery.

Braintree Cooperative Bank, Arc Of South Shore Expand Savings Makes Cents Program

Braintree Cooperative Bank, the ARC of the South Shore, and State Treasurer Timothy Cahill's Office recently kicked off their new financial literacy program for young adults with developmental disabilities.

Guest speakers included Mike Wilcox of Braintree Cooperative Bank; Peter Forman, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce; Kate Hanley of the Arc of the South Shore and Leanne Martin from the State Treasurer's Office.

The class runs Monday nights from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. for eight weeks at the Arc of the South Shore headquarters, 371 River St. in North Weymouth.

Savings Makes Cents is a school banking program run by Treasurer Timothy Cahill's Financial Education Department. It is run in elementary schools across the state.

The program teaches participants fundamental and necessary money management skills. Braintree Cooperative is helping to expand this program and to create a pilot that may be offered at other ARC sites across Massachusetts.

Army Nurse In Vietnam War 'Bares Her Report'

and those of many other Vietnam veterans, about the unpopular war:

"We have shared the incommunicable experience of war. We have felt, we still feel, the passion of life to its top . . . In our youth, our hearts were touched with fire.

"He also said, 'It is for us to bare the report to those who come after us.'

"His words 'bare the report' stung and burned into my soul."

Evans, who shared a hootch, or hut, with Chiminello's sister, Barbara, and another nurse, Edie McCoy Meeks, at the 71st Evacuation Hospital in Pleiku, "bared her report" on stage in North Quincy High School.

"Barbara, Edie and I never talked about the war," she said. "We didn't cry about, console, or commiserate. We distanced ourselves from one another. We, and thousands of our brothers and sisters of the war, distanced ourselves from our memories, from our hearts breaking even more.

"We let the war come and go — on our own terms. Then with the dedication of memorials, veterans came together again — to hug, to cry and to 'bare report.' For we had lived and loved profoundly during that incommunicable experience of war. We felt then the passion of life at its top. Our hearts were touched with fire.

"The fire smoldered. We got on with our lives; we did well — or as well as we could. Many married, had children, and had good jobs, wonderful friends. There was fulfillment, but there was something missing. We didn't feel life to the top."

Evans supplied the missing ingredient in her own life by founding the Vietnam Women's Memorial Project, statues in bronze of three nurses and a wounded soldier situated some 100 yards from the Vietnam Memorial Wall in Washington.

"The bronze nurse tending to the wounded soldier is facing the apex of the Wall, she is Barb holding Tom, she is Edie holding thousands of other Tommys; the standing woman is looking for Tom flying his Dust Off (helicopter) with casualties. The kneeling woman rests from days of unending work, and prays for Tommy's family," said Evans.

"Vietnam was a time when most of us knew that 'all we had was each other and we were there to get each other out alive.' The moral dilemma of the war — the right or wrong of it — was not something we could change. We couldn't end the war.

DIANE EVANS, a former Army Nurse who served in Vietnam, was guest speaker at the Vietnam Veteran Day observance at the North Quincy High School auditorium.

MAYOR TOM KOCH is backed by a color guard from the North Quincy High School Air Force Junior ROTC as he greets the Vietnam veterans to the city.

LT. COL. ORSON SWINDLE, USMC Retired, a prisoner of war in Vietnam for more than seven years, speaks at ceremonies at North Quincy High School.

"But what we could do — the one right thing, while some of us doubted our government and military strategy — was to get each other home alive. Tommy lives on in the living — the people he saved through his bravery and skilled efforts.

"When the last flag-draped coffin returns home, the dust has settled and memories begin to fade veterans pick up the pieces and build memorials like this one. 'Baring the report' is the final responsibility we have to one another."

Dignitary speaker at the ceremony was Joseph McCain, USN, brother of John McCain, the presidential candidate.

MNG Brigadier Generals Thomas Sellars and Leonid E. Kondratiuk presented to the Chiminello family the helmet worn by their son, Tom, who was 25 and leading a medical recovery mission in an unarmed Med-Vac helicopter in 1967 when he went down.

SOLOIST William Whitman is backed by a huge American flag as he sings 'God Bless America' at the Vietnam Day ceremonies at North Quincy High School.

Bank Of Canton Closes Loan Under Foreclosure Prevention Program

The Bank of Canton has closed its first loan under the MassHousing Home Saver Foreclosure Prevention Program, announces George DeMello, senior vice president of Residential Lending.

MassHousing implemented the Home Saver Foreclosure Prevention Program at the beginning of the year in an effort to confront the foreclosure crisis. Bank of Canton began participating in the program at the beginning of March. Under the program, eligible participants will go through a mandatory counseling program to evaluate the situation before the loan is closed.

"Home Saver borrowers are grateful to know there is a program out there designed to help people in their situation," said John Jones, regional lending manager at the Bank of Canton. "It was very gratifying to know this loan was going to assist a family in need. The Bank hopes to close more loans under this new program in the future and help more families alleviate their financial burdens."

For more information or to find out whether you are eligible for this program contact Bank of Canton at 888-828-1690 or contact the Homeownership Preservation Foundation at 888-995-4673.

Bank of Canton has branches in Brookline, Canton, Quincy, Randolph and Hyannis, and a Mortgage Center in Auburn, and lends throughout Massachusetts. Established in 1835, Bank of Canton is a Massachusetts-chartered mutual savings bank that offers its consumer, business and institutional customer's access to a full array of deposit, loan, investment and convenience service options.

Home Insulation

Q. The bottom floor of my two-story house has concrete blocks on the outside. My utilities are running to $500 a month. How can I fix the insulation problem on the first floor?

A. Insulation can be a tricky issue. The concrete foundation itself may not be the big problem (and I don't think that it is). Even though it feels cold to the touch, a properly insulated home should not lose too much heat through the concrete blocks.

An energy audit is one low-cost way to find out where your home is leaking heat. Most electric companies offer a free or low-cost audit, so call your electric company to find out more.

Next, make sure the entire home's insulation is in good shape and at the proper rating for your region. The Department of Energy recommends different levels of insulation thickness depending on the type of insulation and its location in the house. You can find more information about "R-ratings" at its Web site, <http://www1.eere.energy.gov/consumer/tips/insulation.html>.

Often, an insulation contractor will need to be brought in to analyze a home's current insulation and recommend improvements. Do read the insulation Web page to at least get an idea of the insulation a home needs, so you can ask in-depth questions during the contractor's analysis. Always get a written estimate of recommended repairs, and approve it before the contractor starts any work.

You also can do a few things on your own to improve year-round energy efficiency. Insulate hot and cold water pipes in crawlspaces and basements (pipe insulation is available at home improvement stores). Change the furnace filter monthly in winter. And have a programmable thermostat installed in your home — it can be set to automatically turn down the heat or air conditioning when no one is at home.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homesur2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Decorating Trends Making Your Home Clutter-Free

(NAPS) — Though Americans know urban sprawl when they see it, many don't recognize it in their own homes, often cluttered with unnecessary furniture and odds and ends stored everywhere.

According to organizing expert Iyna Bort Caruso, author of "The Everything Home Storage Solutions Book," the best time to put your home in order is right now.

The good news is that, these days, solutions to contain the sprawl are as functional as they are stylish.

But you do need a game plan. "Take inventory of each room of your home," Caruso suggests. "Toss out or donate rarely used items and then find a place for orphan essentials that don't have a dedicated home. That way, you'll spend less time hunting things down in places they don't belong."

Clutter Busters

Clutter busters love versatile pieces that can be mixed and matched to suit the need. For example, JCPenney's modular storage units are individual drawers, shelves and cubes that can be combined in unlimited ways. These sturdy any-room pieces, in maple or white, fit effortlessly from room to room and job to job.

Double-duty furniture is an ideal solution to make the most of your space, especially when square footage is limited. The JCPenney Elsa Bed Bench by Studio is a chic way to transform an entryway or bedroom with added seating and storage. It has a flip-up seat with generous storage space inside.

For the living room or den, the Treasures Coffee Table is an ideal complement to any traditional décor, with its sturdy plank top and distressed pine or white finish. Less is more with a Custom Cube Storage Ottoman, hand sewn and upholstered in a choice of four fabrics. The ottoman can be used as seating, a small table or storage for books, magazines, toys or other odds and ends that need to be stashed away.

Kids' Rooms and Playrooms

Kids' rooms and playrooms are always whirlwinds of activity. To contain the games, toys and homework projects, keep it simple and keep it fun. At JCPenney, for example, you can find a Locker Storage Collection that's whimsical yet practical. A red-panel locker in a silver finish comes with a removable hanger rod and shelf for ample storage. The companion four-drawer dresser is cleverly designed to allow multiple units to seamlessly blend side by side.

"When we streamline our living space by purging the clutter, we transform our homes into sanctuaries of order and calm," says Caruso. "The ripple effect is astounding."

From The Better Business Bureau

Advice On Hiring Contractors For Home Improvements, Remodeling

With the National Association of Realtors' reporting current pending home sales down 21.4 percent from the first quarter of 2007, and Standard & Poor's citing the steepest decline in home values in the 20-year history of its housing index, many homeowners are now choosing to remodel their current home rather than selling in an effort to hold home values in the turbulent U.S. housing market.

To execute the strategy successfully, most projects require professional help and Better Business Bureau (BBB) is offering advice and guidance on finding trustworthy contractors who can help make the strategy pay off.

"Homeowners often don't know where to begin looking for reliable help for home improvement projects, but finding a trustworthy contractor doesn't have to be a difficult task," said Paula Fleming, vice president of communications and marketing for BBB. "While asking friends and family for references is advised, homeowners can start their research easily and quickly online with free BBB Reliability Reports™ that provide an unbiased assessment on many types of contractors operating in their community."

For homeowners looking to make renovations, BBB offers the following advice on how to choose a contractor they can trust:

Start with trust

Most homeowners have heard of, and in some cases experienced, shady contractors that ask for payment up front, perform shoddy work, and then refuse refunds or redress of issues. BBB encourages homeowners to do their homework - starting online at bbb.org where they can search BBB's online directory for BBB-accredited contractors and remodeling businesses in their area.

Get references

BBB recommends homeowners ask all contractors for local references and then take the next step by finding out if those customers were satisfied with the contractor's work. If possible, homeowners should visit and inspect completed projects.

Ask the experts

BBB advises that homeowners find out if a contractor is a member of a professional association which has standards or a code of ethics. All BBB Accredited Businesses have agreed to uphold BBB standards for ethics in the marketplace. Homeowners can also check with BBB to learn how long a contractor has been in business and if the firm has been responsive to any complaints filed with BBB.

Compare costs

Homeowners should solicit at least three bids from prospective contractors based upon the same building specifications, materials, labor and time needed to complete the project. Homeowners need to discuss bids in detail with each contractor, making certain they understand the reasons for any variations in the prices and not automatically making a decision based on lowest price. Cost differences may include issues such as quality of materials, craftsmanship and subcontracting for specialized labor.

Check on insurance

BBB reminds homeowners to ask contractors if the company is insured against claims covering worker's compensation, property damage and personal liability in case of accidents. Further, BBB advises people to then call to verify the contractor's insurance coverage after obtaining the name of the carrier and agency.

Are they bonded/licensed?

Contractors must typically meet licensing and bonding requirements set by the state, county or city housing authority. Homeowners should confirm the contractor meets all requirements and can legally operate in the state.

Given the tough housing market, it's important that homeowners make smart, informed decision affecting their most valuable investment - their homes. For advice they can trust on finding reliable professionals to help with home improvement and remodeling projects, homeowners can turn to bbb.org.

Shave Dollars Off Your Grocery Bill

The Department of Labor says that it now costs more than $700 per month to feed the average family — and costs are still rising.

Here are some ways to shave dollars off your grocery bill:

- Make a list, and stick to it. Set a not-to-exceed dollar amount if you spot genuinely good bargains while you shop.

- Eat before you go. Shopping on a full stomach will cut down on impulse purchases.

- Get in, get out. The longer you're in a store, the more you're going to spend. Look down each aisle. If you don't need anything in that aisle, don't go down it.

- Check the unit pricing on everything you buy. A bigger package isn't necessarily cheaper. With meats, check the cut: A more expensive piece of lean meat might be a better deal if you're not paying for the bone.

- Buy store brands for a week and see if you can tell the difference.

- Cut down on convenience foods as much as possible. Time is a consideration for most people, but on a Friday night you can save more than $10 by making your own pizza and making popcorn the old fashioned way on the stove.

- Buy as little packaging as possible. Individually wrapped sliced cheese and yogurt in small containers cost more.

- Select cheaper cuts of meat that can be tenderized in a crockpot. Make extra and freeze it.

- Buy whole chickens instead of parts and do the cutting yourself.

- Check the per-pound cost of fruits and vegetables like apples and potatoes. You might get a better deal if you select each one instead of grabbing a large bag that might end up going to waste.

- Buy plain rice, pasta and cereals and add your own spices or sweeteners.

- Cut down on the number of trips to the store. Not only will you save gas, but you'll save on impulse purchases.

- Compare sales flyers for local grocery stores. In spite of gas costs, it might pay to go to more than one store to take advantage of sales.

- Consider whether it's worthwhile to buy a small freezer to stock up on sales or extra meals you've made.

- Price fruits and vegetables in season at your local farmers market and compare to store prices.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, May 3, at approximately 6:45 a.m., Officers Charles Landry and James Parisi were dispatched to 530 Willard St. for a family disturbance.

Upon arrival, the officers met with the victim who stated that she had an argument with her ex-boyfriend, who then left but came back and tried to gain entry to her apartment, but the door was locked. She said he then kicked the door numerous times, and then fled out of the apartment building.

Officer Landry had previous knowledge of a problem because he was at the same building at 3:30 a.m. for a male screaming and banging on doors. The officers were unable to locate anyone at the time. The victim said that the suspect had a friend who lived a few buildings away and was probably hiding there.

Officer Parisi proceeded to that location to look for the suspect while Officer Landry interviewed the victim. She said that the suspect was kicking and banging on her apartment door and when she slightly opened the door, he said that he had a gun and was going to kill her if she did not let him in. She said she saw the suspect reach toward the small of his back with his right hand.

The victim believed that the suspect was going for the gun so, fearing for her safety and the safety of her two young children, she slammed the door and locked it. The victim stated that she called the police because the suspect is "crazy." Officer Landry immediately informed Officer Parisi that the suspect could have a firearm.

Officer Jay Grazioso arrived on scene to help search for the suspect. The victim said she did not call the police earlier because the suspect left.

The door to the victim's apartment was solid wood with a dead bolt lock. The door had deep black scuffmarks on the lower area of the door. These scuff marks were consistent with someone kicking the door. There were paint chips at the base of the door. The door had a long vertical crack running from the dead bolt and the strike plate was loose, with both screws stripped, allowing the faceplate of the dead bolt to move.

With the door locked, it had some movement in it, which the victim assured the Officer was new damage.

Meanwhile, Officer Parisi spotted the suspect in the doorway of an apartment complex on Willard Street. He called for assistance and Officers Grazioso and Landry responded. The suspect was taken into custody without incident, handcuffed and searched for weapons.

After being read Miranda rights, the suspect agreed to talk about the incident. He initially denied being at the apartment, and then accused the victim of lying. When asked why he kicked his girlfriend's door, he again denied being there, but when asked about having a gun, the suspect denied having a weapon, but confessed, "O.K. I kicked the door." The suspect was placed in a cruiser and the odor of alcohol was strong.

Asked how much he had to drink, the suspect kept trying to say that he was a good guy and did nothing wrong. There was no weapon found on or near the suspect.

Photos of the deep black marks on the apartment door and the damage to the door and the dead bolt were taken as evidence. In further conversation with the victim, she revealed that she had two Restraining Orders against the suspect in the past and he violated both of them. The victim was asked if she wanted an Emergency Restraining Order and she responded that the suspect "is not scared of the cops and he doesn't care if there is a Restraining Order against him."

The officer again asked the victim and she said that she would go to court on her own on Monday. The victim was concerned that the suspect would get out of jail before Monday. The officer told her that he would request high bail. The victim stated that the suspect had a key to the front door of the apartment building and she wanted it taken away from him.

The key was taken from the suspect's property and returned to the victim. Bail was requested at $10,000.00 due to the two children being inside the apartment during

Preventing Premature Aging And Skin Damage

(NAPS) - Without sun protection, just a few minutes of daily sun exposure over time can cause noticeable changes in how skin looks and feels.

In fact, daily incidental sun exposure can cause fine lines, wrinkles and even sun damage to the skin. Fortunately, protecting your skin from sun damage may require only a few simple changes.

Here are a few tips to help:

- Avoid direct sun by sitting in the shade.
- Wear protecting clothing when possible, such as long sleeves and pants.
- Wear a hat.
- Avoid sunlight during peak hours.

Always wear a face lotion and a body lotion with SPF.

Damaging UV rays place skin at constant risk for developing fine lines, wrinkles and sun spots, often causing skin to appear dry, rough and aged. Exposure to UV rays can also raise your risk of skin cancer.

"Studies have shown that the daily use of SPF 15 sunscreen decreases the risk of squamous cell skin cancer by 40 percent," says Dr. Ken Howe, consulting dermatologist for Lubriderm.

It's very well known that people should wear a face lotion with SPF. However, protecting the body's skin from sun exposure is often forgotten. To make things simple, incorporate a body moisturizer with SPF into daily beauty routines.

Howe recommends wearing a two-in-one sunscreen and moisturizer, such as Lubriderm Daily Moisture with SPF 15 Lotion. Adds Howe, "It provides the necessary broad-spectrum protection in a formulation that has the cosmetic aesthetics and convenience of use patients demand in a daily product."

The lotion, developed by dermatologists, is a light, non-greasy and quick-absorbing body moisturizer that feels just like non-SPF lotions.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PARCHED MOUTH

Xerostomia, the medical term for "dry mouth," may be a common problem among adults, but it is not a normal by-product of aging. Research has shown that adults and children produce similar amounts of saliva, a shortage of which causes a dry, unpleasant-tasting effect. Dry mouth can be a problem for those with Sjogren's syndrome, systemic lupus, diabetes, and other immune diseases. In addition, dry mouth may be caused by a large number of medications, both prescription and over-the-counter. Included in these medications are antihistamines, blood-pressure drugs, and antidepressants. Whatever the cause of dry mouth is, it must be treated. Otherwise, too little saliva circulating in the mouth can lead to tooth decay.

Dry mouth treatment will depend on what is causing the problem. If you think you have dry mouth, see us. We can try to determine what is causing your dry mouth and can take care of all your dental needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where all the members of our staff have dedicated to serving you - we will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Our concern is your comfort and confidence - our goal is to help preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Adequate saliva neutralizes destructive acids produced by plaque and helps provide a protective mineral barrier on the surface of the teeth.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Taking advice isn't always easy for self-assured Rams and Ewes who think they know what's best. But it wouldn't hurt to listen to what close colleagues have to say.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You know how to balance life's practical aspects with the poetic. This gives you a special edge this week in both your professional endeavors and your personal life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Focus on keeping a balance between your home-related activities and your workplace responsibilities. Be mindful of both without obsessing over one or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change in plans is likely as you discover more facts about a possible commitment. Continue to ask questions and, if you're not sure about the answers, demand proof.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be careful not to let that Leonine pride keep you from seeking wise, experienced counsel before making an important decision. A family member once again seeks your help.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That surge of Virgo energy drives you to take on more work assignments. Be careful you don't overdo it, or you might find yourself overdone: i.e., burned out.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your decision to be upfront with colleagues on a touchy matter causes some consternation at first. But in the end, your honesty wins their trust and admiration.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) As in the past, someone again wants to share a secret with you, knowing it will be safe. But do you really want to be this person's confidante? Think about it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As one of nature's straight shooters, you seek to correct misconceptions about a project. Do so, of course, but without giving away too much too soon.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative pursuits continue to be strong in the gifted Goat's aspect. New friendships can come from sharing these experiences with like-minded art aficionados.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolve lingering grumblings over your way of doing things by keeping your mind open to suggestions while continuing to show how your plans will work.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The perceptive Piscean might find that changing course in mid-stream isn't as workable as it would seem. Explore this option carefully before making a decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to share your love of life's good things brings joy to many, including, of course, yourself.

Red Raiders Top Plymouth South, In Postseason Hunt

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raider baseball club is still alive for a post season berth following a huge Atlantic Coast League win over Plymouth South HS on Monday.

The Raiders, behind six strong innings from starting pitcher Keith Morreale (6 inn, ER, 2 Ks, W) and a shutout frame from relief pitcher Joe Edgerly (1 inn, K), beat Plymouth North 7-5 to up its record to 7-8 overall. The team has five games remaining on the schedule and needs to win three-out-of-five to make the tournament.

"This was a total team victory," said head coach John Fidalgo, "we got contributions from every player in the lineup."

The Raiders, batting a robust .296 (average) as a team through seventeen games, were led offensively by freshman Colin Ryan (2-for-3, 3 RBI, R) against Plymouth North. Ryan, brought up early in the season to add a spark, is hitting .390 (and slugging .463) for the year and has been a major contributor at the plate and in the field defensively.

"Offensively, the team had great at-bats all day up and down the lineup," Fidalgo added. "But Ryan was the story as he was 2-for-3 with three RBI and a run scored."

North also received offensive production from two sophomores, John Ainsley (1-for-1, 2 BB, R) and Ryan Louis (1-for-3, RBI) combined to go 2-for-4 batting in the second and fifth spots in the lineup.

But the offensive attack also received clutch hits from seniors Mike Horgan (2-for-4) and Dan Richards (1-for-2, R, RBI) and junior Trevor Brown (1-for-1). Fellow junior Joe Vialpando (BB, 2 R, SB) scored two runs in the game, but it was his work on the base paths in the six inning and his defense in the seventh inning that proved to be the most important series of plays in the game.

Vialpando reached base via a walk and stole second (he has nine on the season). He advanced to third on a wild throw and Ryan drove him in for an important insurance run. In the seventh, Vialpando made a game saving catch with one out. He ranged back to deep center field and robbed an extra base hit with a diving grab.

"It was the best catch I have seen in a long, long time," said Fidalgo. "He is a special talent in the outfield. What make him so good are the reads he gets off the bat. He made a case for a web gem on ESPN."

With his six innings of work, Morreale earned his team leading third victory of the season. Edgerly, working a perfect seventh, picked up his second save of the spring.

The win over Plymouth North helped halt a two-game losing streak for the Raiders.

The previous game versus Marshfield on May 11 saw North go up 2-0 after one inning of play and 3-0 after three times at-bat, but the Rams stormed back and scored one run in the bottom of the third, two in the fifth to tie it at 3-3 and scored the game-winner in the sixth and took a close 4-3 decision.

Horgan tossed seven innings, striking out five and allowing two earned runs. Ainsley (3-for-3, RBI) and Louis (2-for-3, RBI) powered the offense. Louis, Ryan and Vialpando each scored a run for North Quincy.

The 4-3 loss to Marshfield came on the heels of a 4-0 home loss to Whitman Hanson on May 7. The Raiders, again, received a strong performance on the mound from Morreale. He went the distance, striking out five while allowing just one earned run, but the offense, usually a strength for North, was limited to just three hits.

The Panthers did most of their damage in the top of the fourth, scoring three times to take a 3-0 lead. Whitman Hanson tacked on another run in the sixth and finished off the Raiders with a perfect seventh inning.

Next up for North is a home date with Silver Lake Regional HS today (May 15) at Adams Field (3:30 p.m.). Starting next Monday, North closes out its regular season with games against Dennis-Yarmouth (May 19, road game), Quincy (May 21, Adams Field, 6:30 p.m.) and Randolph (May 23, Adams Field, 4 p.m.).

Point Webster Students Run In 7th Annual Great Race

Point Webster Middle School celebrated National Physical Education Week with its 7th annual Great Race.

One hundred boys and girls participated in this one-mile run through the streets of Quincy. The overall winners of the Great Race were Alex Bottari (boys) and Joanna McGroarty (girls).

Awards were given out for the first place finishers in each grade. Alex Hefferman, Maryssa Dwyer, Jon Aiken, Danya Marhamo, Emma Papile and Ryan Turpin all finished first in their grade level.

The Great Race began seven years ago with 40 runners and it has grown into a tradition at Point Webster. Physical education teachers Clare Murphy and Scott King conducted the race with the help of the Quincy Police Department.

Cerebral Palsy Golf Fundraiser May 29

Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts invites golfers to 'hit the links' for the agency's 9th annual Charity Golf Tournament, Saturday, May 29 at Pinehills Golf Club, Plymouth, MA.

This event, which takes place on the beautiful Nicklaus course, is Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts' biggest fundraiser of the year and all proceeds benefit the agency in its ongoing efforts to enhance programming and provide vital resources to thousands of people throughout Massachusetts.

Registration for the tournament will take place at 10:30 a.m.; with a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m. Tickets are $175 per person and includes 18 holes of golf, as well as a gift, box lunch and sit-down dinner.

The event will include live and silent auctions, as well as a raffle, featuring a variety of exciting prizes. One winner will walk away with four seats to a Red Sox game, donated by W.B. Mason.

"Over the years, Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts has been able to expand and grow thanks to the success of special fundraisers like the Golf Classic," said Cerebral Palsy of MA Chief Executive Officer Tom Zukauskas. "Within the past year, our Quincy therapy program for children has expanded and now offers physical, speech and occupational therapy services.

"We have also implemented a new program, the Adult Recreation Fund. We are excited about these programs and what the future may hold."

Interested foursomes are encouraged to sign up now. Make checks payable to Cerebral Palsy of MA and mail them to the agency's office at 43 Old Colony Ave., Quincy, MA 02170, attention: Golf Classic.

For more information or a brochure about the event, call Ann DiMattio at 617-479-7443, ext. 203 or log on to www.masscp.org.

Norfolk Classic Saturday, Sunday

Presidents Golf Course and the Norfolk County Classic Tournament Committee have announced the dates for the 30th Annual Norfolk County Classic golf tournament at Presidents Golf Course.

The tournament will take place on May 17 and 18.

The Norfolk County Classic is the highlight of the golf season at Presidents. It has become, over the years, an annual celebration of spring and the official start of the 2008 competitive golf schedule.

The event is a 36-hole stroke play championship by invitation only. The tournament will be made up of 171 players in two divisions. The two fields (Division I & II) will be reduced for Sunday's (May 18) round by eliminating the twenty-one (21) highest scores in Division I and the nine (9) highest scores in Division II.

In the event of severe weather causes cancellation of either round, the Classic will be played as a one-day event. A possible rain date could be May 24 and 25.

The first 171 invitations received from the committee's invitation list will be accepted. The postmark will determine the order of acceptance and priority on the stand-by list. An alternate list of ten players will be used to fill any vacancies or cancellations.

The 2007 champions were Phil Smith (68-68, 136) and Gerry Squires (74-75, 149).

NQHS Softball Clinic Sunday

The North Quincy Red Raiders girls' softball team will be holding a Softball Clinic Fundraiser on Sunday, May 18 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Pageant Field.

The clinic is for players' ages 6 to 14, and batting, fielding, pitching, catching and base running fundamentals will be covered.

The cost for the three-hour clinic is $20 per player or $50 for a family with three or more siblings participating. This fee includes a clinic T-shirt.

Temple Shalom Open House

Temple Shalom of Milton will hold an open house for prospective members at the same time it celebrates the conclusion of its religious school year with a kosher barbecue and Maccabiah Relay Game Sunday, May 18 from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

South Shore and Greater Boston residents interested in Temple Shalom are invited to meet Rabbi Alfred Benjamin, temple officers, members and school staff, tour the building and learn about the Temple's programs and activities, including the religious school, and enjoy some food, fun and games, and a visit from "Juggles the Clown."

Temple Shalom is also accepting registrations to its Rabbi Jerome Weistrop Religious School, which meets on Sunday mornings and Tuesday afternoons, starting next September.

Under the leadership of Education Director Nancy Molitor, the school has small class sizes and a very active and innovative curriculum, including holiday celebrations, pre-school-age Story Hour, Family Learner's services, Bar/Bat Mitzvah classes, teenage Holocaust class, Jewish film appreciation, and frequent family activities.

For religious school information, call the school office at 617-698-3395.

Temple Shalom is an egalitarian synagogue which welcomes interfaith families and is handicapped accessible.

The Temple is located at 180 Blue Hill Ave., (Route 138) Milton.

Dr. Bertrand Shaffer, 76

U.S. Navy Flight Surgeon, Psychiatrist; Commander Wollaston American Legion, Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post

A funeral service for Dr. Bertrand "Bert" Shaffer, 76, of Quincy, a psychiatrist and activist in veterans affairs, was held May 9 at Schlossberg-Solomon Memorial Chapel, Canton.

Dr. Shaffer died unexpectedly May 5 after three weeks of battling complications from heart surgery at Boston Medical Center. His family was at his side.

He had hoped to live to see his daughter, Pauline, graduate May 17 from Wheaton College. His son, Alex, a student at the University of New Hampshire, visited him daily throughout his struggle.

Dr. Shaffer was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and raised in Manhattan. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Louis Shaffer.

He graduated from the Bronx High School of Science and from Brandeis University with a B.A. in American Civilization in 1952. His was the first class to graduate from the fledgling college.

Dr. Shaffer earned his medical degree from State University of New York, Downtown Medical Center, and entered the U.S. Navy in 1958 as a flight surgeon. He spent some of his happiest years with his family as a navy doctor on Chi-Chi Jima, a Japanese-populated island in the Pacific.

He was honorably discharged from the Navy in 1963 and specialized in drug addiction as a psychiatrist in the U.S. Public Health Service in Kentucky. He later obtained credentials in forensic psychiatry from Boston University's Law-Medicine Institute.

Dr. Shaffer was director of Legal Medicine, Region III, for the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health and director of the Superior Court Clinic and the Quincy District Court Clinic. He was consultant psychiatrist to the Suffolk County Jail and Norfolk County Jail, and to Bridgewater State Hospital and Bridgewater Treatment Center for Sexually Dangerous Persons.

He also ran a private practice, was a member of the faculty of Boston University, and associate chief of the BU Student Health Center.

In his retirement, Dr. Shaffer was active in veterans' affairs. He was on the Quincy Veterans Council, was commander of the American Legion Post in Wollaston, and served 23 years as commander of Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post #193. He was especially proud of their "Classmates Today, Neighbors Tomorrow" program which recognized local high school students' engagement in civic life.

Dr. Shaffer is survived by the children of his previous marriage with Ingrid Shaffer, Pauline Rebekah Shaffer and Alexander Jacob Shaffer. Also by his children of his earlier marriage to the late Ingeborg Blass Shaffer: Catherine Diane Shaffer, Judith Naomi Shaffer, Louise Eleazar Shaffer, Michael David Shaffer, and Daniel Gustaf Shaffer.

He is also survived by five grandchildren and his cousin, Diane Gordon of Brookline.

Burial was at Sharon Memorial Park in Sharon.

A memorial observance at the home of Ingrid Shaffer was held May 10, May 11 and May 12.

The Shaffer family would like to express sincere thanks and deep appreciation to the nursing staff at Boston Medical Center for their expert, kind and gracious care of Dr. Shaffer during his brief time there. Also, to Harvey Solomon of Quincy for his friendship and assistance with the JWV, to George Nason of Wollaston, loyal helpmate in Bert's later years, and a friend for life.

Memorial donations may be made to Quincy Jewish War Veterans, Post #193, c/o Harvey Solomon, 136 Albatross Rd., Quincy, MA 02169.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It's a difficult (sometimes impossible) to stop worrying completely. Perhaps the easiest way out is to try to worry about one worry at a time. When you have too many worries on your mind at one time you can get confused, and then you've really got something to worry about!...

All of us have occasionally looked back and wondered, what have we really accomplished? Many times we have failed... sometimes miserably. But there is no use to mourn everlong at past mistakes. Perhaps the saddest words in the English language are, "OH, if I could only go back and do that thing again!" That is like trying to gather up water that has been spilled on the ground. We need to use our failures as stepping stones, and look forward, not backward. It is also useless to expend energy worrying about the future. Most of the things we worry about never come to pass anyway, and it seems the real troubles come without warning.

"Some of your griefs you have cured, ... and the worst you have survived; ... But, think of the pain you have endured ... from the evils that never arrived." - Author Unknown

SPRING CAR CARE

Taking The Headache Out Of Your Commute

(NAPS) - According to a recent Gallup Work and Education Survey, Americans spend an average of 46 minutes commuting to and from work in a typical day.

When added up over the course of a year, the amount of time many of us spend commuting easily exceeds the two weeks of vacation time that we take per year. During this time spent cooped up in our cars, many of us fret away the time worrying about things like the manic driver who's swerving in and out of traffic or being late for a morning meeting.

Take these five easy ways to de-stress your travel time and transform any commute into a more relaxing experience.

Preparation is everything. To help ensure a smooth ride, spend a few extra minutes the night before planning out your commute. Trip-planning software such as Microsoft Streets & Trips 2008 with Connected Services will help you figure out the best route. You can even access up-to-date information about road construction, accidents and congestion along the way.

Keep your mind productive. Instead of fretting about your time of arrival, make your in-car travel times more productive. Rent a book on tape to catch up on those books that you've been meaning to read or play a language tape. By keeping your mind active and engaged in a positive manner, not only will you be able to avoid boredom, you can make the most of your commute time.

Switch it up. If your schedule will allow for it, plot out alternative routes to keep things interesting. Even if it takes you five minutes longer to get to work, the change of scenery will make time fly and breaking your routine will help you stay alert and focused on the road.

Amend your working hours. If you have flexible working hours, adjust your schedule to avoid peak traffic times. Try asking your boss if you can go into work an hour earlier or later and occasionally work from home. This will allow you to recharge those batteries and give you a short break from the stoplights.

Go with the flow or lack thereof. It doesn't take a genius to know that stress takes a toll on health, elevated adrenaline levels and putting us at risk for a variety of ailments. Lose the race mentality. Studies find that most people commute alone, so use this time as valuable "you" time rather than thinking about where you "should be." Stress isn't going to make you get there any faster, so you might as well turn up the tunes and enjoy the ride.

the incident, a 51A (Child Protection) report was filed with the Department of Social Services.

The suspect, a 39-year-old Weymouth resident, was charged with "Assault with a Dangerous Weapon, Threats to Commit a Crime and Wanton Destruction of Property over $250.00.

Nice Work!

QUICK REMINDER ON SCAMS: If you are trying to sell something through the newspaper or online and a potential buyer offers to pay with a check, be wary of two situations: the check may be bogus - this is why banks tell you that the check will not clear for five days. Secondly, if the check is worth more than what you were asking for, this is a popular scam where the honest victim sends the difference back with their own valid check.

Ask yourself - Why would someone send me more than I requested and then want me to send them the difference? These scams occur everyday and many people come forward looking for the Police Department's help, but rarely do the victims get their money back because the suspects often live outside the United States. There are many more victims who do not come forward due to embarrassment.

Pre-Prom Safety At NQHS

$600,000 Grant To Fight Drugs, Underage Drinking

Quincy, in partnership with Bay State Community Services, is rearming financially for the next three years in its war on drugs with a $600,000 grant from the State Department of Public Health.

"I became acutely aware of the substance abuse problem in Quincy during my campaign for mayor last year," said Mayor Tom Koch.

"I am delighted that the state is recognizing our work in trying to make a difference in the lives of our families."

The mayor's task force is currently meeting regularly to work on plans for a major public education effort and other strategies to fight illegal drugs in Quincy.

In its latest effort, the task force conducted a sweep of North Quincy High School, using drug-sniffing dogs to find any possible stash of illegal drugs. They did not find any contraband.

The $600,000 grant over three years to Quincy is part of $2.8 million to 31 cities and towns to support community efforts to prevent substance abuse and $1.7 million to 14 communities to

Concerned Over Possible $600 Tax Bill Increase

Council Eyes $4.7M Cut In Mayor's Budget

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Finance Committee will review 2009 budget proposals with the heads of the city's four major departments at Thursday's meeting which will focus on department efforts to cut municipal costs.

The committee recently voted unanimously to cut at least $4.7 million from Mayor Thomas Koch's 2009 $233.9 million budget proposal and targeted the city's four major departments—school, fire, police and the Department of Public Works for reductions.

"The Mayor submitted a budget that will result in a substantial tax increase, one that, if passed, will put the city at the limits of Proposition 2 1/2 and will limit the city's ability to respond to fiscal error or emergencies," said Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan in a formal statement explaining his committee's vote.

The mayor's current budget will result in approximately a $600 increase in taxes for the average homeowner, according to Chris Walker, Koch's Policy Director.

If the Finance Committee can reduce the budget by $4.7 million, the increase would drop to $460, according to Walker.

Keenan said the four ma-

Koch Defends Budget, Will Work With Council

Mayor Thomas Koch stands by his $233 million budget which he says prevents drastic cuts in public safety and education services, and vowed to work "with every single stakeholder, city councillor and school official" as the council debates potential budget cuts.

"I am prepared to defend this spending plan for what it is," Koch said, "It protects the services our city residents deserve. But I also respect and understand the city council's position. The only way we're going to come to a solution is to get everyone at the table, roll up our sleeves, and work together to find a solution."

Two weeks ago, Koch submitted his budget proposal to the City Council, calling it a "maintenance budget" that kept services intact but provided very little in new programs or new spending. Almost all of the increases in the proposed budget are set aside for contracted employee raises and other cost increases needed to maintain city services at current levels, including a $4 million increase in the school budget.

At that time, Koch said a series of financial problems and unbudgeted costs inherited by his administration has placed the city in a difficult financial position. Millions of dollars in bills for the Honeywell energy program, reserve funds used to pay for regular budget costs, and employee contracts signed

Early Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Memorial Day holiday Monday, there will be an early news and advertising deadline for next week's Quincy Sun.

News, church, organizations and youth sports releases, retail and classified advertising and legal notices should be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., by noon tomorrow (Friday) to assure publication in the May 29 issue.

For more information, call The Sun office, 617-471-3100.

Flag Day Committee Seeks Veterans' Memorial Flags

The Quincy Flag Day Parade Committee is seeking veterans' flags for display during the 57th annual Flag Day Parade to be held Saturday evening, June 14.

Families of deceased veterans may drop off their flags at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St. in Wollaston, by Tuesday, June 10. The memorial flags will be placed on the "Quincy Salutes Its Veterans" float in the procession.

Edward J. Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership, one of the organizations sponsoring the parade, assures that all flags lent for display will be well cared for while in the parade committee's possession.

"Families who choose to display their loved one's flag in the parade gives us all a vivid reminder of the sacrifices made by Quincy men and women in their service to our country, and toward the symbol of the freedoms our flag represents," said Keohane.

The Flag Day Parade will step-off from Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. and will proceed down Hancock Street, Merrymount Parkway and disbanding at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The parade will culminate into a celebration beginning at 8 p.m. at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of an impressive 30 x 60 foot version of Old Glory, presentation of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award, a patriotic performance and sing-a-long and, if weather permits, a fly-over by the Massachusetts State Police Air Wing. The evening's festivities will be capped off by a fireworks display, at approximately 9:15 p.m.

For more information, call 617-376-1251.

Coast Guard Captain Keynote Speaker Memorial Day Parade, Ceremonies Monday

By TOM HENSHAW

Retired Coast Guard Capt. Maurice R. Dumas, who served a hitch in the Navy before joining the Coast Guard, will be the guest speaker at the Memorial Day observance Monday, May 26, at the World War II podium in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

As the deck watch officer on board the cutter Evergreen, he participated in the International Ice Patrol out of Argentia, Newfoundland and on other cutters that operated in Arctic and Antarctic waters.

He retired aboard the USS Constitution in Boston in 1986 and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal on his retirement after 25 years of Coast Guard service.

A resident of North Quincy, Capt. Dumas currently serves as chairman of the board at Brighton Marine Health Center, which oversees the health care of the area's retired military personnel and their dependents.

He is a member of Quincy American Legion Post 95, the South Shore Military Officers Association, the American Military Society, the North Quincy Knights of Columbus and a past member of the board of the Quincy Symphon Orchestra.

Marching units in the parade will assemble no later than 10 a.m. Monday in the parking lot of the Quincy Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., and march down Quincy Avenue, Hancock, Coddington and Sea Streets to the cemetery where all units will remain in formation during the ceremonies.

The parade will rest in Quincy Square while wreaths are placed on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

Parade Marshal Stephen Dunlea, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council (QVC), and guests will review the parade from a stand on Sea Street across from the cemetery entrance.

The parade is expected to begin at 10:30 a.m.

In case of inclement weather, the exercises will be held in the Munroe MacLean gym at Quincy High School on Coddington Street at 11 a.m.

After the services, the parade will disband and the veterans will retire to their respective posts.

John Raeke, chaplain of the QVC, will open the ceremonies with the invocation followed by the introduction of the invited guests by Lawrence Norton, the master of ceremonies.

Commander Dunlea, Mayor Tom Koch, Council President Jay Davis and Henry Bradley, director of Veterans Services, will deliver greetings and remarks.

Henry Pakkala, junior vice commander of the QVC, will read General Logan's order creating the first Memorial Day, and Dan Dewey, senior vice commander of the QVC, will read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

Capt. Dumas will deliver the main address.

Thomas Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans Services Department, will extend greetings and remarks, an adjutant will call the roll of deceased comrades and the Memorial Day poem, "In Flanders Field," will be read by Robert Noble.

Commander Dunlea will place a wreath and others follow with wreaths of all wars, Gold Star Mothers will place a basket of flowers on the World War II monument, the Second Marine Division will fire a volley and Donald Murphy will sound Taps on the bugle.

The National Anthem will be played as Leo Readon, the officer of the day, raises the colors to full staff, Joseph Brooker, assistant chaplain of the QVC will give the benediction and Officer of the Day Readon will dismiss the troops.

The parade formation, which is subject to change depending on which posts, colors and guests report, will be led by Quincy Police and Fire Honor Guards, the Quincy Veterans Council Colors and the Quincy Cavanagh Chapter of the Disabled American Veterans.

Stephen Dunlea, commander of the QVC; Dan Dewey, senior vice commander of the QVC; Henry Pakkala, junior vice commander of the QVC; Mayor Tom Koch and city and state officials will follow.

The guest speaker, Capt. Dumas, is next followed by his aides and the Quincy and North Quincy High School bands and ROTC.

Controversy Over Billboard Erupts At Council Meeting

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

Some 25 angry West Quincy residents cheered and booed Monday as the City Council discussed the controversial 60-foot West Quincy billboard which currently sports a Vodka advertisement.

The angry residents consider the billboard a blight on their neighborhood and focused much of their anger on Council President Jay Davis who represents Ward 4, their neighborhoods.

Residents applauded Ward 2 Councillors Daniel Raymondi of Ward 2 and John Keenan who charged that major errors occurred in the billboard's approval process at both the state and city level.

Both councillors are lawyers and filed resolutions seeking a public hearing and an investigation into potential remedies. Council members unanimously approved both resolutions. They will set a date at a later meeting.

Raymondi said that eight abutters were not notified prior to the Zoning Board of Appeals hearing on the billboard in June, 2007. Massachusetts General Law requires such notification, he said.

"This particular list was defective," said Raymondi. "All of those properties should have been notified by law."

City Solicitor James Timmins agreed that there appears to be flaws in the city's notification lists. "This did not kick out the proper addresses. Clearly, in this particular case, there was a problem."

"I'm very satisfied there is no intent," said Timmins, adding that city will have to put in checks to prevent recurrences.

"That has a pretty chilling effect," said Raymondi. "We can't get an abutter's list. The system collapses."

Councillor Joseph Finn said that certification goes to the heart of such applications. If the list isn't complete, he asked, "What is the meaning of a certified list?"

Keenan cited irregularities in the state approval process for the billboard. He said the application was flawed. In addition, Keenan noted the state's outdoor advertising law specifically bars billboards within 300

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 22, 1859, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of master sleuth Sherlock Holmes, is born. Doyle grew weary of writing Holmes, and in "The Final Problem" he killed off Holmes, only to resuscitate him later due to popular demand.

• On May 20, 1873, Levi Strauss and Jacob Davis are given a patent to create work pants reinforced with metal rivets, marking the birth of one of the world's most famous garments: blue jeans, originally called "waist overalls."

• On May 24, 1883, after 14 years and 27 deaths during construction, the Brooklyn Bridge opens. The granite foundations of the bridge were built underwater in pressurized chambers. More than a hundred workers suffered from cases of compression sickness, also called the "bends."

• On May 23, 1934, notorious criminals Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow are shot to death by Texas and Louisiana state police while driving a stolen car near Sailes, La. The Barrow Gang was believed responsible for the deaths of 13 people, including nine police officers.

• On May 21, 1955, Chuck Berry records his hit song "Maybellene." The song rose to No. 5 on the pop charts, one of the first rock 'n' roll songs by an black musician to hit the charts. Berry scored a string of hits throughout the 1950s, including "Johnny B. Goode" in 1958.

• On May 19, 1969, 6-year-old Jodie Foster makes her show-business debut, on the TV show "Mayberry R.F.D." Foster grew up to become one of Hollywood's most respected actresses, winning Oscars for her roles in "The Accused" (1988) and "The Silence of the Lambs" (1991).

• On May 25, 1977, a new sign of political liberalization appears in China when the communist government lifts its decade-old ban on the writings of William Shakespeare, evidence that the Cultural Revolution was over. What the revolution had meant in practice was the banning of any cultural work — music, literature, film or theater — that did not have the required ideological content.

Like An Old Movie

This year's state elections are locally shaping up like a movie you've seen before.

Like maybe three or four times.

Once again it's a free ride back to Beacon Hill for Quincy's Democratic four-member State House delegation:

Senator Michael Morrissey, Rep. Ron Mariano, Rep. Steve Tobin and Rep. Bruce Ayers.

No Democratic or Republican opposition.

County-wide, Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, former city councillor, and Treasurer Joseph Connolly of Weymouth, both Democrats, appear to be unopposed according to nomination papers filed at the Quincy Election Department.

Lack of contests will keep the voter turnout pretty low at the Sept. 16 primary election, says City Clerk Joseph Shea.

"I think it will be around 20 percent," he says.

But the low turnout won't save the city any money. "The primary will cost about $70,000," Shea figures.

The same price tag as a large voter turnout election. Just as many election workers, police details, etc. are needed in case the vote is a lot heavier than expected.

And, 54,490 ballots have to be printed, one for each registered voter just in case it turns out to be that Miracle Day with all 54,490 actually turning out to vote.

"That would be some day," muses Shea.

A little good news: The state will pick up the tab on those 54,490 ballots this year.

Shea sees a good 80 percent turnout for the presidential and state final election Nov. 4.

Turnouts in Quincy for Presidential elections usually run between 71 and 73 percent he notes.

Maybe you might be getting a little tired of it, but

SHEA

Shea says:

"The battle between Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama has really sparked voter interest."

Meanwhile, the Republican City Committee is still in the process of reorganizing after drifting eight years without active leadership.

They have their eye on next year's city election.

"We hope to have a candidate or two on next year's ballot," says Jennifer Logue the new chairman.

City elections, of course, are non-partisan, but Democrats now hold the mayor's office, nine city council seats and six school committee seats.

"We feel the city should have some Republican input in city government," says Logue who made an unsuccessful bid for a council at-large seat last year.

Her father, former Mayor Frank McCauley retired in 2005 after a 32-year career that included city councillor, city council president and school committeeman—the last Republican to hold municipal elective office.

For a few years he and Christine Cedrone Logan were the only two Republicans in city elective office.

A former member of the school committee, she is now Republican State Committeewoman and teaming with Logue as secretary of the Republican City Committee.

Both Logue and Logan are optimistic and encouraged by the response to the committee's reorganization process so far.

Especially the young people who want to get aboard. The committee, however, has its work cut out for the future.

There are approximately only 5,800 registered Republicans in a city that was once a GOP stronghold. Not many compared to 24,713 Democrats and 23,875 unenrolled (independent).

The committee hopes to sway some of them over to their side in elections.

"Our goal is to give voters a true choice," says Logue.

Which, of course, will require a few Republican candidates on future election ballots.

"We'll be trying," Logue promises.

And, a final reminder: Last day to register to vote or change party affiliation for the Sept. 16 state primaries is Wednesday, Aug. 27.

Quincy Police Mutual Aid Assn. Memorial June 1

The Quincy Police Mutual Aid Association announces that the annual Police Memorial exercises will be held and conducted on Sunday, June 1 2008.

The exercises, commencing at 8:30 a.m., and members of the Association, active and retired Quincy police officers, invited guests and dignitaries will assemble at the Quincy District Court, 1 Dennis Ryan Parkway.

This contingent, led by the Quincy Police Department's Honor Guard and escort vehicles, will march, beginning at 8:45 a.m., from the Courthouse to Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

At the cemetery, starting at 9 a.m., the traditional first Sunday in June ceremony commemorating Police Memorial Sunday will take place. The public is invited and encouraged to attend.

During the memorial, the Association will remember its departed Quincy Police Crossing Guards and a wreath will be placed at the Police Memorial located in the Mount Wollaston Cemetery directly opposite the Quincy Police Headquarters.

Mayor Thomas Koch and Quincy Police Chief Robert Crowley will make remarks and following the ceremony a light collation will follow at Quincy High School on Coddington Street.

In event of inclement weather, the memorial will take place at the QHS gymnasium.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS REAL PHOTO postcard is a 1908 view of the old West Quincy Methodist-Episcopal Church that stood for almost 100 years at 87 Hall Place in West Quincy. Like so many small neighborhood churches this one had meager beginnings. It was built in 1874 by members of the congregation on a donated lot of land using lumber salvaged from a building that was also donated. The clock and the organ came from a $2,000 gift from Quincy philanthropist Henry H. Faxon. The clock tower was a local landmark and it could be seen from all over West Quincy including the quarries that loomed overhead. The last service was held here in 1957 when the congregation merged with the then St. Paul Methodist Church on Fort Street. This building then stood vacant for a number of years until the city demolished it as a hazard. A private residence now occupies this site.

READERS FORUM

Please Follow Mayor Koch's Lead

A few months ago, Quincy joined 15 other Massachusetts' towns in accepting the Community Solar Challenge.

For Quincy to meet the Challenge, created by the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative (MTC), 150 residents or businesses must choose to support local, renewable energy through a Clean Energy Choice program.

One easy way to do this is to make a tax-deductible one-time contribution of $100 or a monthly contribution of $5/month to the New England Wind Fund, a Clean Energy Choice program that supports the creation of more wind power in New England (www.newenglandwind.org).

Currently, most of our electricity comes from burning fossil fuels, which release carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. Making the clean energy choice allows individuals to increase the amount of clean wind power that gets put into our grid. It also supports the local green economy as the renewable energy sources are from New England, if not the South Shore, rather than a foreign country.

For every dollar Quincy residents and businesses put toward the New England Wind Fund, 100% will be matched by the MTC and be invested right back into clean energy programs here in Quincy. If they do it by June 30, then the city will meet the Solar Challenge and earn a free 2-kilowatt solar panel for a city school. Many of the other communities participating have already met the Challenge. Mayor Koch proudly signed up for a Clean Choice program last month. Please follow his lead and do your part to help Quincy become a clean energy leader.

Disappointed In Cut In COA Van Service Funding

Whoa! Point me in the direction of the insane asylum. Being a female, without a driver license (one less menace on the road, right, men) I totally depend on the van service that the Council on Aging provides.

It would be a big swift kick below the belt for all the citizens who are so dependent on vans for their transportation.

I wonder how the members of the City Council would vote if their parents were in this situation.

A $20,000 cut in the budget for a service that so many citizens depends on? Shame on you, you councillors who voted 'YES' to this budget cut I hope that you can sleep nights.

City Council Votes For Parking Project

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said that he will expedite the half million-dollar Quincy Center Development project authorized by the City Council.

By a vote of 2 to the council approved taking and loan orders that will provide for both the expansion in off-street parking facilities and the opening up of the traffic bottleneck at the easterly end of Granite St. at the northerly approach to the Ross Parking area.

Only Councillors George G. Burke and Richard W. Barry voted against the proposal.

The project included the addition of 161 parking spaces between Granite St. and the Hancock Cemetery as well as the widening of Granite St. between Hancock St. and Upland Rd. (Editor's note: The parking area would be named after Walter Albert Della Chiesa, Mayor Della Chiesa's son, a graduate of West Point, who was lost when his plane crashed off Okinawa on the first day of the Korean War.)

COUNCIL APPROVES CHANGES IN PARKING REGULATIONS

Changes in parking regulations recommended by a special parking meter committee headed by Councillor George Burke and including Councillors Carl W. Anderson and James S. McCormack, were passed by the city council and sent to the mayor.

The committee recommended that parking meters be retained in the parking areas for the time being.

Other recommendations included increasing the cost of all day parking in the Upland Rd. and Adams Academy lots from 25 to 50 cents, as well setting up the 100 meters in the Hancock Parking lot for three hour limits to assist shoppers.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Boneless, Skinless Chicken Thigh Marsala

Did you ever make chicken marsala with chicken thighs instead of chicken breasts? Most members of our family enjoy the thighs even better than white meat.

Recently, I bought some boneless, skinless thighs that are much more tasty than the white meat in my opinion.

They can be grilled, fixed like cutlets or chicken marsala as I prepared which was so delicious and much more tender than usual. In addition to the marsala wine, I also use sherry wine and it is a great blend.

Chicken Marsala

3-4 chicken thighs

1/2 cup marsala wine

1/4 cup sherry wine (optional)

juice of half lemon

1 package fresh mushrooms (I used steak like mushrooms)

salt and pepper to taste

3 tablespoons olive oil enough flour for the chicken

1/2 pound wide pasta noodles

First flour the chicken. In the hot oil, saute the thighs turning until slightly brown on both sides. Set aside. Then in the same pan, saute the mushrooms, adding the wines and slowly cooking until mushrooms are tender.

Place the chicken back in the pan, add the lemon juice and cook until all is blended basting over the chicken with the mushrooms mixture. The sauce made with the wines and mushrooms is so tasty and once the chicken has been put back in the pan and given a chance to cook along with the mushrooms and wines, it is a great blend. I added a smidgen of water at one point, and a bit more wine because I felt it needed to be expanded a bit.

I served it over the wide noodles but angel hair or any favorite pasta can be used.

Quincy Community Arts Council Seeks Community Input

The Quincy Arts Council will hold a community input and information meeting Thursday, May 29, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at Quincy Historical Society, the Adams Academy Building, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Quincy Arts Council is responsible for distributing Quincy's Local Cultural Council grant funds from the Massachusetts Cultural Council to community organizations and artists.

The meeting will provide the public an opportunity to ask questions of the council regarding its mission, manner of operation and decision-making processes and to offer reactions and recommendations to the council.

The meeting is open to everyone and all are invited to participate. Parking is available in the lot at the rear of the Adams Academy Building.

Ceremony Celebrates Outstanding Academic, Service Accomplishment

Quincy College Honors Convivium Recognizes 124 Students

Quincy College recognized and awarded 124 students for their outstanding accomplishments in academics and service on Wednesday, May 7 at the Honors Convivium 2008. The ceremony and reception was held at The Lantana in Randolph, Mass.

The Main Ballroom filled up quickly as the honored students arrived with their family and friends. Faculty and staff who were in attendance to show their support and offer congratulations were spread throughout the ballroom sitting with the students and their guests.

The Quincy College Board of Governors and Executive Staff who played an integral role during the awards presentation were also in attendance. Dean Robert Baker was the MC for the evening.

The first segment of awards was presented by members of the Quincy College Board of Governors and College Courses, Inc. Awards that were given out went to scholarship recipients. The final segment of awards was presented by faculty and staff. Awards that were given out went to Summa Cum Laude and Magna Cum Laude students.

Eating well is part of common sense. In an age where diet can control anything from mood to cancer probabilities, it is hard to ignore the value (or lack of value) in the food we eat every day. While it seems simple enough, eating healthy becomes a struggle of taste and convenience; carrot sticks versus a quarter pounder...I wonder which is going to win?

This is why Eatin' Healthy exists: to give people a place where everything on the menu is delicious and nutritious. Using all-natural ingredients to make food packed with flavor, there's no fat-filled guilt after eating this food. Since its addition to the menu, the turkey avocado sandwich has kept customers wanting more with its all natural roasted turkey, spicy chipotle mayo, roasted red peppers, creamy avocado slices, and crunch mixed greens on top of toasted seven grain bread. You can even add a creamy smoothie to the order, or crispy organic baked fries and not feel deprived.

In planning the menu, Eatin' Healthy used the American Heart Associations guidelines. This includes lots of whole grains, a rainbow of fruits and veggies, healthy fats like canola, olive, and grape seed oils used in moderation, low fat dairy and lean meats. The challenge is coming up with items that are not bland and boring. "I don't want people to feel deprived or like they are being punished," states owner Erin Connors.

Best of all, Eatin' Healthy is convenient. Who has time or will power to make sure every morsel that goes in your mouth is nutritious? Eatin' Healthy has the solution. Convenience is king and health shouldn't take a backseat when juggling a hectic schedule. Located on Hancock Street right in Quincy Center, there's no excuse to skip the deliciously healthful food when it's right here.

With tasty sandwiches, crisp salads, juicy burgers, and mouth-watering drinks, not to mention a colossal weekend brunch menu, Eatin' Healthy has something for everyone. With food that leaves you feeling full and satisfied without the button-popping guilt, Eatin' Healthy makes it easy to drive past the golden arches and towards a healthy breakfast, lunch, and dinner.

major departments represent over 88 percent of the city budget while other expenditures, such as debt service or waste collection, are fixed.

"We can't touch them," said Keenan of such fixed costs as bond payments.

As a result, Keenan said the committee asked the school department, the police and the fire departments to cut their 2009 budget proposals by 3.5 percent and the Department of Public Works by 5 percent.

"Any political compromise or deal that results in less budget savings will continue the financial shell game and push the City closer to a Proposition 2 2/1 override," Committee Chairman John Keenan said.

As for the $4.7 million budget cut recommendation, Keenan said, "It is a proposal that calls for difficult, but reasoned and rational cuts in the budget. It is a responsible plan that will help restore the city's financial condition, both in the short and long-term."

Earlier this week, the School Committee's Budget and Finance Sub-Committee considered the Finance Committee's request.

The School Department

budget for 2008 is $81,404,979, according to School Committee Vice Chairman David McCarthy while the 2009 budget request is over $86,033,562. In addition, the state's Chapter 70 or education funds will increase by $1,738,114.

"It's a level-funded budget," said McCarthy who noted that raises, cost of living increases and step level increases can not be adjusted. The budget increase simply maintains current services.

The Finance Committee has recommended a 2009 budget of $82,608,562.

"It's going to affect a lot of things in the school systems," said McCarthy of the Finance Committee. "We're still kicking around options to get to that $3 million."

However, McCarthy stated, "The mayor and the City Council have the School Committee and superintendent's full support on this."

School Committee member Nick Puleo said the state's Chapter 70 increase will actually be higher than the city's budget increase if the Finance Committee maintains its recommendation.

"We, as a school committee, have a primary obligation to the children of this city," said Puleo who stated he will not consider the reduction of teacher.

However, Puleo believes there are areas where reductions can be made because, "we are equally responsible to the taxpayers."

"There is room for savings in our budget without an impact on programs," said Puleo who added that cutting by the full $2.9 million "will be a very painful process for the students and staff of Quincy Public Schools."

Puleo noted that the City Council does have authority over the school department's bottom line, but not over its choice of spending.

"In order to keep our city's fiscal health in good order, the school system needs to bear some of the burden," said Puleo.

As a budget analyst for the state senate, Puleo oversees $365 million in expenditures for the department of Elder Affairs.

Keenan believes the budget cuts are essential to the health of the city's finances. He state, "Any political compromise or deal that results in less budget savings will continue the financial shell game and put the city closer to a Proposition 2 1/2 override."

Kevin Mulvey is Chairman of the School Committee's budget committee. The third member is Joanne Bragg.

The City Council must approve the total amount of the annual municipal budget.

fight underage drinking.

Quincy will get $125,000 per year for three years in opioid (drug) prevention grants and $80,000 per year for three years in underage drinking prevention grants.

"Substance abuse is a serious public health problem in Massachusetts and the grants show how seriously we are about addressing that problem," said DPH Commissioner John Auerbach.

"Rather than dictating solutions, the funding provided by these grants will allow organizations the flexibility to develop prevention strategies that are specific to the communities and the people they serve."

The most recent report on underage drinking by Massachusetts students shows some improvement. The age at which the young people took that first drink rose from 12 in 2004 to 13 in 2007.

But the Massachusetts Youth Health Survey also found that adolescents who drank alcohol in the past month increased substantially between 2004 and 2007 in both middle and high schools.

Deaths by overdoses of heroin and other opioids, such as Oxycontin, rose by more than 7 percent per year in the state. The DPH reported 637 people died from opioid poisoning in 2006, up from 544 the year before.

Over the past two years, the state has committed more than $13 million to new prevention and treatment programs.

Friends Tackle Trash On Wollaston Beach

Nearly 50 people from the Friends of Wollaston Beach, the Massachusetts Striped Bass Association and the University of Phoenix in Massachusetts mustered on Cleaner Greener Quincy Day to clean several areas of the southern end of Wollaston Beach.

The group removed trash and debris from Caddy Park south around Black's Creek along Furnace Brook Parkway; the area across from Caddy Park frequented by local fishermen and the area across from Matilda's at the parking lot wall.

On Park Serve Day, sponsored by Gov. Deval Patrick, the Friends focused their efforts on the northern end of Wollaston Beach, particularly the cove that connects the beach and Moswetuset Hummock, an area that had to be cleaned by hand due to limited access by heavy equipment.

Next on the Friends agenda is the Kite Fest Sunday, May 25, from 12 noon to 5 p.m. and Arts on the Shore Saturday, June 21, from 12 noon to 4 p.m., both events on the southern end of Wollaston Beach.

Sheila McIntyre, Linda Stice To Be Honored At Woodward School

Two "exceptional" Quincy women will be honored at the spring fundraiser for the Woodward School for Girls Thursday, May 29, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Granite Links Golf Club in West Quincy.

Sheila McIntyre and Linda Stice were selected as individuals who are "authentic, successful in their progressions, model community servants and actively engaged in the community."

McIntyre, wife of the late former Mayor James McIntyre, has a long history of involvement in organizations that have made tremendously positive impacts on communities both local and far away.

Her outstanding commitment to homeless veterans resulted in the Veterans House being renamed the Sheila McIntyre Veterans House.

She also served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the St. Boniface Haiti Foundation for 12 years, visiting the Caribbean island in 1985 to view the unimaginable poverty of the people.

SHEILA MCINTYRE

Stice, who served on the Quincy School Committee for 16 years, and has worked tirelessly to provide a strong voice in support of children, encouraging them to dream and believe that anything is possible.

She served as executive director of the Quincy-based Commission on the Family from 1995 to 2002 and currently serves as executive director of the Affordable Housing Trust Fund.

In between running the Tufts 10K races every year, she has raised two children with her husband, Ken Tarabelli, and will see her son, Daniel, graduate from law school and her daughter Madeline from college this year.

The Woodward fundraiser will include silent and live auctions, entertainment, dinner and cocktails. Tickets are $80 each.

At Florida And Boston Regional Competitions

Quincy Robotics Team Wins Several Awards

Quincy High School Robotics Team 69 HYPER made it to the semi-finals (top four among 51 participating teams) and was honored with The Rockwell Automation Innovation in Control Award at the Boston Regional FIRST Overdrive 2008 FIRST Robotics Competition.

The competition took place recently at the Agganis Arena at Boston University.

The Award honors Team HYPER, along with Quincy Public Schools and Proctor & Gamble (whose Gillette division sponsors the team), for its "innovative application of control components to provide unique machine functions."

Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Chuck Phelan, the director of Information Technology, were in attendance and noted the importance of showing their support for the program and HYPER.

At the competition, Blue Man Group premiered a new routine before the Boston FRC Regional finals.

FIRST Overdrive is a game played on the track, where two "Alliances" (one red and one blue) composed of three teams each, compete in each match. The object of the game is to attain a higher score than your opponent by making counter-clockwise laps with your robot around the Track while moving large "Trackballs" over and/or under the "Overpass" that bisects the Track.

"This is a great achievement for Team HYPER, as this victory falls on the heel of their accomplishments at the 2008 Florida Regional competition, which took place March 14-16," said Rob Gordon, Technology Leader, Proctor & Gamble Company and Engineering Mentor and the Team Coordinator for HYPER. "In Florida, Team HYPER won the T-Shirt competition before the team even arrived. During competition the team ranked six in the qualifying rounds and won silver as part of the Second Place Alliance at the event."

HYPER started the 2008 season in December with its annual sponsorship of the Eastern Massachusetts FIRST Lego League Tournament, where 40 elementary and middle school teams from across the region program LEGO robots to carry out specialized missions on a playing field.

More than 600 students and their families and coaches participate each year. HYPER coordinates with the City's Public Works Department, School Department, Access Cable Station, and the Park Department to get the necessary materials, furniture, space, food, and technology in place to make this day go smoothly.

LEGO League is now so popular in Quincy that it is an integral part of the after school and summer programs at the middle and elementary schools.

HYPER will end its 2008

season with two spring events. HYPER will continue its annual volunteer visit to Boston Children's Museum on April 26, from 11 a.m. - 4 p.m. They will teach children how to build and drive a robot and provide information on to get involved in a FIRST robotics team in their local community.

On May 31, HYPER will take part in the Beantown Blitz Competition at Northeastern University's Mathew's Arena, a one-day version of the Boston Regional competition, which is also open to the public.

Quincy Public Schools Team 69 HYPER has been Helping Youth Pursue Engineering and Robotics for over a decade. The 2007-2008 season marks Team HYPER's 11th year as a partnership between Quincy Public Schools and Gillette.

Today, the team consists of 46 high school students, eight teachers and several engineers, machinists and technicians from Proctor & Gamble's Gillette division, and more than two-dozen actively involved team alumni. Though all activities center around the robot and competition, Team HYPER has become much more.

HYPER is a diverse group of individuals, who are all focused as a team toward one goal: providing an environment for students to test different interests and skills through hands-on experience.

The FIRST Organization (For Inspiration and Recognition of Science and Technology) sponsors the annual robotics competition that pairs up companies or universities with high schools to encourage students to pursue careers in science and engineering. FIRST began in 1992 with 28 teams.

feet of a public park.

The West Quincy billboard was constructed within 285 feet of designated open space in violation of that restriction, according to Keenan who cited numerous inaccuracies in the application for state approval.

Keenan said that city ordinances prohibit billboards of any kind. Therefore, he said that the Zoning Board should never have considered a prohibited structure in the first place.

"We have a city ordinance that says you can't do it," said Keenan. "You're not talking about something that is allowed (in some manner). It is prohibited."

"Who will try to do it next?" asked Keenan.

Both Raymondi and Keenan asked that Solicitor Timmins explore possible legal remedies.

However, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he believes any remedy would cost the city, "They (the city) produced the bad list. We're going to be held dearly accountable."

Most of the councillors reported getting numerous phone calls from area residents and all supported a review of the issue.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly asked whether the city could mobilize a legal team to have the structure removed. Kelly cited the city's success in saving encroachments on Nut Island.

"It's horrendous," Kelly said of the billboard structure which juts out horizontally on a black pipeline stand.

However, several councillors noted that the appeal period for the billboard had expired months ago. Approval was issued in June, 2007 and the billboard was not constructed until last month.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro noted that councillors had repeatedly supported anti-blight measures and, yet, the Zoning Board approved the billboard.

The residents had waited four hours for the council to complete its planned agenda and address the billboard issue and, occasionally, called out in anger when Davis spoke.

After Monday's meeting, Davis said that he had held a neighborhood meeting, visited homes in the area, and made every effort to inform residents.

"I am extremely disturbed that a glitch in assessor's computer resulted in addresses being left off the zoning board's notice list," Davis said.

"I relied upon this list to notify area residents of the neighborhood meeting, the zoning board meeting and, as a means to personally walk the neighborhood prior to the zoning board meeting."

After Monday's meeting, Lenny Biondi whose family owns the property at 315 Willard St., Quincy, said the process allowing the West Quincy billboard was completely legal.

Biondi, also, outlined the benefits for the city from some of the income from the billboard. These include a $5000 annual gift to the Lincoln-Hancock School, and significant cash contributions to the food pantry and a Little League team.

In addition, the city will have complete access to the billboard for one to two months a year for any sign of its choosing. He said the sign could say "Welcome to Quincy" or any similar message.

"This sign is not all about the Biondi's," Biondi said. "This is about giving back to the city."

Biondi said the land is leased to a New York advertising firm, Van Wagner, for a 25-year term.

"We took all of the necessary legal steps. It was handled 100 percent completely legal. There's nothing illegal about it."

Biondi, also said, the structure was "over-engineered as far as safety."

Biondi, also, defended City Council President Jay Davis who represents Ward 4.

"He took it upon himself to have a community meeting, went to neighbors in the Crescent Street area, sent out a letter. He went door to door to let them know, to inform them," said Biondi.

As for the billboard and the furor which has erupted, Biondi said the structure is a little bigger than he anticipated.

"It's a little bigger than I thought it would be," said Biondi, adding that, "It's tough to imagine (the structure) from a set of blueprints. It's bigger than anybody expected."

without any funding attached to them amounted to a "fiscal shell game" that he vowed to end, he said.

To solve those problems and keep services intact, Koch flatly told councillors that a substantial tax increase would be required, prompting the council to consider major budget cutbacks, including a 3.5 percent cuts to the school, fire and police budgets.

"This is not a time for yelling, pitting public safety against schools or spreading misleading information," Koch said of the reaction to the city council's proposed budget cuts. "If we take a measured, cooperative approach, I know we can resolve our differences and move forward."

Koch met Monday with leaders from all of the city's employee unions to update them on the budget situation, and he is meeting regularly with other city officials and speaking directly to residents on a daily basis.

Patricia Vampatella Vice President Of Academic Affairs At Quincy College

Quincy College, a fully-accredited two-year access institution, announces its new Vice President of Academic Affairs, Patricia A. Vampatella EdD.

A native of New Gloucester, Maine, Dr. Vampatella lives in Quincy, and has a home in Maine.

Dr. Vampatella has over 20 years of higher education experience. She began her career in higher education as director of Allied Health at Central Maine Community College in 1986. During her time here, she went on to become chairwoman and assistant dean of instruction, assistant dean of Academic Affairs, interim dean of Academic Affairs and finally the dean of Academic Affairs.

In addition to her experience in higher education, Dr. Vampatella is a registered nurse in Maine. She received her associate in applied science from SUNY Farmingdale, a bachelor of science in nursing from Molloy College, and master of science degree in nursing administration from Boston University as well as doctorate in educational leadership from the University of Maine.

Her postdoctoral work has been in Institutional Research at Penn State. Dr. Vampatella spent five years as a staff nurse in various specialty areas and another five years teaching in both two and four year nursing programs before entering higher education administration.

Quincy College faculty and staff are very eager and excited to work with Dr. Vampatella. She brings special expertise in assessment and program development, and has been a frequent evaluator on visiting teams for NEASC's Commission on Higher Education. She serves on several boards and has been very active in both professional and community organizations.

"Dr. Vampatella's academic leadership will bring major innovation and strength to our academic programs. Quincy College is delighted to welcome her to our leadership team," said President Martha Sue Harris. "As we celebrate our 50th year of providing academic excellence to students from Quincy, metropolitan Boston, and the South Shore, this addition to our team is a great step forward and another way to ensure our future as an institution of higher education offering the best in both education and opportunity."

DOVE Seeking Auction Items

DOVE, Inc., the domestic violence agency and shelter based in Norfolk County, is seeking auction items for this year's special fundraiser, "Harvesting Hope."

This year's fund-raiser will mark Dove's 30th anniversary of serving victims and survivors of domestic violence throughout Norfolk County.

Proceeds help support DOVE's domestic violence services and programs.

Such programs are of urgent need now, according to DOVE Executive Director

Stephanie Flaherty who said that there was a 287 percent increase in deaths related to domestic violence in 2007 compared to 2005.

For more information, call Kathy at 617-770-4065, ext. 21.

Farewell Masses This Weekend

Fr. Raymond Kiley Completes Assignment At St. John's Church

Rev. Raymond Kiley is leaving St. John's Church where he has served as parochial vicar the past six years.

He will celebrate his final Masses this weekend at 4 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday.

Fr. Kiley, who has been at St. John's since June 2002, plans to take a three-month sabbatical before being reassigned.

"I cannot believe six years have passed by so quickly," he says. "I have met many people here who, by their example of quiet humility, discipleship, humor, hospitality and faithfulness have made my tenure here at St. John's truly memorable."

Rev. Richard Cannon,

REV. RAYMOND KILEY pastor, said, "Fr. Ray has been a great asset to the parish and he will be sorely missed."

Fr. Kiley was born and raised in Yonkers, N.Y., graduated from high school there and from St. Anselm's College in 1972 with a B.A. in history. He moved to Watertown, Mass in 1974 and for 17 years worked at the Perkins School for the Blind. In 1976 he received a Masters in Education from Boston College.

He entered Pope John XXIII Seminary in 1991 with summer assignments at St. Gregory's in Dorchester, St. John the Baptist in Peabody and Regina Cleri, the archdiocesan home for retired priests in the West End. He did his diaconate at St. Ann's in Somerville.

He was ordained by Cardinal Bernard Law in 1996. His first assignment was at St. John the Evangelist in Canton.

Council Praises Ayers For Helping Hand Program

City Councillors recently praised Rep. Bruce Ayers whose Helping Hand Program has been assisting Quincy's sick, disabled and senior residents for 15 years.

Ayers founded and operates Helping Hand which provides free loans of medical equipment to Quincy residents. Loaned items have ranged from wheelchairs and hospital beds to canes and walkers.

Through the program, people donate equipment they no longer need to Helping Hand. Those in need, then, borrow the equipment and return it when the need no longer exists. If the equipment is available, it is loaned at no charge.

Recipients pick up the item and return to Helping Hands headquarters. There are no time limits on the loans.

BRUCE AYERS

"While the fight continues to provide affordable healthcare, working together we can assist our fellow citizens by providing access to this much needed equipment," Ayers said in a written statement describing the program.

"Fortunately, we have generous people who are kind enough to donate the equipment to help supply an inventory for the program."

"I store the equipment at my business in North Quincy and we donate it to people in need free of charge," continued Ayers.

The program is designed to serve Quincy residents but no one is turned away. Surplus equipment has been shipped to the Dominican Republic.

Helping Hand has not only been praised locally but by those in the medical field and those aiding senior citizens who refer patients to Rep. Ayers and his volunteers for needed, and sometimes very expensive, equipment.

Those interested in donating or borrowing medical equipment may call 617-328-0102. The equipment is stored at 440B East Squantum St., North Quincy.

John Quincy Adams Coin A Hit In Debut

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Visitors from all over the country and, even, the world joined local residents last week to help launch the gold dollar coin honoring Quincy's John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States.

By mid-afternoon Thursday, Judy Brazil and her associates from Quincy Credit Union (QCU) had distributed over 3000 of the new Adams coins from their booth at Presidents' Place, Quincy Center.

Tourists like Linda Ho and her husband from Hong Kong, Bill and June Carson from Mahbu, CA; Naomi Guffy and Nettie Brock of Bowling Green, KY joined others from Bangkok, Thailand, upstate New York, the North and South Shore at the event.

Quincy's youngsters and seniors, and those in between, attended the event. Some 25 Central Middle School students were among the teenagers learning history on the sidewalk in Quincy Square.

"Quincy's finally getting the attention it deserves. It's long overdue," said Mayor Thomas Koch during his visit. Koch viewed the event as "another opportunity to celebrate the history of Quincy. It's exciting."

A recent television series on the Adams family boosted interest in Quincy and attendance at all Quincy historic events is increasing.

"This thing is going to last for years," said Mark Carey, Executive Director of Discover Quincy. Carey and Dean Rizzo, Executive Director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, helped organize the event.

Quincy Credit Union staffers gave the first 300 visitors a free gold dollar coin and many of the coins were bought by collectors, large and small.

"I'm collecting the whole series for my grandchildren and myself," said Fred DiCristofaro, Quincy Point, who was given the first coin and bought several others.

Similarly, Beatrice Linehan of Abington said she collects them for her six grandchildren.

"We feel it's a very important history lesson," said Connie Vandervort of Wollaston who brought her two daughters, Jessica, 10 and Rebekah, 5.

"It's neat that we live in the city they were born in," said Jessica who is already a history buff with a particular interest in her hometown presidents, John and John Quincy Adams.

"People are buying rolls," said Brazil who said that it's important to circulate the coins, "...to spend it, to encourage them to spend it in Quincy. It's not just for collectors."

In fact, one of the new gold coins was spent just across Quincy Center at Craig's Cafe but owner Maryann Ahmed said that no one had noticed it.

By the day's end, nearly 1000 people had dropped by the booths on the plaza at Presidents' Place, Quincy Center.

The visitors exchanged paper dollars for the new gold coins, and visited the booths showcasing the city's unique attractions, ate SirFranks' hot dogs or the Adams cake or cookies at the Ginger Betty's bakery booth manned by Beth Veneto of Quincy.

Even more important, participants enjoyed an impromptu history lesson, courtesy of President John Quincy Adams himself, in the person of re-enactor Michael Lepage.

"I'm glad to have a coin like my father," said the presidential re-enactor. The coin for his father, President John Adams, was minted and released last year with the first four presidents.

The United States' Mint will honor four presidents a year in chronological order until 2016. John Adams was the second president and John Quincy Adams, the sixth.

Lepage described Adams' interest in the country's financial stability and westward expansion and his service and death in the House of Representatives as well as Adams' legal victory in helping to free the slave crew of the Armistad.

"Do not believe the rumors that I was very cranky," Lepage, as Adams, told visitors.

Brazil, a Quincy resident, said the event boosted the "really nice sense of pride" of city residents. She said the QCU was honored to be chosen to release the John Quincy Adams' coin.

On hand for the event were park rangers from the National Park Service who reported considerable tourist activity at the Adams' National Historical Park on Adams Street.

"I've been here 12 years and never seen it like this," said Park Ranger Paul Oxner while his associate, Russell Moscone, agreed, noting the number of out-of-state license plates at the Adams site.

Sponsors also included Koch, the Adams National Historical Park, the Quincy Partnership, and The Patriot Ledger.

Sacred Heart School Holds Annual Science Fair

Sacred Heart School recently held its Annual Science Fair where students from grades 6, 7 and 8 proudly presented projects complete with a research paper, display board, and an interactive demonstration.

Under the direction of Ms. Catherine Murphy, Middle School Science teacher, students worked hard to prepare and present their Science Fair projects.

These students have worked for two months to prepare wonderful and engaging Science Fair projects," said Murphy. "It's always exciting to see the end results in all of their projects."

"It's wonderful to see the enthusiasm and natural curiosity," said Katherine Hunter, Sacred Heart School Principal.

Established in 1961, Sacred Heart School (SHS) located in North Quincy, is a Roman Catholic School enrolling students in Pre-Kindergarten through Grade Eight. SHS is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday and Monday, May 7 and 8, the Quincy Police Department's SCUBA Team, led by Lieutenants Donald Greenwood and Robert Gillan traveled to the town of Newton, N.H. to assist the New Hampshire State Police and local police in a cold case investigation.

This was also an opportunity for the dive team to train and practice their skills, utilize their new equipment and help fellow Officers in their investigation. The case, almost 30 years old and classified as "Non-family abduction," involved the disappearance of 15-year-old Rachael Garden, last seen in the center of Newton in 1980. The victim left a local store and was last seen walking down a local road. When she didn't meet up with friends later that evening, her parents were notified and the investigation began.

Residents organized the next day and searched the wooded areas where the victim was last seen, to no avail. Local Police believe the victim was kidnapped and murdered. In 1990, the New Hampshire State Police Major Crime Scene Unit excavated a 60 square foot section of Newton woods, but were unable to come up with any new evidence.

Kingston Police Detectives obtained new information that the body and/or evidence existed in Country Pond but the department was not equipped to search the pond. Over the two day period, the 16 QPD SCUBA Unit Officers scoured the 225 acre pond, located three miles from Newton Center. The pond was murky and deep in spots. Although many items were found in the pond, no body or evidence related to the victim's disappearance were found.

The QPD SCUBA Unit's primary mission is conducting homeland security inspections of ships and marine facilities located in Quincy Waters. All QPD SCUBA Unit Members are volunteers. The family of the victim, the residents of Newton and the Newton Police Department were grateful of the efforts made by the Officers from Quincy. The following Officers assisted in the search: Lieutenant Donald Greenwood, Lieutenant Robert Gillan, Sergeant Gregory Goyette, Sergeant Donald Allison, Detective Thomas Cleary, Officers Robert Bell, Steve Burgo, Jamie Curran, Scott Doherty, Mike Foley, Matt Hockney, John Leuchte, Daniel Parisi, QUINCY POLICE Officers Mike Foley (foreground) and Jamie Curran of the QPD Dive Team.

REMINDER TO PARENTS: This case is a reminder to all parents to take the time to regularly review with your children, regardless of their age, the dangers that exist from predators, whether it be in a rural or urban area. At a minimum, talk to your children about being aware of their surroundings - knowing who are near them, where they are and who they are with. Be sure to talk to them about following their intuition when they sense danger. It all comes down to "awareness" and making the right decision to prevent being a victim.

OBITUARY

Edward Baccari, 80

Retired Atherton Hough School Principal

A funeral mass will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10:30 a.m. in St. Agatha's Church, Milton, for Edward E. Baccari of Quincy, retired principal of the Atherton Hough School.

He died May 17 at Quincy Medical Center at the age of 80.

A native of Quincy, he worked for the Quincy Public Schools for 38 years, starting as a teacher and retiring as a principal in 1990. He also worked summers and weekends for the Quincy Recreation Department.

Mr. Baccari graduated from Quincy High School in 1946 and entered the Navy on July 17 of the same year, serving until July 16, 1948. He obtained his bachelor's and master's degrees from Boston University.

He was a life member of both the National Education Association and the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

He leaves his wife, Lorraine C. (Karam) Baccari of Quincy; two daughters, Anne M. Baccari of Pennsylvania and Linda Burns and her husband, Kevin, of Norwell.

Also two sisters, Rita Cuneo and her husband, Lester, of Braintree, and Elba DelGrosso and her husband, Horace, of Scituate. He was also the brother of the late Domenic Baccari and his wife, the late Yolanda.

A devoted family man, he especially enjoyed his granddaughter and grandson, Christina and William Burns of Norwell.

Viewing hours were yesterday (Wednesday) from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy, and burial was in Mount Benedict Cemetery in West Roxbury.

Donations may be made to the Edward E. Baccari Scholarship Fund, c/o Quincy Education Association, 590 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02170.

COMCAST EMPLOYEES recently participated in Comcast Cares Day, a company-wide annual day of service. This year, Comcast employees joined with Cradles to Crayons in Quincy to collect items for needy children. In total, Comcast collected four tons of items for the organization. Among those helping out were (from left) Comcast employee Stephanie Thomas, her daughter, Jada Thomas; and Comcast employee Maria Fils-Aime. Cradles to Crayons provides low-income and homeless children from birth to pre-teen the basic essentials they need to be safe, warm, ready to learn and valued - all free of charge.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Nice Job!

1.) I was surfing the web when I came across this suggestion and I thought I'd pass it along.

The powered chemical within a dry chemical fire extinguisher can settle and cake over time. Consequently, there have been those instances when a fire extinguisher has been needed, but rendered inoperable because the contents have settled and caked. To remedy this, it is suggested that you occasionally remove an extinguisher from the wall bracket, place it upside down and shake it. Tapping the bottom of the extinguisher at this point can help as well.

Reading this brought me back to the year 1979 when a Department memo was circulated on this very subject. We were then instructed to frequently tip the extinguishers upside down, shaking and tapping the contents out of that settled state.

2.) Children playing with matches and lighters is still the leading cause of fire fatalities and injuries for those children five years and younger. Keep matches and lighters out of the hands of young children. They have a natural curiosity about fire without the experience of knowing the potential consequences of acting on that curiosity. Our proactive efforts with younger children on this subject continue through our S.A.F.E. educator's presentations. I suggest a discussion at home with children to help reinforce our efforts.

On a similar subject, store flammable materials such as gasoline, kerosene and flammable cleaning supplies outside of your home and away from children. Please convey to them the inherent dangers in misuse. One of the most tragic incidences I am aware of occurred when children used a gasoline safety container in an obstacle course for their bicycles. The container was knocked over, the contents spilled upon the concrete floor and the vapors were ignited by a nearby heater.

3.) Finally, as of this writing, we have survived a winter with few catastrophic structure fires resulting in forced relocation of building occupants. I convey this with humility, while I ask to be indulged thinking that over years our diligence in preventing fire is paying off.

No code enforcement can be truly effective without being implemented with an ample dose of education, attempting to impress upon the recipient the importance of prevention efforts throughout the year. Through our eyes and experience, we realize that a fire incident is possible, and we convey to individuals the reality of this possibility; we also convey to them what they can do to minimize its occurrence.

I want to believe that over time people have brought into what we have been selling. If this last winter is any indication, they have. The threat of fire is real, while we are not without the know to do something for ourselves to prevent it and minimize its occurrence. Apparently you have been doing just that.

Nice job!

UNDERSTANDING SESAMOIDITIS

Sesamoiditis is the inflammation of the tiny bones located on the balls of the feet, just below the big toe. The bones are located within tendons, so sesamoiditis is also considered tendonitis since the tendons also become inflamed. It is a common condition, especially among young people who participate in activities that involve a lot of "pushing off" of the foot, such as running and dancing. People who increase their physical training by adding distance or hill running to their workouts may develop sesamoiditis. The condition comes on gradually, starting as a dull ache and building up to a throbbing pain. Usually there is no redness visible on the skin. Treatment usually involves rest and padding the area.

When your physical activity has your feet hurting, get the advice and treatment from the professional footcare specialists. Whatever is causing pain in your every step, we're here at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER to help. If you are new to the Quincy area and don't have a podiatrist yet, we'd like to take on the responsibility of your family's foot care, from inflammations to injuries inherited deformities. Call us for comprehensive, compassionate foot care at 781-986-3668. Office hours also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

Rental Truck Rules for Movers

Moving anything can be a big job, especially if it involves renting a truck.

While the idea of driving a rental truck may seem daunting, a few tips can help make your move easier and safer.

Here are some practical tips from the experts at Penske Truck Rental:

Get Oriented: Familiarize yourself with the truck's switches and gauges, and be sure to note if the gas tank is on the driver or passenger side. Properly adjust the side mirrors for maximum visibility. Give yourself enough time—you may even want to pick up your truck a day early.

And rest assured your rental representative will help you feel comfortable with your truck before you start your trip.

Awareness is key: Be aware of bridges, tree limbs and low overhangs such as canopies at service stations, fast-food eateries and drive-up ATMs.

Keep in mind that since the recommended maximum speed for a loaded truck is 45 miles per hour, you should be extra cautious when passing other vehicles.

"Trucks are taller, wider and may weigh up to 10 times more than the average car. It's important to be aware that greater overhead and side clearances and stopping distances are needed when travelling, especially when the truck is loaded," states expert Art Valley, Senior Vice President-Rental, Penske Truck Leasing.

Extra protection: Most insurance and credit card companies won't cover truck rentals under existing policies. If your insurance company is among them, consider signing up for additional coverage options to protect yourself and your belongings.

Options such as a limited-damage waiver relieve the renter of any loss or damage to the truck or towing equipment, regardless of fault. Also worth considering are cargo, supplemental liability, personal accident and towing insurance. Some rental companies offer 24/7 emergency roadside assistance, at no charge, with their rental trucks.

Home Warranties

Q. What do you think of these home warranties for women like us who can't fix a darn thing?
—The Girls in Philly

A. I'd say, read the fine print very carefully.

Home warranties are service contracts that cover repairs to a home and/or appliances and other equipment inside the home. Much like car insurance, the homeowner pays a fee (usually each year) against the possibility of an appliance breakdown, a plumbing issue or other household damage. When or if a problem occurs, the homeowner calls the home warranty company, which sends a repairman or contractor to the house to fix or replace the broken item.

This is not a bad idea for the homeowner who isn't hot on do-it-yourself projects. However, like any product or service, caveat emptor (let the buyer beware) is the watchword here. Research home-warranty providers carefully. Ask other homeowners if they have a home warranty, and about their experiences with repair services through these providers.

Always get a price quote from the provider. Ideally, get quotes from as many providers as possible. Then, compare them. Home warranties cover specific items based on the type of warranty you purchase, the square footage of your home and the age of the house, among other things. Look specifically for exclusions from coverage.

Ask the warranty provider any and all questions that come to mind. If an outside contractor works on a broken item, is the item still covered? Can you even call in an outside contractor? Are there additional fees for certain specialist contractors? What if you're not happy with the repair? What legal recourse do you have?

So, while a home warranty can be a good expense, do your homework carefully to get the best coverage.

Send questions or home-repair tips to home-repair-tips@home-guru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Sustaining The View:

Windows Play Vital Role In Reducing Energy Consumption

It seems everyone is talking green these days. It's on television, in politics, in the newspaper, online, on billboards—you name it, green is there. The question is: How do we decipher the thousands of environmental messages thrown at us each day and actually do a few things that will really make a difference?

Caring for the environment starts at home. According to the U.S. Green Building Council, buildings account for 25 percent of electricity consumption, 36 percent of energy use and 30 percent of greenhouse gas emissions—the primary contributor to climate change.

"As homeowners, we can do our part in many ways," says Joe Erb, an energy-efficiency expert for Edgetech I.G., manufacturer of the world's first all-foam, no-metal spacer system for insulating glass. "We can select durable products that will last and not end up in landfills before their time. We should also look at the energy performance of our appliances and light bulbs and properly insulate our homes with energy-efficient window systems."

A 2008 survey conducted by the Alliance to Save Energy found that 64 percent of homes in the U.S. have single-pane windows, which contribute to the up to 35 percent of energy wasted in buildings. In cold climates, energy-efficient, dual-pane windows with low-e coating can reduce heating bills by as much as 34 percent. In warm climates, they can cut cooling costs by 38 percent.

"When shopping for new windows, it's important to look for the Energy Star label," says Erb.

True energy-efficient, sustainable windows hold such characteristics as low-conductivity gas fillings (argon or krypton), low-e coating and all-foam, no-metal spacer systems that separate the glass panes. The spacer system is a key element in promoting sustainability in window systems because it provides the seal between the indoor and outdoor air. If that seal fails, condensation will occur and the gas filling will leak and no longer be effective. Non-conductive spacers are known to provide a lasting seal, assuring the window will retain its energy-efficient benefits for many years. The outside materials also play a role in efficiency and sustainability.

"Homeowners are better off looking for nonconductive components, framing and sashes," adds Erb. "Wood, composite and fiberglass frames are time tested and are proven to be the most sustainable and energy efficient, standing up to a wide range of temperatures, UV light and the deteriorating effects of condensation."

When in doubt, Erb encourages homeowners to ask questions when selecting new windows. "Don't be afraid to ask the tough questions and learn more. Windows are a big investment and you should know that they are going to stand the test of time," he says.

How Do I Scam Thee? Let's Count the Ways

When money is short and times get tough, the number of financial scams increases. Don't fall victim to these scams designed to take your cash ... or your identity.

Law-enforcement scams: In this one a supposed member of law-enforcement calls and says that your identity has just been stolen, but they've nabbed the bad guys in the nick of time. You, however, asked to provide personal identifying information to compare to what the bad guys had. What they really want is your Social Security number.

Credit repair: Not only are you asked to make a hefty prepayment for services, but you give them your Social Security number and all your personal information.

Home remodeling: With warm weather here, these scams are sure to be on the increase. If someone comes to your house and wants to repave your driveway, fix your roof, trim your trees ... beware. Never hire anyone who just shows up at your door.

Utility cutoff: You get a phone call from the local power company, or so you think. The caller says your power is about to be cut off for nonpayment of your bill ... unless you pay right away by giving out your bank information.

IRS rebate checks: If you don't have your check yet and are expecting one, don't fall for the scams that promise to get it for you faster. What they want is your personal information.

Loan fees: Beware lenders that require you to pay in advance for loans for mortgage refinancing, debt consolidation or business. You may be told that the loan is "guaranteed" after you pay your advance fees, often in the form of a wire transfer to an overseas account.

Work at home: These scams have gone on for decades, and the scammers are the only ones making money. You'll be asked to pay in advance for your supplies, and you won't hear from them again.

Lottery: You're told you've won something and need to send a "processing fee" before the funds can be distributed. You never receive anything.

To keep up with the latest scams, go to www.pueblo.gsa.gov and scroll down to click on Scams/Fraud. Be sure to look at Computers and see the National Consumers League Top Ten scams.

Cost-Effective Home Solutions Can Be Green, Too

Americans are spending more than $200 billion on home-improvement projects each year, and more than ever, people are going green with their remodeling projects.

"Choosing materials that last longer and require less maintenance will save money and require significantly less upkeep overtime," said Mike Loughery, a home expert with building products manufacturer Certain Teed Corporation.

Loughery, who has a decade of experience in the home-building industry, offers the following tips for homeowners looking to go green with their home improvements:

- Side smart: Fiber cements and vinyl sidings are good materials because they resist long-term wear and tear. CertainTeed siding, for instance, features recycled content and have the authentic look of wood. It also lasts much longer than wood, saving money and natural resources.

- Roof for a lifetime: Asphalt roofing shingles have never looked better or lasted longer. Quality asphalt shingles are designed to last 50 years or more, which saves money and prevents the woes of early roof replacement.

- No stain, no pain: New vinyl fences, such as CertainTeed's Bufftech-brand Chesterfield privacy fence, feature wood grain textures. Despite its uncanny resemblance to wood, however, these fences need no annual painting or staining. So, there are fewer hassles, less out-of-pocket spending and no need for chemicals.

- Southern exposure: Southern exposure is a great natural tool that, through the use of the sun's rays, allows you to take advantage of solar energy. During the cooler months, make the most of southern exposure by taking in as much sunlight throughout the day as possible. The reverse goes, of course, when it's hot outside. Shut the curtains to keep the warming rays of the sun outside during the summertime.

- Mitigate mold: Use products that enhance indoor comfort and air quality. Smart insulation products such as DryRight fiberglass insulation help wall cavities stay dry and help prevent the risk of damaging mold and mildew. Be sure to look for products labeled GREENGUARD Indoor Air Quality Certified.

- Hire a green team: The U.S. Green Building Council's Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design Web site lists their accredited building professionals. Visit usgbc.org to find a green pro near you.

Weekend Of Open Houses Features Affordable Homes On South Shore

Jack Conway Realtors, in conjunction with MassHousing and the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, is taking part in a first-of-its-kind weekend of open houses, featuring affordable homes around the South Shore.

The "Opportunity Knocks" weekend May 30-June 1 will introduce homebuyers to Conway properties, agents and its lender - Conway Financial Services. Conway has more than 500 properties which qualify for the MassHousing program, and will run hundreds of open houses over the weekend.

For information on the events, and the open houses, visit the website www.jackconway.com. Open houses which qualify for MassHousing financing opportunities are marked with the MassHousing logo, and easy to find. Or visit any one of the 40 local Jack Conway Realtors offices and pick up a list of "Opportunity Knocks" properties.

The event will kick off with six community homebuyer fairs across the state. Conway agents and CFS staff will be on hand at City Hall Plaza in Boston, Friday, May 30 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; as well as Brockton's Massasoit Conference Center and the Cape Codder Resort on Saturday, May 31 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. All of the events are free and open to the public.

"We want people to come out and see all the properties they can afford to buy that weekend," said Conway President Dick Cahill. "Home prices are down and rates are still low. Now is the time to buy."

QCAP Homebuyer Workshop Begins June 10

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will hold a first-time homebuyer workshop in Quincy on three evenings: Tuesday, June 10, June 19 and June 24.

The workshop will be held at 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor conference room, Quincy, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Attendance at all three sessions is required in order to receive a certificate of attendance. Sessions are open to everyone regardless of income, credit ratings, or downpayment availability.

The free workshop is sponsored by Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.

Workshop speakers are professionals from different real estate fields. Participants will receive a workbook, which contains references that pertain to homebuying.

Upon completion of the course, participants will receive a certificate, which is a prerequisite for down-payment closing cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required. For more information, contact Ann Marie Casey at 617-657-5319.

Just like Family

by Jay

With James it wasn't about making a sale, it was about developing a relationship with us. He had the ability to walk into a house and see its potential. He took the time to get to know what we wanted, a family-friendly atmosphere with room for the kids to play. He found us our dream home and even came by three months later to help open our pool! He wasn't just our CENTURY 21 Annex Realty agent, he became our friend.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

WILLARD VETERINARY CLINIC has opened a new location at 176 Willard St., Quincy. Formerly located at 126 Willard St., they have been providing veterinary care for the pets of Quincy and surrounding towns since 1984. The owner, Dr. Meg Connelly has been seeing patients on Willard Street since 1987. In their new location, Willard Vet has more capabilities for better serving their clients than in their previous location but they have been able to maintain their family type atmosphere as well as their high touch, friendly service. Celebrating the opening of the new state-of-the-art clinic are (from left) Mayor Tom Koch, owners Meg and Bob Connelly, Chris Fontaine, Project Manager from Commonwealth Building Inc. and Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative. Day, evening and Saturday appointments are available and can be made by calling 617-773-6565.

Breathe Easy Despite Peak Allergy Season

For most New Englanders, Memorial Day weekend kicks off a season filled with trips and outdoor activities. However, the holiday is also the peak pollinating season for most local plants which can ruin outdoor fun for many allergy sufferers.

A mix of a dry, warm spring with high winds has made the spread of pollen even more evident this year, with pollen exposure the worst at dawn and dusk. Dr. Lynda Kabbash, allergist with Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, offers these pollen-avoidance tips to help you minimize some of the debilitating symptoms associated with severe allergies during this long holiday weekend:

- Keep your bedroom pollen-free and end the allergy nightmare
- Toss clothes worn outdoors in a laundry hamper outside your bedroom
- Wash your hair and shower before bed to prevent the transfer of pollen from head-to-pillow
- If you have to sleep with the windows open, wash

Free Skin Cancer Screening, Interactive Exhibits

Community Health Day At Milton Hospital May 31

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, will host a "Community Health Day" Saturday, May 31, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The event will take place in the Highland Parking Lot and Highland Lobby on Milton Hospital's newly renovated campus at 199 Reedsdale Road, Milton. Admission is free and the event is open to everyone.

The event will feature an array of health-focused interactive exhibits, fun demonstrations and events for all ages.

The "Gallery of Health" will showcase exhibitors from the Milton Hospital family, as well the local community, covering such health issues as heart disease and skin cancer, and providing simple screenings and informative literature.

The "Gallery of Health" will also include a display of the "Supercolon," a fascinating, 20-foot-wide, eight-foot-high model of a human colon, which is sure to capture the attention of everyone in attendance.

Milton Hospital's skin cancer screening, one of its most popular annual health events, will coincide with Community Health Day, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the second floor, Brooks Wing, May 31.

Throughout the day, attendees will be treated to a number of presentations that promote healthy, active lifestyles including a performance by a Double-Dutch jump rope team and Zumba and Tai Chi demonstrations. In addition, an interactive exhibit area will feature a tour of a Fallon Ambulance, demonstrations by the Milton Police and a look at Milton Hospital's da Vinci surgical robot. Face painting, a DJ and a raffle of a child's bike, courtesy of Dave's Bike Infirmary, will round off the day.

Healthy and delicious food, such as lean burgers, veggie burgers and turkey dogs will be provided at affordable prices by Quincy restaurant Eatin' Healthy. Common Ground restaurant of Dorchester Lower Mills will serve their famous fruit smoothies and attendees will be treated to free samples of World of Grains, a new, all-natural whole grain cookie.

For additional information, contact Milton Hospital at 617-696-4600 or visit www.miltonhospital.org.

Beat Aches And Pains With These Outdoor Activity Tips

When beautiful, sunny weather replaces the gray skies of winter, many take advantage by getting outside and participating in a variety of activities such as gardening, golfing and hiking. But after the fun is over, aches and pains can kick in which can considerably decrease your sunny, outdoor plans.

The following tips will help you best enjoy some pain-free physical activity:

• Choose goof shoes: Make sure your shoes fit properly. When walking or hiking, avoid all styles that limit your foot's ability to move freely and naturally.

• Make physical activity a daily priority: If you are active on a regular basis, there's much less of a chance that you will suffer from the aches and pains commonly felt by those who are only able to fit in that long run on the weekends.

• Use a topical pain reliever regularly: After a long, hard day, rubbing a product such as Absorbine Jr., liquid into your aching muscles will lessen the pain felt the next morning. Botanical extracts like calendula, Echinacea, wormwood and menthol all work together to soothe even the sorest spots on the body.

• Warm up: Always warm up the muscles you'll be exercising before beginning any physical activity. Spend at least ten minutes stretching muscles in your shoulders, back, wrists and upper legs. When you have finished with your exercise, incorporate a cool-down period and stretch muscles out after your activity is over.

• Make use of proper equipment: All equipment used when doing any activity should fit correctly and be the right size for your skill level, age and physical strength.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE?

Imagine if all it took to prevent tooth decay in your children was to "convince" them to eat lollipops? This may not be as farfetched as it sounds. In fact, a professor with joint appointments in UCLA's dental and medical schools recently realized the benefits of diligent laboratory work when he and his team identified the natural ingredient found in licorice that kills the primary bacterium (Streptococcus mutans) that causes tooth decay. He then incorporated this agent into sugar-free, orange-flavored herbal lollipops that taste good enough for kids to lick them willingly. By eating the recommended two lollipops a day for ten days four times per year, the doctor hopes to greatly reduce tooth decay in children.

This column about loli-pops has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We believe in preventive dentistry. We know that you wish to receive your general dental care from a highly trained, caring staff; therefore, professionalism is very important to you. Our promise to you is that our office will provide you with dental care of the highest quality available, utilizing the most modern procedures and an extremely qualified staff. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Presidents Defeat W-H, Clinch Postseason Berth

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents clinched a Division I postseason berth, for the fifth time in the last six years, with an 8-7 victory over Atlantic Coast League foe Whitman-Hanson High School last week. The win, Quincy's tenth of the spring, assures that the Presidents will be playing ball when it counts the most.

"It is a great feeling to be getting ready to play once again in the post season," said Quincy head coach Mike Draicchio. "This will be the fifth time in the last six years that our team has made it that far. We are happy to be in, but there is more to be accomplished before the tournament begins."

Quincy (10-6 overall, 6-4 in the ACL) took a 7-2 lead after four innings against W-H, but the Panthers scored twice in the sixth inning to make it a one-run affair. The Presidents, who needed to use three pitchers to earn the victory, got on the scoreboard first with two runs in the opening frame.

Senior captain Ted Walsh singled and stole second to get it started. After a fielder's choice groundout off the bat of Joe Reggianinni forced Walsh at third for the first out, senior captain Mike LeBel doubled in Reggianinni with the first run. With LeBel on second base, senior captain Ricky Salvucci walked and senior Kyle Craig singled home Reggianinni with the second run. After an inning, Quincy held a 2-0 lead.

In the second inning, Edwin Nunez led off with a single. Colin McCarthy followed with another single and Walsh drove in Nunez with another single. LeBel and Salvucci connected on consecutive hits and after two innings the Presidents held a commanding 6- advantage.

In the sixth inning after the Panthers had clawed all the way back, Salvucci got the winning rally started with a single and a stolen base. With a runner on second, Craig came up huge. His RBI base hit drove in Salvucci with what turned out to be the winning run.

Senior Eric Englehart picked up his second win of the season on the mound.

"It was a huge win," added Draicchio. "The story of the game and the season has been the leadership and production shown by our three senior captains. Walsh, Salvucci and LeBel have shown all year that leadership and experience is vital to the success of this team."

"LeBel and Salvucci are both hitting above .400 and Walsh is hitting above .300. And their play defensively at second, shortstop and third base has been exceptional. LeBel and Salvucci are also our horses on the mound, pitching most of the innings. Combined the two of them are 7-2 and we wouldn't be where we are without the three of them."

"All three of them are leaders both on and off the field. They excel in the classroom (all are National Honor Society members) and that dedication translates to the diamond."

Earlier last week, Quincy

eked out a 1-0 win over Sandwich High School. LeBel (3-1) went the distance on the hill, allowing no runs while striking out eight batters and walking three. Quincy and LeBel wiggled out of a two-out bases load jam in the final inning to preserve the critical league win.

"Mike was outstanding on the mound," said Draicchio. "He shutdown Sandwich for the whole game and when things got interesting in the final frame he bore down and got the out he needed. That win was a great way to start last week and it was a big, big win."

The Presidents scored the lone and winning run in the fourth inning. Salvucci singled, Kevin Keith singled and Kyle Craig drove in Salvucci with a RBI base hit. LeBel shut Sandwich down the rest of the way and Quincy escaped with the 1-0 win.

Quincy ended the week with a tough 3-2 ten-inning loss to Marshfield.

"It was a great game all-around and we did enough good things to win but we just couldn't pull it out," said Draicchio.

Andrew Papile drove in a run with a successful suicide squeeze in the second and Walsh drove in the other run with a RBI single.

At 10-6 and with four games to be played this week, Draicchio's team will be looking to gain steam heading into the post season.

"Like I said, we are happy to be in but we have work still to be done. Our team motto all season has been 'one game at a time' and that is the way we will play the rest of the way."

Draicchio gave special notice to his two assistants, Tom Malvesti and David McMillian, for their work with the team this season.

"Dave and Tom deserve credit for our success. Both of them are important parts of this team."

Quincy played North Quincy last night (May 21) and the team ends its regular season with a road game against King Philip today (May 22).

Sacred Heart Travel Basketball Team Honored As State Champs

The Sacred Heart 5th grade boys travel basketball team, recent winners at the Reebok sponsored Massachusetts Travel Team Championship, met and received congratulations from Mayor Thomas Koch at City Hall.

Sacred Heart won the state title with a 51-46 victory over Methuen. The team went undefeated in five games against eleven other Massachusetts 5th grade travel or CYO champions from across the state to win the championship.

But it was the state championship, which was the defining moment of the team's incredibly successful season. Sacred Heart, coach by Rick Beach and Bernie Holleran, went undefeated in league play; won the South Shore Prep league title for a second consecutive year; were tournament champions at the Carver Invitational, Milton Invitational, and the North Quincy St. Patrick's Day tournament. The team also traveled to New York for the annual St. Mathews CYO Invitational, finishing as runner-up for a second straight year.

Over the last two seasons, Sacred Heart has an overall record of 47-7.

"The success that these boys have had playing basketball is a direct result of their hard work and dedication," said Beach. "Each player on this team understands the concept of team work. I am especially impressed with how each player has developed their skills over the past two years. That hard work and dedication was what ultimately won us the championship."

Point guard Tyler Beach directed the offense, contributing clutch scoring throughout the tournament. Colin Evans and Sean Holleran were major factors on offense and defense, while Pat Frasso and Pat Cook anchored the front court and turned in strong rebounding efforts.

Nolan Flynn and Greg Paulo turned in big games off the bench for Sacred Heart, as did David Suslowicz, Mike McDonald, Pat Keohane, Tim Murphy and Eric Cohane.

"One reason for our success over the past two seasons was the depth of our bench," Beach added. "Having the ability to bring in the second team, and not miss a beat was huge. I am proud of each player on this team and we look forward to defending our championship next year. Thanks to the parents and families for supporting us all year long."

Quincy Youth Baseball Major Division

The following are results from some of the early games in the Quincy Youth Baseball Major League Division:

Lions def. Burke Club

In the season opener for both clubs, Ryan Harty blasted a two-out, two-run walk-off homerun over the fence at the Quarry Hills ball field to give the Lions a 6-5 over Burke Club.

Joe Critelli singled and scored ahead of Harty. Andrew Jaehnig was the winning pitcher and also had a homer and a single in the win. John Yacano finished the game with a single.

For Burke Club, Colin Evans was the tough-luck loser on the mound while Ryan Maver, John Marsinelli, Kenny Sorenson and Alex Loughnane all pitched strong games.

Lions def. Beacon

Joe Cochrane notched his first win on the hill as the Lions knocked off Beacon by a 9-0 score. Cochrane helped his own cause with two hits and Gaelen Kurtzman had a key two-out two run single that sparked a big first inning rally.

A. Jaehnig (4-for-4) finished the game with two home runs and a double.

Andrew Currie had two hits for Beacon and Mike Coffey pitched well in relief.

Colonial Federal def. Lions

Cal Barrett pitched a gem as Col. Federal beat the Lions 6-4.

Connor McGonagle, Mike O'Donnell, Jake Hallisey and Brendan McDonald were the game stars for the winners.

Losing pitcher Mat MacPhail was the tough-luck loser for the Lions. The offensive star for the Lions was Jaehnig. He hit a home run for the third straight game.

Lions def. Kiwanis Club

The Lions roared back to score four runs in the last inning and take a come-from-behind 6-5 win over the previously unbeaten Kiwanis Club.

Ten-year olds John Campbell (double) and Matt McDonald (bunt single) each collected their first Little League hits to spark the comeback.

Winning pitcher A. Jaehnig (3-for-4), Greg Paulo (two hits) and Ryan Harty (two hits) each knocked in a run to tie the game.

For the Kiwanis Club, Steve Beaton (two hits including an inside the park HR), Steve Roche (RBI double), Mike Pugsley and AJ Shaughnessy each played well for Kiwanis.

League Standings

Lions (3-1), Kiwanis (3-1), Col. Federal (3-2), Quincy Police (3-3), Beacon (2-2), Rotary Club (2-2), Keohane's (2-2), Burgin Planters (2-2), Quincy Credit Union (2-3), Burke Club (2-3), Koch Club (2-3) and Elks (1-3).

Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball Highlights

The following are game results from the Quincy Babe Ruth League:

Houghs Neck def. Quincy Police

Ryan O'Connell pitched Houghs Neck to a 14-8 season-opening win over Quincy Police. He surrendered ten hits and four earned runs.

Derek Murphy finished with four hits and seven RBI. Luke McDonough and 13-year old Tom Garland had two hits each.

This was Houghs Neck

head coach Dave MacMillan's 47th season opener.

For the Quincy Police, Jim Nelson, Bob Lawlor, Dick Glynn and Joe Rooney had two hits each.

Houghs Neck def. Sons of Italy

Tim Luizzo gave up only one earned run on six hits and five strikeouts through six innings as Houghs Neck knocked off the Sons of Italy 13-4.

Luke McDonough went 4-for-4 (five RBI) with a home run to pace the offensive attack for the Neck. Derek Murphy finished with three RBI.

Paul Gould finished with three doubles to lead the Sons of Italy. Anthony Fonte started on the mound.

Houghs Neck def. Elks

Houghs Neck won a close game 6-4 over the Elks as Dan Higgins won his first ever Babe Ruth start as a pitcher.

Derek Murphy had two hits and a RBI, Tim Luizzo had a hit and two RBI and 13-year old Tom Garland pitched two innings of one-hit shutout ball.

League Title Within Quincy's Grasp

By SEAN BRENNAN

An Atlantic Coast League championship is within grasp this week for the Quincy Presidents.

At 13-3 overall and 9-1 in league play, the Presidents need to win two-out-of-three league games this week to capture the title. Quincy squared off against Falmouth HS (0-16, 0-11) on Monday night and played in the biggest game of the year last night against North Quincy (11-5, 9-2). If the Presidents won both games (Quincy beat second place NQ 3-1 in the team's first meeting) they would be ACL champions.

"This is going to be a very busy and big week for the team," said head coach Mike Sedar. "We open with Falmouth and then we have to go and play NQ in a huge game on Wednesday. It is in our hands at the moment. If we can take care of business we will be league champs."

The awesome starting

pitching of freshman star Kori Sorenson this spring has fueled the resurgence of the Presidents. Sorenson leads the ACL with a 13-3 record. In 105 innings pitched, she has recorded 121 strikeouts to go along with a .073 ERA.

Senior captain Mary Beth Torpey (ACL North leading .508 average) has fueled the offense.

"We are playing real well and our destiny is in our hands," added Sedar. "It all comes down to this week and I feel like we are up to the challenge."

Last week, Quincy dropped a tough 6-4 loss to ACL foe Whitman-Hanson. The defeat, the team's lone loss in league play this spring, eliminated the chance for a perfect league record.

"That was a tough loss," said Sedar. "But we have moved forward."

The Presidents held a 4-1 lead in the sixth, but the Panthers scored twice in the sixth and in the seventh, W-H had runners on second and third. Sedar chose to intentionally walk Danielle Mitchell (2-for-3) and pitch to freshman Alysha Huntington. That move backfired when she took the first pitch she saw from Sorenson and tripled to right scoring all three base runners. The clutch hit gave the Panthers a two-run advantage and they hung on for the upset win.

Sorneson pitched well in defeat, striking out ten batters. Erin Curran played a solid defensive game in left field.

Quincy closed the week with a win over Marshfield High School. Sorenson threw a two-hit shutout, striking out nine batters. Torpey drove in two runs with a triple.

SPRING CAR CARE

Free Car Care Guide Helps Motorists Save Fuel

Motorists who think the only way around high gasoline prices is hopping on public transportation or switching to a hybrid vehicle should think again. Better driving habits and regular vehicle maintenance can help any motorist save money by using less gasoline. According to the Car Care Council, simply replacing a clogged, dirty air filter can improve gas mileage by as much as 10 percent.

A new Care Guide tells motorists what to do in plain, non-technical language to maintain their vehicle for safety, dependability and value. The free guide, published by the Car Care Council, can be ordered on the council's website at www.carcare.org

The guide, which can be easily stored in a vehicle's glove box, explains the most common preventative maintenance procedures and repairs that need to be performed to help save fuel and keep cars operating safely and reliably, while maintaining their long-term value. It also includes a list of questions to ask when these maintenance or repair procedures are being done on a car.

To further familiarize motorists with their vehicles, the guide has clear, concise descriptions of 12 major vehicle systems and parts. Examples include steering and suspension, fuel and air intake, and belts and hoses. A Car Care Checklist is included to remind busy families which vehicle systems need to be maintained and when service or repair should be performed.

The Council notes that motorists who fail to pay attention to the basics such as driving with under-inflated tires, a dirty air filter or a gas cap that's damaged, loose or missing waste millions of gallons of gasoline every year.

Even the way we behave behind the wheel impacts mileage. Aggressive driving can lower gas mileage by as much as 33 percent on the highways and 5 percent on city streets, and sitting with the engine idling while waiting for friends or family gets zero miles per gallon.

The Car Care Guide is the source of information for the "Be Car Care Aware" consumer-education campaign promoting the benefits of regular vehicle care, maintenance and repair to consumers. For more information, visit HYPERLINK http://www.carcare.org

The Garden Bug

Parsley is one of the most nutritious of all herbs. It grows best in full sun and rich, moist soil, and is usually harvested in its first summer when it produces leaf stems with three segments. When its flowers (which resemble Queen Anne's Lace) appear in the second year, the foliage becomes bitter and less useful for cooking.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you might prefer moving forward at a steady pace, it might be a good idea to stop and reassess your plans. You could find a good reason to make a change at this time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Just when you thought you had everything planned to the smallest detail, you get some news that could unsettle things. But a timely explanation helps put it all back on track.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home and work continue to compete for your attention. But you handle it well by giving each its proper due. Someone you trust offers valuable advice. Listen to it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Unsettling news creates a difficult but not impossible situation. Continue to follow your planned routine, but keep your mind open to a possible change down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Lick your wounded pride if you like, but it's a better idea to find out why your suggestions were rejected. What you learn could help you deal with an upcoming situation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Feeling a bit listless? No wonder. You might be pushing too hard to finish everything on your to-do list. Cutting it down could help get your energy levels up.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Taking time out of your busy schedule might be the best way to handle that sensitive private matter. It will help reassure everyone involved about your priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Insist on full disclosure by all parties before agreeing to be part of a "great deal." What you learn should help you decide whether to go with it or not.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your decision to protect the secret that was entrusted to you might irk some people. But it also wins you the admiration of those who value trust and loyalty.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative activities take on a practical approach as you realize you might be able to market your work. Ask for advice from someone experienced in this area.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) If you're suddenly a bit unsure about your decision, ask trusted colleagues and/or friends or family members for suggestions that could help resolve your doubts.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A workplace situation could get stormy. But stay on course until there's a solution that meets with everyone's approval, and things can finally calm down.

BORN THIS WEEK: You keep an open mind on most matters, making you the confidante of choice for people who need your honest counsel.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

This Memorial Day our American Flag will be flying in memory of all who served in their country's time of need.

"I AM OLD GLORY... For over 200 years I have been the banner of hope and freedom for generation after generation of Americans, born amid the first flames of America's flight for freedom. I am the symbol of a country that has grown from a little group of thirteen colonies to a nation of fifty sovereign states. Planted firmly on the high pinnacle of American faith. My gently fluttering folds have proved an inspiration to untold millions. They have looked upon me as a symbol of national unity. They have prayed that they and their fellow citizens might continue to enjoy life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, which have been granted to every American as the heritage of free men. So long as men love liberty more than life itself; so long as they treasure the priceless privileges bought with the blood of our forefathers; so long as the principles of truth, justice, and charity for all remain deeply rooted in human hearts, I shall continue to be the enduring banner of the United States of America."...

F. Paul Scarnici, 80Barber, Korean War Army Veteran

A funeral Mass for F. Paul Scarnici, 80, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, a barber for 62 years, was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Scarnici died May 15 at the Colonial Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Born and raised in Quincy, he had lived in Braintree for 51 years.

Mr. Scarnici served his country in the U.S. Army during the Korean War.

He opened his own barber shop, Paul's Barber Shop in Weymouth Landing in 1951. He was a member of the American Legion Post 95 in Quincy.

Beloved husband of Celeste (Hermes), he was the father of Celeste J. Johnson of Braintree and Paul Scarnici of Franklin.

He was the brother of Larry Scarnici of Quincy and Harwichport and the father-in-law of Tobey and Elaine.

He is also survived by three grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Clancy-Lucid Funeral Home, Weymouth Landing.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Scot Allen, 54Veteran, Security Worker

Private funeral services were held for Scot Allen, 54, formerly of Quincy, who died May 13 of medical related complications.

Born in Malden, he grew up in Quincy and most recently had lived in Boston.

Upon graduation in 1972 from North Quincy High School, he enlisted in the Air Force.

After his service time, Mr. Allen spent many years working in the private secu-city industry.

He was an avid reader and was instrumental in helping many people through recovery programs over a span of three decades.

He is survived by his loving mother, Katherine, brother Jason, sister-in-law Ena and niece Tara, all of Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the New England Veterans Facility, 17 Court St., Boston, MA 02108.

Wilma F. McDonough

A memorial Mass for Wilma Florence (Donahue) McDonough of Quincy will be held at 9 a.m. Friday, May 23 at Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Mrs. McDonough died May 12.

She was the mother of Sean McDonough of North Quincy, Terence McDonough of Raleigh, N.C. and Erin McDonough of North Quincy.

She was the sister of Connie Riess of Atlanta, GA, Michael Donahue of Scituate, Edward Fowler of Duxbury and Liz Clements of Maine.

She is also survived by four grandchildren and several nieces, nephews and great nieces and great nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by the MacDonald Funeral Home, 1755 Ocean St., Marshfield.

Memorial donations may be made to the Sean McDonough Charitable Foundation, P.O. Box 710217, North Quincy, MA 02171.

Free Senior Medical Trips

Medical transportation with curb to curb service Mondays through Fridays is provided at no cost to Quincy seniors.

The service requires two weeks notice for trips, including those to Braintree Hospital, Carney Hospital, Milton Hospital and eight major hospitals in Boston.

To request a trip, call the Transportation Office at 617-376-1242

Daniel L. Cantelli, 78Former Linotype Operator

A funeral Mass for Daniel L. Cantelli, 78, of Quincy, a former linotype operator for The Boston Globe, was celebrated Tuesday in Saint John the Baptist Church, 44 School St., Quincy.

Mr. Cantelli died Sunday at the Boston Medical Center.

Born and raised in Quincy, he was educated in Quincy schools and was a 1949 graduate of Quincy High School.

He was a lifelong resident of Quincy.

Mr. Cantelli worked for the Boston Globe for 30 years. He also worked for the Boston Herald and for the Tribune Publishing Company. He retired in 1998.

Mr. Cantelli was a member of the International Typographical Union since 1959. Son of the late Mary B. "Molly" (Durant) Cantelli, he was the brother of the late Elizabeth G. Cantelli and dear friend of the late Mary

A. Lambert.

Interment was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Fr. Bill's Place, 38 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Bernazzani School Pathway To Be Dedicated To Jane Farrell-Smith

A Yellow Brick Road will be dedicated to the memory of the late Jane Farrell-Smith Friday, June 6, at 3 p.m. at the Charles A. Bernazzani School, 701 Furnace Brook Parkway.

Farrell-Smith was a second grade teacher at the school who passed away in October, 2006.

A memorial pathway has been created, along with a garden, with the logo of her beloved Red Sox on a granite bench. She also loved

"The Wizard of Oz," hence the Yellow Brick Road.

Light refreshments will follow the dedication.

GOP Committee Meets June 10

The Quincy Republican City Committee will meet Tuesday, June 10, at 7 p.m. in the second floor community room at Roche Brothers supermarket, 101 Falls Boulevard, Quincy Point.

All interested volunteers are invited to attend. For more information, call Jennifer Logue at 617-328-1384.

NQHS Students Send Care Packages To Troops In Iraq, Afghanistan

North Quincy High School students collected hundreds of items for American troops serving in Iraq and Afghanistan during a month-long campaign undertaken by the schools' chapter of Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA).

During the campaign, the roughly 60 FBLA members visited the high school homerooms and collected such items as chapstick, deodorant, sunscreen, shampoo, toothbrushes, toothpaste, pens and paper.

"We had an overwhelming response from students, faculty, and other groups, such as ROTC and our Learning Center," said Marcia Forrester, FBLA Advisor, who described the enthusiastic community effort that brought in substantial contributions.

Student volunteers then sorted the items and placed letters in each box. The letters told the soldiers how much the students appreciated their sacrifices and, also, reminded the troops that the people back home have not forgotten them.

Student volunteers helped deliver the dozens of boxes to CarePacks in Weymouth which arranges the transport to troops in the Middle East.

Founded in 2004, CarePacks is a nonprofit organization, staffed and managed entirely by volunteers whose goal is to provide soldiers with the supplies needed to improve their morale, mental health and quality of life.

The drive kicked off after FBLA Advisors Elaine Faber, Nancy Riley and Marcia Forrester outlined the CarePacks mission to FBLA members.

FLBA officers oversaw the drive. They are Marisa Forrester, president; Nicole Mann, Vice-President; Lisa Lee, Secretary; Sara Morris, Treasurer; Matthew Furey, Reporter and Chairperson Kerin Cox.

Frank Flora, Paul Reardon, and Derek Scott helped collected and deliver the packages to CarePacks in Weymouth.

Memorial Day Observance Aboard USS Salem Monday

The USS Salem will host a Memorial Day observance Monday, May 26, at 11 a.m., including a wreath laying ceremony and a reading of the roll call of Massachusetts men and women who have lost their lives in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Former Mayor James Sheets and Dr. William Anderson will discuss the history and meaning of Memorial Day and the conflicts in which the country has been engaged throughout its history.

The ceremony is open to the public free of charge and guided tours of the ship and museum will be offered afterward. For more information, call 617-479-7900.

Coast Guard Captain Urges

'Never Lose Focus On Memorial Day's Meaning'

Memorial Day may be the unofficial beginning of summer and we may look forward to a picnic and that first day on the water but that's not what it's all about.

"Let us never lose focus of what Memorial Day means," retired Coast Guard Capt. Maurice Dumas told the crowd Monday at Quincy Memorial Day ceremonies at the World War II

Podium in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

"There are many ways to remember our fallen heroes," he said. "The traditional way is with flowers and flags for their graves or with observances such as this.

"But if you asked our heroes before they died, how they would like to be honored, most would say, 'take care of my family.'

Koch: 'We're Going To Make Sure Every Drop Of Water Is Accounted For'

Unplugged Meters, Neglect, Cost City Many Thousands

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Unplugged meters and neglect have cost the city hundreds of thousands of dollars in water and sewer collections, according to Michael Coffey, Business Manager for the Department of Public Work.

In his report to City Council last week, Coffey described a water and sewer system where at least one large apartment complex never had meters installed, where water meters are illegally unplugged for lawns and boat washing, and where almost a third of the system's water is unaccounted for.

"I don't believe we are billing accurately for all the water we send out," Coffey said, noting that other communities report 15 percent of their water is not accounted for.

In Quincy, 32 percent of the water charged by the city supplier, the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA), vanishes and is not billed to anyone, according to Coffey.

"We want to account for that," Coffey said. He, later, indicated that corrections could take three to six months.

Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that he will support corrections in the reporting of water use. "Going forward, we are going to make sure that every drop of water is accounted for."

Koch, also, commended Coffey and DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville for their tireless work in identifying the issues.

During his report, Coffey said last year's sewer rate was set too low to cover costs. "The sewer rate was underestimated."

Coffey reported a $3.1 million shortfall in projected cash receipts for sewer costs and a total $3,841,291 deficit in the water and sewer enterprise funds. That's over $300,000 higher than the deficit previously reported to the City Council.

When councillors asked for estimated 2009 water and sewer rates, Coffey said the rates could increase by 10 to 14 percent above the current rates. However, he cautioned that not all the figures are finalized and the actual

Asian American Banquet To Aid China Earthquake Relief

The devastating earthquake that has left at least 80,000 dead and five million homeless in China has turned Saturday's Asian Pacific American Heritage Month banquet into one big relief effort.

"We will be asking those in attendance to give for earthquake relief," said John Brothers, executive director of the sponsoring Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI). "QARI will match their contribution."

The banquet an authentic 10-course Chinese dinner, will be held Saturday, May 31, at 6 p.m. at the China Pearl Restaurant, 237

JOHN BROTHERS

Quincy Ave., and will honor two QARI founders and three who have helped it progress.

The founders are Sheri Adlin of South Shore Day

Care Services and Beth Ann Strollo of Quincy Community Actions Programs (QCAP).

Those who have helped are the Rev. Adolph Wismar of the Wollaston Lutheran Church for his vision reaching out to the Asian community, the Harold Brooks Foundation for his contributions, and the unsung hero, Jenny La, QARI volunteer and festival coordinator.

Guest speakers at the banquet will be Dr. Paul Watanabe, director of the Institute for Asian American Studies at UMass-Boston, and the Rev. Wismar.

15 City Positions Affected

Council Votes 6-3 To Adopt Mayor's Budget Compromise

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Finance Committee voted 6-3 May 22 to adopt Mayor Thomas Koch's budget compromise which will eliminate $3 million from his proposed $233 million 2009 budget.

The three compromise opponents, including Committee Chairman John Keenan, supported a heftier reduction which would have scaled back the mayor's 2009 budget by $4.7 million.

Previously, the Finance Committee had unanimously supported a 3.5 percent cut in the police, fire and school department's proposed 2009 budgets and a five percent reduction in 2009 public works spending.

Koch's compromise reduced the Finance Committee's recommended $3 million cut in the school department's proposed 2009 budget to a $1.5 million cut.

However, Koch did itemize a reduction of 15 positions citywide by attrition or by not filling vacant positions.

While the committee discussed the city's budget problems, over 200 persons packed City Council chambers, lining aisles two and three persons deep, and listened from the Old City Hall stairwell.

On hand were dozens of uniformed police officers, firefighters in red shirts, and school supporters carrying SOS signs, reading "Save Our Schools." The majority applauded the council's vote for the compromise.

In a prepared statement read by Chief of Staff James Fatseas, Koch called his compromise "a middle ground."

The compromise, Koch said "...prevents closed fire houses, critically understaffed police patrols, larger class sizes and other potentially devastating cuts to city services that I will not support as mayor."

School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro, Deputy Fire Chief Gary A. Smyth, and Police Captain John Dougan outlined the devastating impact that cuts would have on their department if the proposed 2009 budgets are reduced.

All budget recommendations will result in real estate tax increases for the average homeowner, ranging from a high of $600 to a low of $470.

According to Chris Walker, Koch's Director of Operations, the average homeowners' bill will increase by $546 under Koch's compromise budget.

Koch's compromise budget reduces the 2009 school department proposed budget of $86,033,114 by $1.5 million.

However, the state's Chapter 70 funds which are expected to increase by $1.7 million in 2009 may provide a partial offset.

The actual school department budget for 2008 is nearly $83 million.

Councillor Joseph Finn and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi supported the $4.7 million reduction in public works, police fire and schools as recommended by Keenan.

"The choices you have are limited to begin with," said Finn, adding, the city was "perilously close" to the Proposition 2 1/2 limits. "It's critical to cut that 2 percent off the budget. The time for gamesmanship and quick fixes is over."

Keenan called this year's budget choices "stark."

In his report, Keenan analyzed the city's budget for the past five years. He cited substantial increases in the school department budget and concluded that the school department increases outpace other city department increases in the number of positions and in proportional salary increases.

"The number of School Department positions in the

Depression-Era CCCs Observe 75th Birthday

Massachusetts is in the middle of a year-long celebration of the Civilian Conservation Corps, the legendary CCCs, a Depression-era initiative that gave employment to young men in forests and other recreation areas.

The 100,000 men enrolled in the CCCs in the state planted trees and worked on forest fire prevention, insect pest eradication and built much of the state park recreational infrastructure.

Survivors of the CCCs era from 1933 to 1943 were hailed by Energy and Environmental Affairs Secretary Ian Bowles as models for the current Student Conservation Corps, its modern day successor.

"We owe them and the entire CCC a huge thank you for the work they did creating parks and improving open space and leaving a legacy of public service and civilian stewardship for generations to come," he said.

One of those attending the opening ceremony was CCC alumni Francis Derwin of Quincy, who shared his memories of those Depression years.

"I get goose pimples thinking about it today," he said. "It's not complicated, just the life experience growing up in the Great Depression and being part of a program that put energy into useful action."

"That kind of emotion has to be imparted to the youth of America today; let's face it, the youth of America is its success."

"By recognizing the CCC spirit of the time, DCR and the Student Conservation Association, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts keep the stewardship legacy alive."

A number of events are planned throughout the year to commemorate the work of the CCCs.

"This is a great way to commemorate the 75th anniversary and the great work performed by men in the 1930s, which, in many areas, is a living history of hard work and commitment to improving our public parks," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

Raymondi Seeks $65,000 To Restore Abigail Adams Cairn

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi has asked the Community Preservation Fund Committee for $65,000 to restore the deteriorating, 112-year-old Abigail Adams Cairn on Penn's Hill.

Over the years, serious cracks have developed in the historic stone tower that marks the spot from which Abigail Adams and her son, John Quincy, watched the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Raymondi's estimate of the cost is based on a preliminary assessment of Melissa McGrew, an architectural conservator for Building Conservation Associates of Dedham, who reviewed the structure.

"Residents of Viden Road have told me that there has been a spike in tourists visiting the Cairn," said Raymondi. "The time is right to restore it before the heavy tourist season starts."

The Abigail Adams Cairn

is more than just a Quincy monument, as the researches of Margaret Laforest of Historic New England into its origin have shown.

The stones that went into its construction in 1896 were collected far and wide, some from halfway around the world, some from as close as Abigail's birthplace in North Weymouth.

Other stones came from the battle grounds in Lexington and Concord, the Bunker Hill Quarry, the Congressional Library in Washington, Passamaquoddy, Maine; Plymouth Rock and the Parthenon in Athens.

One stone was taken from "the Crusher" in Houghs Neck.

"We'll keep the rocks," said Raymondi. "It's the mortar that needs changing."

Some 3,000 people attended the laying of the cornerstone to the Cairn on Bunker Hill Day, June 17, 1896, with the City Band and Company K of Braintree leading the parade from City Square.

Members of the Adams Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) and other patriotic societies were allowed to lay a stone. Charles Francis Adams donated the bronze tablet.

Special cars were attached to the trains leaving the Old Colony Depot on Kneeland Street in Boston for the Quincy Adams Station, Barges met the trains.

A tally-ho ride by horse and buggy brought members of patriotic societies and their friends, leaving the stable of Kenny & Clark, 100 Mass Ave., Boston, to go out through the Parkway over Milton Hill to Quincy.

It was, indeed, as the Daily Ledger headline pointed out: A Gala Day for the City."

City Plans to Take Quincy Fair Mall At $2M For Concourse

The city plans to acquire Quincy Fair Mall by eminent domain under a taking order issued by Mayor Thomas Koch May 19 and currently being reviewed by City Council committees.

The City Council must now approve a $2,010,000 purchase price which will allow complete demolition of the building and the city to purchase all rights to 10 percent of the land.

Quincy Fair Mall, located at 1563 to 1597 Hancock St., Quincy Center, currently houses the Registry of Motor Vehicles, a number of businesses including several restaurants and a fitness center. Two theaters at the site were closed in recent years.

The property owner is Messina Quincy Fair Properties, LLP, of Braintree.

At their May 19 meeting, councillors sent Koch's request to Council's Downtown and Finance Committees.

The Quincy Fair Mall property is the last major property needed to complete Phase 2 of the Concourse, a 4/5ths of a mile bypass intended to relieve traffic congestion in Quincy Center.

Morrissey Sees 'Appropriate' Senate Budget For Fiscal '09

State senators have passed a budget of $28.085 billion for Fiscal 2009, then girded for a conference committee fight with the House, which has approved a budget calling for $160 million more.

"The Senate recognized the current fiscal situation the Commonwealth is in and took the appropriate measures and made the hard choices to address it," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"Under a difficult fiscal climate, the Senate continued to place protecting local aid to our cities and towns and maintaining important programs for our most in-need citizens at the forefront."

One thing the Senate and House have reached an early agreement on is providing a 4.43 per cent increase in local aid to the state's 351 cities and towns, including $223 more in Chapter 70 education funding.

• On May 30, 1593, playwright Christopher Marlowe, 29, is killed. Marlowe had been arrested when "heretical" papers were found in his room. While out on bail, Marlowe became involved in a fight over a tavern bill and was stabbed to death.

• On May 31, 1859, in London the famous tower clock known as Big Ben rings out for the first time. Many claim the clock was named after the famously long-winded commissioner of works Sir Benjamin Hall. Another story argues that the bell was named for the popular heavyweight boxer Benjamin Caunt.

• On May 26, 1897, the first copies of the classic vampire novel "Dracula," by Irish writer Bram Stoker, appear in London bookshops. Dracula is the story of a vampire who makes his way from Transylvania to England, and preys on innocents there to get the blood he needs to live.

• On May 29, 1903, film, TV, and radio star Bob Hope is born Leslie Townes Hope in Eltham, England. After careers in vaudeville and radio, Hope's career as a film actor made him one of the most highly paid entertainers in Hollywood.

• On May 27, 1941, the German battleship Bismarck sinks in the North Atlantic near France. Three days earlier the British navy engaged the Bismarck in a ferocious battle. The Bismarck sank the battle cruiser Hood and escaped, but was leaking fuel and crippled when British warships finished her off.

• On May 28, 1957, National League owners vote unanimously to allow the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers to move to San Francisco and Los Angeles, respectively. In 2000, the two teams faced off in the World Series, the first "subway series" since the Dodgers and the Yankees met in 1956.

Barry And That Smile

Recreation Director Barry Welch seems to be having a hard time getting that king-sized smile off his face.

You would, too, if you had his luck. It was like having two Christmases back-to-back.

Last Christmas, the children gave Barry and his wife, Marilyn, tickets to a Red Sox game in May.

The exact date of the game didn't matter at the time or the opponent. It turned out to be May 19 with the Kansas City Royals.

The Sox pitcher was Jon Lester. And you know the rest. He pitched a 7-0 no-hitter.

He was the Sox's first lefty to throw a non-hitter since Mel Parnell did it against the Chicago White Sox, (4-0) July 14, 1956. And the 18th pitcher in Red Sox history to turn the trick.

Being at Fenway for a no-hitter is nothing new for the Welch family. Barry's son, Brendan, was there April 27, 2002 when Derek Lowe spun a 10-0 beauty against Tampa Bay.

Lowe, who was living in Quincy, was given a special day here in September 2004.

Brendan, who had kept the ticket to Lowe's no-hitter as a treasure, got him to autograph it during the festivities.

Barry, of course, has his ticket and hopes to one day catch up to Lester to autograph it.

And, by the way, another reason for that grin Barry is wearing: the seats to Lester's no-hitter were just above home plate.

WELCH

GOOD FRIEND Joe Fasci, long-time Quincy resident now living in Granbury, Tex. came back to the old hometown to visit family and friends.

He reports Granbury is booming with lots of gas and oil drilling going on.

But the good times are not for everyone.

Joe, a World War II veteran, is quite active in civic affairs and especially in the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars as a member and chaplain.

He told a sad story of a funeral that he and his daughter, Kathi, a county chaplain, officiated at:

"It was like something you see in the western movies. We were standing on a windswept wide-open cemetery making it impossible to hold any papers. Fortunately we know most of the ritual by heart.

"The deceased veteran had been cremated. His widow was ill. He left no money. A member of a local church gave her a small lot for burial of the ashes.

"Only eight people were present. One man dug a small hole to hold the box of ashes. And, the deceased's prized possession—a John Wayne lunch box."

Count your blessings!

PERSONAL: Just want to say solong to Fr. Raymond Kiley who completed his six-year assignment at St. John's church over the weekend.

A genuine, dedicated, modest priest he is taking a three-month Sabbatical before re-assignment in the Archdiocese.

Really going to miss those homilies sprinkled with humor, as many others will. He knows how to get your attention and his message across.

I remember the first time I met him and knowing he grew up in Yonkers, N.Y. I said to him: "Father, you're not a damn Yankee fan are you?"

"No, no, no," he replied. "I'm a Red Sox fan-honest."

I didn't realize then that he had some pretty deep roots here in the Boston area.

He worked 17 years with the children at the Perkins School for the Blind, learning Braille himself to help them. And he received a Masters in Education at Boston College.

His replacement at St. John's will be a member of the recent ordination class and is expected here in early June. Whoever he is, he has the good fortune of having St. John's as his first assignment.

Best wishes, Father Kiley. I know they're going to love you at your next stop.

A NOTE FROM Steve Keefe, well-known former Quincy lawyer and city solicitor. Settled in Arizona in 1991, he now lives in Prescott in the central part of the state and says it has some history of its own. Not as much as hometown Quincy but says:

"This small city was the territorial capital before statehood and has many historical places including a street called "Whiskey Row" that still has many salons located there. (Nothing like the Adams birthplaces.)

Steve's long-time friend, Atty. Sumner Gillette has been keeping him up on what's going on back in Quincy.

But now he is also getting it all with The Quincy Sun via mail.

Nice to hear from you, Steve.

Scenes From Yesterday

HENRY FINK, a Quincy photographer, published this 1920 postcard of Quincy Square. The view is from in front of City Hall looking along the fence of the ancient Hancock Cemetery. John Adams was among a group of citizens who in 1809 bought this cemetery and donated it to the town. His ancestors had been buried there since early in the 17th century. The iron fence was installed in the 1840's. In the distance can be seen the marquis of the old Alhambra Theater. The church steeple in the center was on the old Bethany Congregational Church that was replaced in 1929 by the Granite Trust building, now home to a Bank of America branch. The Quincy College Bookstore is located in the building on the right. The poster just visible on the right was for the Brockton Fair. Note that the angle parking for cars provided a lot more spaces than what it allowed along here today. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Sheets Calls For Anti-Litter Ordinances

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Pedestrians littering on public property and private property owners who don't keep their premises free of litter would be subject to a $25 fine under an ordinance proposed by Mayor James A. Sheets.

Sheets announced his administration is drafting a ticketing ordinance for litter. The mayor, who is using a Cambridge litter ordinance as a model, said he hopes to introduce such an ordinance at the June 4 meeting of the City Council.

The ordinance would need City Council approval before it is enacted.

METER FEEDING CRACKDOWN

Motorists who think they have out-manuevered city meter maids by feeding the meters in Quincy Square should think again.

Beginning this week the Department of Traffic and Parking will step up its enforcement of the exceeding meter violation, the so-called "meter feeding" in the Quincy Center business district, said Traffic Engineer David Kinnecom.

The city ordinance provides a one-hour time limit on all metered spaces on Hancock Street in the Quincy Square area between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. The one-hour limit applies even if additional coins are inserted to extend the time on the meter to avoid expiration.

Violators may be ticketed under Code 21 "Exceeding Meter Ordinance." The fine for this violation is $55 and violators may be ticketed more than once per day.

According to Kinnecom, the purpose of the ordinance is to ensure there is a regular turnover of parking spaces for customers and patrons of businesses in the Square.

READERS FORUM

How Will Concourse Revitalize Downtown?

I reading over the ongoing saga of the proposed Quincy Center Concourse and Mayor Koch's support for it, I'm stuck with the question no one has ever adequately answered: exactly what about this will revitalize the downtown?

If I understand this conrectly, all this multimillion dollar project is designed to do is provide a direct, wide lane link between Burgin Parkway and Southern Artery near Sea St. It isn't going to provide any more parking for Hancock Street; indeed, there are proposals to develop much of what parking space exists. It isn't going to provide any access from outside of Quincy that doesn't already exist over the Harold Bridge.

So we're going to tear down a number of businesses, tear up the roads for a good long while and spend many millions of dollars in construction and land takings...to make the morning commute for Houghs Neck residents faster?

Great for them. What's in it for the rest of us? Plainly I'm missing something here.

The Moral Decay of Massachusetts

I read with interest your Sunbeams column on the efforts to revive the Republican Party in Quincy. It is my opinion that the Republican Party will never revive in Massachusetts as long as it pursues the tired, true and failed formula of fiscal conservatism and social liberalism.

It is such a missed opportunity and a crying shame that social conservatives are not served by either the Massachusetts Democrat or Republican parties. There was a saying a couple of years back that the only Republican in high office in Massachusetts was Tom Finneran the Democrat. Of course, what was meant by that was that the only high state official holding traditional values was the socially conservative House Speaker.

Recently I attended a function at one of the parochial schools in Quincy. The vast majority of those present were Democrats. Nearly all were pro-life, pro-family and pro-traditional marriage. They are ill served by their party but have absolutely no reason to consider the Republican Party, as there is no difference between the two in Massachusetts in regards to the values that concern them.

As concerned as I am about the fiscal disaster brought about by Beacon Hill, I am more, far more, concerned about the moral decay of our Commonwealth. What a shame that neither party, Democrat or Republican is standing for me and the majority of concerned citizens of our Commonwealth.

A 'Thank You' From The Shea Family

The Patty E. Shea Memorial Fundraiser was held on Saturday, April 26 at the Sons of Italy Hall on Quarry Street. A standing room only crowd raised over $10,000 to fund scholarships for students with financial obstacles who attend Archbishop Williams High School and the Saint Ann School.

The Patty Shea Family would like to thank all those who helped make the benefit a reality. Services were donated by DJ Joe O'Malley, Comedian Jessica Casciano and Friends and Lt. Brian Tobin of the Quincy Police Department.

To those who purchased tickets, and donated prizes, money and time-we say thank you.

We would also like to give a special thanks to everyone who stood by us throughout the past year. Without the commitment of all involved this would not have been possible. To all of Patty's friends whom she loved so much and was loved by, thank you.

Marie's Kitchen

Shirley's Three Layered Dream Cake

My friend Shirley is one of the best bakers and recently during our phone conversation about what we did for Mother's Day, she told me about a dessert she had baked that day which sounded so delicious especially since it has pineapple as one of the ingredients, a favorite.

Because it is made with angel food cake, she stressed the fact that the dessert is better if made with an angel food cake mix instead of just buying a ready made one at the supermarket.

THREE LAYERED ANGEL FOOD CAKE

1 package Duncan Hines Angel Food

Cake

- 1 package vanilla pudding (uncooked)
- 1 large tub cool whip
- 1 large can crushed pineapple (leave juice in) fresh strawberries and blueberries for topping

Bake cake according to directions. When cooled, cut in three layers. Mix the vanilla pudding with the crushed pineapple until blended. Add the cool whip and mix.

On each layer, place the mixture and lastly on the top. Refrigerate for a couple of hour Just before serving add the fresh strawberries and blueberries to the cake for a fresh look.

Brownies' Pillows Raise Spirits Of QMC Patients

Patients at Quincy Medical Center have 36 new plush pillows available to them from the Comfort Cart, thanks to 10 kindhearted girls from Brownie Troop 4582.

The girls volunteered to sew the colorful, handmade pillows together and deliver them to the hospital along with handwritten notes attached to the pillows by the third graders themselves.

"We've found that many patients benefit simply from having someone spend some time with them," said Laura Klint, chair of QMC's Management Task Force and Compassion in Action program.

"That is a big part of what the Comfort Cart does. Knowing that these children cared enough to make these pillows especially for them is certain to make many of our patients feel better."

The Brownies were given a warm welcome by Dr. Gary Gibbons, the QMC president and CEO, and visited the emergency department where they had "hands on" training in treating stuffed animal boo-boos.

The Brownie girls who sewed the pillows were Natalie Lunney, Kelsey Dyer, Terry McMillen, Maeve Hernon, Clare Doherty, Grace Hall, Mia Healy, Lucia Buzzell, Margaret Powers and Jacquelyn Gaines.

June Photography Exhibit At Crane Public Library

Martin Grassie, a South Shore photographer, will present an exhibit called "Okeanus/Oceanus" from June 1 to June 30 in the Coletti reading room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St. A public reception will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. June 1.

The photo collection includes images of a Harp Seal that came ashore Sandy Beach in Cohasset in February, 2008. Grassie's photos try to convey the stress felt by the seal, eventually coaxed back into the ocean by the staff of the New England Aquarium, and some of the connection felt by the bystanders.

Grassie is a former elementary school principal and teacher and retired after 40 years. He taught science and mathematics to elementary students using the ocean as a lesson or example for many years.

Granite Railway Tours Ready For Tourist Boom

With most of Quincy's historical sites expecting a tourist boom from HBO's "John Adams" miniseries, the Mass Bay Railroad Enthusiasts have announced their monthly schedule of guided weekend tours of the Granite Railway in West Quincy.

The 3 1/2-hour "quarry to wharf" tours by van began the weekend of April 26-27 and continue May 31-June 1, June 28-29, July 26-27, Aug. 23-24, Sept. 27-28 and Oct. 25-26 with two tours at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Saturday and Sunday if the morning tour is filled.

Pre-registration is required and a $10 donation is requested of all participants.

The convenient meeting place is the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St.

The tour traces the remnants of the first chartered U. S. commercial railroad from the preserved 1826 Bunker Hill Ledge terminal in West Quincy down through the 1830 double track incline to the stone Neponset River wharf in East Milton.

For more information, call Vic Campbell at 617-822-4046.

Friends Of Wollaston Beach Kick Off 100-Year Celebration

It was a great night of memories at the May meeting of the Friends of Wollaston Beach (FWB).

After conducting some brief group business, the night shifted to the past, with awards being announced, and an eight foot screen being brought to life by Tom Galvin's presentation.

FWB President Neil McCole and several committee chairs updated the full house at the gym on Beechwood on the Bay on several key areas of business.

The updates included:

Event updates from Vice President Scott Smith, water quality updates from former President and current Water Quality Chair Kristen Awed-Ladas, and DCR communication and interpretative signage grant updates from McCole.

McCole said, "The $50,000 grant was still on the table from DCR for interpretive signage for Wollaston Beach, but that the city needed to move quickly to review and finalize their plans. The interpretive signs will highlight the history and natural features of the beach and coastline along the 2.5 mile walking trail providing educational opportunities for generations to come."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, at the request of FWB, highlighted the passion and commitment that the night's award recipient displayed for the Quincy Beaches and Coastline. Gutro was speaking of FWB Honorary Friend Award recipient Frank McCauley when he said, "There was one particular action that McCauley took in the early 1980's that forever changed the state of Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor.

"McCauley was the mayor who, on the advice of then City Solicitor William Golden, filed the lawsuit that eventually resulted in the clean up of Boston Harbor."

Gutro went on to tell the crowd that, "Thanks to his leadership more than 25 years ago, our generation and that of our children will have cleaner beaches and bays, a revitalized fishing industry, and newly opened clam beds for the first time in a generation."

McCauley graciously accepted his Honorary Friend

Award. He then addressed and entertained the crowd with his retrospective on the events. He closed by thanking FWB and the crowd and expressed his excitement over the FWB events planned for 2008.

To the delight of the crowd, Tom Galvin closed the night with a 90 minute presentation on the 100 Year History of Wollaston Beach. Highlights included the grand opening of the boulevard on May 30th 1908 with an estimated 5,000 people at Wollaston Beach that day.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelley will receive his Honorary Friend Award at Arts on The Shore on June 21.

teaching abilities and engaging approach to education.

Carline Pierretoussaint, a 2008 graduate, shared with her fellow graduates and attendees an account of her experience at Quincy College. She mentioned that she was hesitant to return to school because of her age, but she put her fears aside and made every moment of her time at the school worthwhile and memorable.

President Harris then presented Pierretoussaint with the Graduate Recognition Award for her achievements and involvement with the college. Pierretoussaint was active in the Quincy College community, participating in student clubs, volunteering at school events and serving as a work study student in the Admissions and Marketing Departments.

President Harris and the Quincy College Board of Governors lined up on stage and congratulated each graduate personally at the conclusion of the ceremony when degrees were awarded.

SUMMER OFFERINGS of flowers and plants at Quincy Farmers' Market.

Quincy Farmers' Market Season Starts June 20

The Annual Quincy Farmers' Market opening date is Friday, June 20 from 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the John Hancock Municipal parking lot off Chestnut Street, across from the District Court House.

Almquist Flowerland of Quincy will have their bedding plants, tomato and vegetable plants ready for a garden of patio. Glenn Stillman Farm and Greenhouses of Lunenburg, Freitas and Son Farm of Middleboro, and Serving our Selves Farm from Long Island of Quincy Bay will all have their varieties of vegetables.

"We hope to have strawberries by June 20" said Stillman. He will also have grass fed beef, farm raised pork and lamb in its freezer cases.

There are several new vendors this year. They are:

Hallowed Herbs teas of Quincy, Someone's in the Kitchen of Milton and Seacret Garden Herbal Skin and Body Care of Quincy, and Carolyn's Catering of Weymouth.

O'Brien's Bakery of Quincy and Panorama International Bakery of Newton are returning this year.

Anneli Johnson, who is liaison between the farmers and the city said, "It is an opportunity for small scale farmers and entrepreneurs to test the market and introduce their products to the public."

Johnson estimated that food travels an average of 1,600 miles before it reaches the table, therefore shopping at local farmer's market is a smart choice to reduce the food miles. She added that Quincy Farmer's Market growers come from within 50 mile and less radius.

For more information, call Johnson at 617-4679-1601, or Valerie at 617-479-8750.

Former Quincy Man Raising Funds For Ailing Kids Camp

An Air Force staff sergeant with deep roots in Quincy is planning to run in the 33rd annual Marine Corps Marathon to raise funds to send an ailing child to summer camp.

Christopher Moody, a 1997 graduate of North Quincy High School, now an Air Force instructor in Pensacola, Fla., will be running for "Team Hole in the Wall" in the marathon Oct. 26 in Washington, D.C.

Moody is committed to raising $3,000 to send one child suffering from a serious illness like cancer, sickle cell anemia, HIV/AIDS and hemophilia to a Hole in the Wall Camp for one session.

"Every summer at Hole in the Wall camps, hundreds of children become athletes and actors, painters and poets, swimmers and singers, clowns and canoe paddlers, naturalists and equestrians," said Moody.

"It is amazing what these campers accomplish in one week, just as amazing are the obstacles they overcome on a daily basis. Camp helps keep them going throughout the many challenges."

Donations to the cause may be sent to Christopher Moody, 13928 River Road, Unit 705, Perdido Key, FL 32507.

The Association of Hole in the Wall Camps, founded in 1988 by the actor Paul Newman, has provided summer experiences for more than 114,000 youngsters from 50 states and 32 countries, free of charge.

Moody grew up on Wilson Avenue on the border of Wollaston and North Quincy, the son of Frank Moody, owner of the Frank M. Moody Plumbing Co.

He graduated from Embry Riddle Aeron University in Daytona Beach, Fla., took basic Air Force training at Lackland Air Force Base and is currently pursuing a masters degree at Troy State University in Troy, Ala.

L. G. Henley Offers Same Popular Services At New Location

Seventy years almost to the day after its founding in a tiny storefront on Beale Street in Wollaston, the L. G. Henley Company, Inc., has moved into more spacious quarters at 20 Branch St., South Quincy.

The only things that haven't changed over that time are the telephone number, 617-773-0333 (President 0333) and, says its owner, David A. Abbott, "the same professional service as always."

The floor covering store traces its origin back to the spring of 1938 when Laurie Gerald Henley open his first store on Beale Street.

Two years later, he moved to a larger spot at 5 Brook St., South Quincy, where he shared an area with the A & P Supermarket, McFarland's Hardware, the Pay & Take Bakery and Charlie Tom's Laundry.

In those early days, it was a store where customers could come and pick out their floor covering and L. G. Henley would provide the installation of their new floors.

The concept has not changed very much over the years, except most of the floor covering selections are done in the home and service has been expanded to include bathroom remodeling, carpeting and counter tops.

Laurie Gerald Henley retired in the late '70s and one of his long-term employees, William A. Abbott, took over the business and continued on with the same services at the same location.

And when Bill retired and another generation came along, his son, David, became the owner of the business and once again the same customer-based services were preserved.

"We are amazed how many of the grandchildren of some of the original customers that Mr. Henley had back in the '40s, '50s and '60s that we are doing work for today," said David Abbott.

"We continue to provide the same professional services as always. Our experience is your insurance."

City Plans to Take Quincy Fair Mall At $2M For Concourse

Once completed, the concourse will skirt Quincy Center and allow a single four-lane East-West roadway from Granite Street to Southern Artery with direct access to Burgin Parkway.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington said the city is still reviewing data on several minor properties which must be secured. These do not involve any demolition.

Former Mayor William Phelan kicked off Phase 2 last summer with the demolition of the Taneline Tan building at 148 Parkway which the city purchased in 2006 for $650,000.

The structure at One Revere Road has already been demolished and the structure at 14 Revere Road has been put out to bid for demolition this summer.

According to city records, the city purchased 1601-1621 Hancock for $2,825,000 in 2007; 1596-1602 Hancock St. for $850,000. Records for the other purchases are not available.

At this time, Peter W.

Sleeper Associates are handling the relocation of tenants displaced by the Concourse takings.

According to a report from Sleeper Associates, the company has helped relocate 10 tenants beginning in February, 2007. Seven of those tenants relocated their business in Quincy.

To date, relocation payments for the tenants total $2,007,152 with the highest payment to a restaurant for $637,000. Two payments are pending and one business is still negotiating.

Asian American Banquet To Aid China Earthquake Relief

Tickets are $35 per person and $300 for a community table of 10. Contact QARI at 617-472-2200 for tickets.

Two weeks after the May 12 earthquake, the Asian community in Quincy has contributed mightily to earthquake and cyclone relief in Sichuan Province of China and Myanmar (Burma).

"Volunteers from Kam Man and the 1000 Buddha Temple on Massachusetts Avenue put out collection boxes in the marketplace and collected $28,000 in three days," said Brothers.

"QARI has joined the Boston Sichuan Coalition, which will forward funds, including those raised by the Earthquake Relief Walk, to the Tzu Chi Foundation and American Red Cross Relief Funds.

"As part of these efforts, we will accept donations from these charities at the banquet. We are proud to announce QARI will match, dollar for dollar, all donations up to a certain amount."

Donations can be earmarked for either China or Myanmar. Those that are unable to get past the barriers set up by the Burmese government will be redirected to China.

Those unable to attend the banquet at the China Pearl but want to donate to the relief funds, may do so at the QARI office or by mail to QARI, 1509 Hancock St., Suite 209, Quincy, 02169.

Marco Yeung Awarded B.C. High Scholarship

William J. Kemeza, president of Boston College High School, announces Marco Yeung of Quincy, an eighth-grader at Central Middle School, has been named a recipient of a Boston College High School Ignatian Scholarship.

This year, Boston College High School has awarded

$3.5 million in scholarship and financial aid to qualified students from all six-class years.

The scholarships were awarded to students from a diverse and highly competitive applicant pool to the BC High class of 2012.

Yeung was selected based on his outstanding work on the entrance examination, recommendations from teachers and distinguished academic performance at Central Middle School. He will join the BC High Class of 2012.

"We have carefully selected the most qualified young men from a highly competitive applicant pool to become part of BC High's over 140-year tradition of academic excellence, character development and service to others," Kemeza said.

"At BC High, they will be challenged in a nurturing and supportive environment and will graduate as leaders marked by competence, conscience and compassion; leaders who will engage our Church and our world."

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1,300 students from some 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

Unplugged Meters, Neglect, Cost City Many Thousands

water and sewer rates will not be set until June.

On the upside, Coffey said that the state's sewer rate relief fund has been fully funded this year and there may be some rate relief.

In addition, Coffey reported that the city's collection rates have increased in recent months by ten percent from the low 80's to the low 90's.

At this time, has been no decision as to whether the $3.8 million water and sewer deficit will be covered through a rate increase or by tapping the city's Stabilization Fund.

Using Coffey's estimate, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee gauged a "$373 increase for the average household and you're going to get a tax increase as well."

This will be the first year that city accounting has segregated all of the costs of water and sewer delivery into water and sewer enterprise funds as recommended by federal municipal accounting standards.

As a result, all costs must be borne by the city's ratepayers.

Previously, water and sewer cost deficits would have been covered by the General Fund and collection or billing problems missed. The previous administration established the enterprise funds which are taking effect now.

"The water and sewer rates were subsidized by (real estate) tax dollars," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, adding that enterprise funds, "...truly shed a light on the true cost of providing water and sanitation services."

The new system requires oversight and Coffey said, "A lot of money was being left on the table."

Coffey described several instances of neglect whereby the city has been "underbilling one large apartment complex by 90%."

In another instance, there are no water meters at the homeless shelter named "Father Bill's Place," costing the city $150,000 over a number of years, according to Coffey. He said there could be an agreement with the city.

In fact, John Yazwinski, President of Father Bill's Place and Mainspring, said,

"We have a lease with the city that says the city shall be responsible for all water and sewer charges for the premise."

Yazwinski said the lease agreement originated during Mayor James Sheets' term. The city put the property out to bid in 2006 and the current lease expires in 2011, he said.

"We are finding those issues every single day," said Coffey who described instances where meters are deliberately bypassed. In one case, dock workers appear to have shut off the water "when a marina services its docks every weekend."

"It's shocking. Coffey said, adding "Some of them go back many, many years."

"We're tracking 30 to 40 (cases) right now," Coffey said, noting that his staff has SEVERAL HUNDRED SPECTATORS, including uniformed police officers, firefighters in red shirts, teachers and parents, filled City Council chambers last Thursday as the Finance Committee reviewed the sewer and water fund and Mayor Thomas Koch's 2009 proposed budget. At the podium is Michael Coffey, Business Director of the Department of Public Works.

sent letters in cases of suspected theft. "We intend to prosecute. If the bolt (on the meter) is broken, you get a $1000 fine."

"We're pursuing them," said Coffey, adding that the police are already involved in four to five cases which could involve $5000 to $6000 a year in lost revenues.

However, Coffey said the department has not solved the "rollercoaster" billing issues described by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

For more than a year, Raymondi has reported numerous instances where his constituents get estimated bills repeatedly and then receive an overwhelming actual bill. For example, one resident reported a $224 bill and, then, a $776 bill.

Coffey said that, eventually, new technology will allow the city to read all meters from outside a structure in one day. To date, that system has not been installed for the city's 24,000 households.

Until such a system is in place, Coffey recommended that residents should call the DPW at least by their second estimated bill for an actual reading.

Quincy Workers Need Jobs!

Times are tough. Businesses are closing. Funding is being cut. People are getting laid off. Prices of gas, food, heating oil and the necessities of life are going up.

Quincy law requires contractors on public construction projects to fill vacancies with Quincy workers. A huge project like the new Quincy High School could put a big dent in Quincy's unemployment.

But only if all contractors on the Quincy High School project obey Quincy city ordinances. And employers like D'Agostino Associates (the mason contractor) have not been hiring Quincy workers.

Tell Mayor Koch (376-1990) – QUINCY WORKERS NEED JOBS and our tax dollars for Quincy High School construction is one way to get those jobs. Make all contractors obey the law. That includes CORI-checking each worker, especially those from out of town, to see if they have a criminal record making them unfit to work around our children.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Stove Top Grease Fires

I was sent a video through email. It featured a public service announcement from England. In it there was commentary on how to respond to a stovetop oil or grease fire.

Generally, the advice within it was sound with one important exception. I wish it were available for all to see where the graphics made and impression on me. When it comes to fire, the visual impact of an interior residential fire is a major selling feature for household fire prevention.

In this video, there was a small-contained oil fire within a pan on the stovetop; they called it a "chip-pan." Oil had been overheated to its ignition temperature and ignited. They then gave step-by-step advice on how to deal with this type of incident correctly.

With a stovetop grease fire, if you approach the fire safely, turn off the heat sources from the burner. Particularly if the grease fire is not impinging on any adjacent combustibles, resist the urge to remove the pan from the stovetop.

Two things can happen if you decide to remove the pan; first, in the excitement, with spillage, a skin burn can ensue by contact with the hot oil while further spillage can ignite any exposed combustibles, clothing, cabinets, curtains, etc.

I'll convey here what I feel should be done if one can do so safely. It is something I recommended years ago when I conducted presentations on home fire safety.

Whenever you use a pan to cook on a stovetop, particularly if oil or grease is involved, take the lid out with it and place it somewhere within reach. In that unlikely event of a fire, you can then shut off the burner, grab the lid, placing it on top of the pan, extinguishing the fire by eliminating oxygen access to the burning surface of the oil. Then leave the pan as is, with the cover on, until the oil within cools.

Why? This is because the hot oil can reignite if the lid is removed when oxygen is allowed back onto the surface. Waiting allows the contents to cool below the ignition temperature once again.

I cannot tell you how often in the past that I have responded to stovetop fires and found burnt hand towels as well. Without a lid, while knowing enough not to use water on grease fire people often attempt extinguishment by throwing a towel over the surface of the pan. You then not only have a grease fire, but a towel fire, too.

In this video, the actor carefully placed a wet towel over the surface of the pan. This was the advice on the video that I disagree with while I feel it's worth mentioning here; an accessible pan cover is much safer to use.

In this instance, any water is too risky, even that on a dampened cloth; while water thrown on a grease fire will severely agitate the contents escalating the flames to ceiling height. Doing so, you have then taken that big step towards creating a structure fire where curtains or cabinets are then involved in flame, or worse, where serious burns ensue.

The narrator of the video made the decision to use water and suffered disfiguring burns. That vision alone prompted this article. Poor choices made at difficult times while that ounce of forethought and preparation can make the difference at an incident or in a life.

"That's why retired General Moore tells us in his book, 'We Were Soldiers,' that the last words of many dying warriors is 'tell my wife I love her.'"

"That is also why in his second inaugural address Abraham Lincoln included widows and orphans when he asked the government to 'care for those who shall have borne the battle.'"

"Remembering our fallen once a year is not nearly enough. The widows, widowers, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, aunts and uncles remember every day."

"The empty seats at the table, the smaller gathering on Thanksgiving and the voice of a loved one heard only as a distant memory in one's mind are constant reminders that they are gone."

Dumas urged the crowd to put aside their political differences on the war in Iraq and get behind the troops on the battlefield.

They deserve our full backing both here and abroad, not just by holding ceremonies such as this, but MAYOR Tom Koch delivers greetings from the city.

STEPHEN DUNLEA, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, welcomes the crowd to the ceremonies/by making sure they have the resources, equipment and manpower they need to succeed," he said.

"Whatever your position is on our present day war, we must always support our service men and women and we must fulfill our commitments to them when they return home."

"Whether a war is popular, as in the case of World War II, or unpopular, as in Vietnam, the sacrifice is the same for those who have died in the service of this nation in wars and conflicts since 1775."

ROBERT NOBLE, former World War II POW, reads poem 'In Flanders Field.'

City Council Commends Girls' Hockey Champions

City councillors recently commended the 45 Quincy girls' hockey players who set a record this season.

The Quincy Youth Hockey Girls, in only their fourth season, won the championship at each level in the South Shore Conference for the 2007-2008 season. That's the first time that record's ever been set in the conference.

City Council President Jay Davis said that each girl in the Quincy league deserved recognition and noted that, just a few decades ago, there were no similar teams for girls.

The following coaches players were honored and presented with commendations: Coaches: Russ DiPietro, Steve Burgio, Larry Kelly, Mike Tabcek, Rich Noone, Charles Seviour, Paul Bythrow, Chris Shaughnessy, Steve Gillespie.

New Appliances Save Space, Provide Reliable Performance

To many consumers these days, purchasing a washer and dryer more closely resembles buying a car than an appliance to wash clothes.

While the process can seem a little daunting, taking advantage of the features that fit your laundry style translates to better-looking, longer-lasting clothes, energy-efficient performances and, most importantly, less time in the laundry room.

Consider the following before setting out for the store:

Understand your options

One of the biggest mistakes consumers make is not measuring their laundry space and doorways before heading out to shop. Until recently, the best-selling stackable front-loading laundry pair came in one height. But now, leading brands of laundry, space and organization offer options that suit every laundry room configuration.

Know your own expectations

Consider the features you will actually use. If you are an empty nester or young professional, capacity might not be at the top of your list. Time, however, might be very important. For those concerned with energy and water use, look for appliances that are ENERGY STAR-rated to ensure the highest in efficiency. Another thing to look for is drying time and how it relates to washing time. The same washing and drying time means that two loads are finishing simultaneously.

Where does durability come from?

Finding out what's "under the hood" of your appliances can translate to long-term satisfaction. When talking about laundry appliances, the stainless steel washtub reigns supreme. Stainless steel can withstand even the most demanding household loads and provides the smoothest surface, so it's gentler on fabrics.

Other elements to look for are sturdy hinges and knobs, and solid steel base-frame. And always ask about important components such as pumps, motors and dryer rollers so you can compare and buy the most durable appliances on the market.

Today's laundry market is crowded with choices. Avoid feeling overwhelmed or purchasing an appliance that doesn't meet your needs. Think about what you like about your current laundry pair and what you would change. Take that, and your measurements, with you when you shop.

Paint-Brush Hassle

Q. When I have a painting task around the house, sometimes I don't get finished with it in the same day (or even the same weekend). I get really frustrated because I spend so much time cleaning brushes. Is there a faster way to clean up so I'm not so burnt out for the next day's painting? —Greg L., via e-mail

A. If you're breaking for a few hours or overnight, there are a couple of methods to keep the brushes soft without having to clean them.

When it's time to break, wipe the wet brushes on the edges of the paint can or tray to drain off as much excess paint as possible. Then, try one of these two tips:

—Store the brushes in a plastic sandwich bag. If you are using latex paint for the job, add about a teaspoon of vinegar to the bag. The bag shut with string or a rubber band wrapped around the handle.

—Refrigerate them: Wrap brushes in aluminum foil or place in a plastic bag and place in a refrigerator for up to eight hours. If you can't start the project until next weekend, place the wrapped brushes in the freezer, then thaw them out the night before resuming the paint job.

To clean brushes without as much elbow grease, suspend them in paint thinner for a half-hour to two hours. Attach the brush to a flat wooden paint stirrer (another reason to grab lots of these at the paint store) using a rubber band, and slide the stirrer into a can of thinner so that the bristles are submerged in the thinner.

Cleaning Your Grill Will Extend Its Life

Have you put cleaning your grill on the bottom of your to-do list?

You are not alone. According to the 19th Annual Weber GrillWatch Survey, 38 percent of grill owners say they clean their grill from once to a few times a year. And six percent admit they have never cleaned their grill.

"A quality grill should last for years," said Ernie Boys, vice president product management, Weber-Stephen Products, Co. "With regular maintenance and cleaning, you can extend the day-to-day performance and ultimately, the life of your grill."

Boys recommend instituting a daily and monthly cleaning regime depending on how often the grill gets used. As a rule of thumb, grills should be cleaned before each use. Burn off any residue by turning the grill on high, and then brush the cooking grates with a stiff wire grill brush.

For a deep cleaning, inspect and clean the cooking grates, burner tubes, Flavorizer bars (or heat distribution system), warming racks, exterior elements, and grease collection tray. You will need a wire grill brush, fine steel wool pads, mild dish soap, a sponge or dishcloth, and a 1-inch putty knife.

Start by turning off the gas supply and follow these steps from Weber:

Stop the Blockage

Clean the burner tubes of any blockage, which restrict gas flow and may prevent the burners from lighting. To clean tubes, brush the portholes with a stainless steel wire brush in an up-and-down motion. Do not brush lengthwise across the ports, as this will only push debris from one hole to another.

Hold On To The Flavor

Many grills contain heat distribution systems such as Flavorizer bars to help prevent flare-ups. Occasionally brush the bars with a grill brush or scrape with a putty knife. Then wipe a rag in warm, soapy water.

Clean Warming Racks

A soapy, fine steel wool pad will keep the warming racks and grill baskets clean and free of smoke stains and debris. Rub the racks gently and then rinse thoroughly.

Get To The Bottom Of It

Remove the bottom tray from under the grill and place over a trashcan. Carefully scrape the inside of the grill with a putty knife and push the residue through the bottom hole. To deep clean the tray, use warm, soapy water and a fine steel wool pad. Check the catch pan liner monthly and replace when needed.

Make It Shine

Clean grease drippings on exterior surfaces by using mild, soapy water. Never use an abrasive, lemon-based or oven cleaner, as it can scratch the stainless steel or remove the paint finish. If you have stainless steel finish, use an environmentally friendly stainless steel cleaner and a soft cloth to give it a nice shine and remove fingerprints. For porcelain enamel, use a cloth and warm, soapy water.

While cleaning the grill, take stock of any worn or corroded pieces. Call the manufacturer's customer service to order replacement parts. Help keep the grill protected from the elements by investing in a durable, weather-resistant cover.

Planning The Big Move

Moving day can seem like a nightmare.

The movers do not come. A blizzard hits, causing treacherous traveling conditions on the big day. Great-grandmother's fine bone china? Shattered at the bottom of a cardboard box.

Moving day nightmares can take on many forms—hundreds of people shared their horror stories of moving days gone awry at www.makingyourmove.com.

But moving can prove painless. Duck brand provides these solutions to real-life moving nightmares:

- Your moving company arrives late, then charges you for the extra time it took to move: Do extensive research before choosing a moving company. Get referrals from past customer, and make sure all the details of the delivery are confirmed on paper, including any additional costs that may be incurred.

- Your attempt to transport your priceless antique ends in shattered pieces: Take the extra time and care when packing breakables—wrap items in Bubble Wrap cushioning or packing paper. Label fragile items on the outside of their boxes.

- Your pet gets lost during the move: Include your dogs, cats and turtles in your pre-move headcount. For identification purposes, keep an updated photo and description of each pet with you. Once you arrive at your new dwelling, place pets in a safe room with a sign on the door to prevent escape.

- A thunderstorm hits on moving day, knocking out power at your new place: Check weather reports and make sure you have a back-up weather plan. Pack a first-aid kit with contact numbers, medications, first aid supplies, flashlights, batteries, a tool kit, snacks, bottled water, sleeping bags and extra clothes.

- You spent hours cleaning your old place before leaving, only to find a mess in your new home: Clean your new home before unloading boxes. Tasks like cleaning, sweeping, laying down shelf liner and baby-proofing should be at the top of your to-do list.

Moving does not have to be a taxing and stressful process. With a little help and preparation, moving into your new home can be quicker, easier and more enjoyable than expected.

Ab Machines or Classes?

Q. My gym has a number of abdominal machines that members can use. The gym also offers 15-minute abdominal classes taught by a personal trainer and performed on floor mats. Which type of abdominal exercises work best — machines or floor exercises?

A. Choosing the right type of method to exercise a muscle group can be overwhelming at times. Machines, stability balls, medicine balls and floor exercises all present options for strengthening abdominal muscles. Choosing the better option means selecting the method that will be best for YOU!

The abdominal region is usually referred to as the core, although the core actually involves back and chest muscles as well. These other muscles also are involved in abdominal exercises. Remembering this can help you determine which type of exercise will help you achieve your goals.

Abdominal machines are usually designed to truly isolate the abdominal region and use a forward-bending motion with added weight to engage the muscles of the abdomen. Your arms and/or shoulders are used to achieve this motion, while your legs are either stationary or move with the motion of your upper body. These types of machines are best for people who may need the structure and security of using a machine that can control and isolate these muscles without risking injury to the lower back.

Many abdominal classes instructed by a personal trainer are a great way to work your "core" under the watchful eye of a professional. Abdominal classes typically focus on strengthening the whole core region through a series of exercises. These exercises use your arms and legs and involve stability and medicine balls, tubing or other exercise toys. They're usually done on the floor, on a stability ball or standing. Most classes involve movement in different directions to promote stability throughout the core region. These classes can be useful for participants to teach them the proper form and technique necessary for safely completing abdominal exercises.

No matter which type of exercise you choose to strengthen your abdominals, remember to choose an option that will help improve the strength and function of your entire core region.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Andrea Renee Wyatt, M.S.S., C.S.C.S., is a personal trainer with an extensive background in strength and conditioning as well as therapeutic recreation. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

QMC Receives American Heart Association's 'Get With The Guidelines' Achievement Award

Quincy Medical Center recently received the American Heart Association's Get With The Guidelines—Coronary Artery Disease (GWTG-CAD) Silver Performance Achievement Award.

The award recognizes Quincy Medical Center's commitment and success in implementing a higher standard of cardiac care that effectively improves treatment of patients hospitalized with coronary artery disease.

Under GWTG-CAD, patients are started on aggressive risk reduction therapies such as cholesterol-lowering drugs, aspirin, ACE inhibitors and beta-blockers in the hospital and receive smoking cessation/weight management counseling as well as referrals for cardiac rehabilitation before they are discharged.

Hospitals that receive the GWTG-CAD Silver Performance Achievement Award have demonstrated for at least one year that 85 percent of its coronary patients (without contraindications) are discharged following the American Heart Association's recommended treatment guidelines.

"The American Heart Association applauds Quincy Medical Center for its success in implementing the appropriate evidence-based care and protocols to reduce the number of recurrent events and deaths in cardiovascular disease patients," said Gregg C. Fonarow, M.D., National Chairman of the Get With The Guidelines Steering Committee and Director of Ahmanson-UCLA Cardiomyopathy Center. "Quincy Medical Center has achieved a high level of performance in terms of implementing these life-prolonging treatments."

"Quincy Medical Center is dedicated to making our cardiac unit among the best in the country, and the American Heart Association's Get With The Guidelines program is helping us accomplish that by making it easier for our professionals to improve the long-term outcomes of our cardiac patients," said Aishia Springer, RN, BA, Manager of Cardiovascular Services. "We are pleased to be recognized for our dedication and achievements in cardiac care."

The American Heart Association's GWTG program is designed to increase the use of and adherence to the association's secondary prevention guidelines for coronary artery disease. Developed to assist healthcare professionals follow proven standards and procedures before patients are discharged, GWTG-CAD can help Quincy Medical Center reduce the risk of recurrent heart attacks and death in treated patients. The program, which works by mobilizing teams in acute care hospitals to implement American Heart Association/American College of Cardiology secondary prevention guidelines, was developed with support from an unrestricted educational grant from Merck & Co., Inc.

According to the American Heart Association, approximately 565,000 people suffer a new heart attack and 300,000 experience a recurrent heart attack each year. Statistics also show that within one year of a heart attack, 18 percent of men and 23 percent of women will die. Within five years after an attack, about 33 percent of men and 43 percent of women will die.

The American Heart Association's GWTG program is being implemented in hospitals around the country.

New Campaign Focuses On Incorporating Fun Physical Activity Into Busy Lifestyles

As part of its Great American Health Challenge, the American Cancer Society is launching a new initiative aimed at encouraging Americans to be physically active, have fun, and reduce cancer risk at the same time.

The Great American Health Challenge, the Society's primary prevention and early detection campaign, is offering a 10-week physical activity program that will help people set and achieve their exercise goals, and offers free online tools and resources to help people identify fun ways to be physically active individually and with family and friends—and reduce their risk of cancer.

Research shows that one-third of all cancer deaths can be prevented with a healthy diet and exercise. Americans can lower their cancer risk by being physically active for 30 minutes on five or more days a week. To encourage Americans to become more physically active, the Society is challenging people to think of exercise in a new way instead of as dull, dreary or difficult. In support of making this important behavior change, the Society has developed a new online tool where people can develop an online physical activity plan and track progress, check their body mass index (BMI) to determine whether or not they are at a healthy weight and get practical tips for achieving and maintaining a healthy while having fun.

"We don't want people to avoid regular exercise because they think they can't have fun while taking part in physical activity," said

Colleen Doyle, MS, RD, director of nutrition and physical activity for the American Cancer Society. "There are other ways to integrate physical activity into a busy lifestyle. Playing outside with the family, briskly walking in the evenings with a friend and taking dance classes can be fun, and, when done regularly, reduce cancer risk."

As part of its Great American Health Challenge, the Society is unveiling new tools and resources to help people fight cancer and enjoy life, including:

- Fight Cancer with Fun video podcast series – Life coach Mark Stibich and exercise physiologist Colleen Saringer are featured on free downloadable video podcasts. Mark talks about strategies for enjoying life and staying inspired while reducing the risk of cancer, and Colleen provides tips on how to stay active wherever you are, even outside of a gym or in the workplace.

- Enjoy Being Healthy desktop helper – People can download this free new widget on their desktop to receive inspiring daily tips about how to have fun while fighting cancer.

- Picture of Health – When people have a strong support system they are more likely to stick with good habits. Through Picture of Health, people can upload their photo, briefly share their reason for reducing cancer risk, and encourage friends and family to join them. As users visit the website, they will see the faces of participants as part of the tapestry, each face and story rising to prominence as their cursor rolls over its photo.

The Great American Health Challenge is a year-round initiative focused on educating Americans about the importance of cancer risk. For more information, visit the website, www.cancer.org/GreatAmericans.

YOGURT HELPS GUMS

The next time you eat a scoop of yogurt, remember that you may be helping your gums as much as your digestive system. According to recent research, regularly consuming yogurt and other foods with lactic acid (milk acid) is associated with a lower occurrence of gum disease. Previous research had found that people who eat high amounts of dairy products had less gum disease, but the identity of the exact dairy products responsible for this beneficial effect was not found. With yogurt now acknowledged as promoting better periodontal health, it is thought that the probiotic effect of Lactobacilli bacteria found in lactic-acid foods may be responsible. Probiotics are living microorganisms, such as Lactobacillus bacteria in yogurt, that are beneficial to health.

Unless you have regular dental checkups, you may not be aware you have periodontal disease. We are currently accepting new patients. We offer you a full range of dental services, including preventive care & maintenance, cosmetic dentistry, teeth whitening, dentures and dental implant restorations. If you know anyone in need of quality dental care we would appreciate your referrals. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. Quincy Defeats North, Wins ACL Division Crown

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders played an instant classic last Wednesday evening at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The Atlantic Coast League North Division crown was up-for-grabs and the game was so evenly matched that it required extra innings to decide the outcome. The Presidents (15-3, 11-1) won the game and sole possession of the crown when sophomore catcher Olivia Berry drove in senior shortstop Marybeth Torpey with a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the eighth inning to finish off a 3-2 victory.

With the win, Quincy earned its first league title since the 2005 season. And in the process, the team quickly erased the feeling of finishing last season at 1-19 and all but secured themselves of a home game in the first round of the Division I South Sectionals beginning this week.

"We have been kicking down the door (of a league title) for the last few years," said Quincy head coach Mike Sedar. "This is a big accomplishment. These girls never gave up and with this win we accomplished one of our season goals, but the real goal is to go out and win a state championship."

The Presidents received all they could handle against

SOFTBALL

North Quincy. The Raiders (12-7, 10-3) jumped out to an early 1-0 first inning lead against Quincy's star pitcher Kori Sorenson on RBI single by junior third baseman Kathleen Lynch, but with two outs and the bases loaded with Raiders, Sorenson induced an inning ending groundout to stop the bleeding.

The Raiders, looking to tack on more runs in the second inning, had runners on second and third, but an attempted suicide squeeze resulted in an out at the plate and Sorenson wiggled her way out of trouble again. After two innings of softball, North held a slim 1-0 lead.

The Presidents could do very little in the first three innings against NQ senior hurler Paige Bonanni. Bonanni, after allowing a one-out first inning single, retired the next nine Quincy batters she faced. But with one out in the fourth, Torpey broke up that streak with a single to center. A sacrifice bunt by Sorenson moved Torpey into scoring position and third baseman Julie Yee drove her in and tied the game at 1-1 with a clutch two-out single. The Presidents threatened again by putting the next two batters on base, but Bonanni bore down and ended the fourth with a strikeout.

The momentum swung back to the North Quincy dugout the very next inning. With one out in the fifth, senior catcher Kerry Coughlin slapped a single down the third base line and on the next pitch, stole second base. After a strikeout by Sorenson for the second out, senior left fielder Rebecca Goreham drove the ball into left-center field. Coughlin, who was off on the contact of the ball, raced towards home and slid under the tag of Berry and was called safe on a close play at the plate. The run gave North a 2-1 lead.

Bonanni retired the Presidents in order in the bottom of the fifth and Sorenson did the same to the Raiders in the top of the sixth to help set up Quincy's first comeback rally in the bottom of the inning.

Elisa Lam opened the home half of the sixth with a single to right field off of Bonanni. Torpey (3-for-4) followed with her second hit of the game and after a sacrifice bunt by Sorenson moved both runners into scoring position, Berry delivered for the first time.

Berry smacked a single to left scoring Lam with the tying run but Torpey, realizing that Goreham in left has a strong throwing arm, held at third giving Bonanni and the defense a chance to hold the score at 2-2. And

'Merrymount's Tremendous 3' Double Dutch Champs

"Merrymount's Tremendous 3", Double Dutch Team won First Place in their division at the 12th Annual Local Double Dutch jump rope tournament held recently at Northeastern University.

The tournament is sponsored by Urban Youth Sports at Sport In Society at Northeastern University and the Red Auerbach Youth Foundation.

"Merrymount's Tremendous 3" team members are Shannon Foley, Lauren Saccoach and Liana Cunningham, second graders at the Merrymount Elementary School and have been jumping together since last fall. The girls competed in Level 1-Grades 2-5 against six other teams in their division.

They are part of the Beantown Jumpers Double Dutch Team which is affiliated with the Red Auerbach Youth Foundation under the direction of Coach Patti Travers, who is a Physical Education teacher in the Boston Public Schools.

During the winter months, "Merrymount's Tremendous 3" trained at school during recess and on the weekends with Coach Kathy Petrilli. The girls also competed as a Doubles Team "Merrymount's Stompers" and took third place.

Tara Foley, Shannon's cousin from Bryantville Elementary School in Pembroke was part of the Doubles Team.

Shannon and Tara teamed up together in the ropes and Lauren and Liana teamed up. The girls performed a spectacular routine and were commented on personally by several of the judges afterward as having world class potential.

The girls will continue to jump together and next year they will be able to compete again and move onto the next level at the State Tournament as 3rd graders.

Also participating at the tournament was seven-year-old Kiley Foley, Tara's sister and Shannon's cousin.

She attends the Bryantville Elementary School with her sister Tara.

With the generous donation from the Merrymount School's PTO, which purchased 10 sets of ropes for the school, and the support of Principal Ann Pegg, all the children at Merrymount Elementary School have been able to learn the sport of Double Dutch.

Everyone that has been involved is very proud of "Merrymount's Tremendous 3" and "Merrymount Stompers" and they hope that this is the inspiration that other children need to go learn and enjoy the sport of Double Dutch jump rope. All you need to do is "jump in."

Quincy Defeats North, Wins ACL Division Crown

that is exactly how it played out. Bonanni got the final two outs on soft line outs in the infield and Quincy wasted an opportunity to take the lead heading into the seventh inning.

"I thought when they (NQ) was up 2-1 that it was over," said Sedar. "Bonanni was shutting us down, but we chipped away and got that tying run."

Neither team would score in the final inning of regulation and with the bright lights of Mitchell/McCoy shining down on the diamond Quincy and North Quincy headed for extra frames.

Sorenson did allow a one-out hit to Goreham in the top of the eighth but she retired the final two batters, setting up the late game dramatics for Quincy.

Leading off the bottom of the eighth, Torpey capped off a great night with a clutch double to the right-center field fence and the third sacrifice bunt of the game by Sorenson moved her to third with one out. With the infield in and the outfield playing shallow, Berry stepped to the dish looking to end it. She lofted a high fly towards left-center field and as soon as Goreham made the catch for the second out, Torpey took off towards home. The throw was late and off-line and as Torpey slid across the plate with the winning run the Quincy dugout went berserk. The ACL North title was secured and one goal accomplished.

"That was a great game with both teams playing hard," added Sedar. "Olivia had been struggling all year at the plate but she stepped up when we needed her most. What can I say about Marybeth? She is a phenomenal player and one of the best we have ever had here at Quincy. This win and the ACL North title were the result of a total team effort but we have higher goals we are looking to achieve."

Notes: Sorenson finished with 8 Ks and the win was her 15th of the year.... Bonanni struck out four... Quincy beat NQ 3-1 in the team's first meeting this spring... Both teams will be playing in the Div. 1 South Sectionals starting this week.

Squantum 5 Road Race June 19

In a first-round game, Point defeated Snug Harbor 53-50.

Pat Dean, Marc Kellam, Gerald Nelson and Thomas Speed played well for Snug Harbor. Christopher Ranft, Eddie Grennon and Paul Oldham coached the team.

Atlantic also defeated Squantum.

James Flaherty (13 points), Dave Flynn, Brendon Gilmore, Matt Johnson and Matt Gibson played well for Squantum. QRD veteran Michael Curtin coached the team.

The George Dunn Tournament marks the conclusion of the QRD's winter gym program and the City Championship has been held for more than forty years.

In the high school division, players cannot have played on a varsity basketball team. The tournament winners receive the George Dunn Trophy, named for George Dunn, a much-admired member of the Recreation Department winter staff who died after a courageous battle with cancer. The trophy has been in his name since 1998.

In presenting the trophy, Recreation Director Barry J. Welch noted that Brillo, "had worked along with Dunn for many years in helping to shape the participants in solid fundamentals of sportsmanship and winning the correct way. I am pleased that Jonathan Brillo has his name engraved on the perpetual trophy that remains on display at the Recreation office."

Welch presented certificates to Montclair (finalists) and individual trophies to members of the championship team (Point Webster).

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, May 18, at approximately 5:30 a.m., Officer

Daniel Church was on routine patrol traveling northbound on Quincy Avenue. Using the cruiser's mobile data terminal, he randomly ran the registration of a white motor vehicle traveling southbound on Quincy Avenue. The query showed that the vehicle had been reported stolen so the officer turned around and came up behind the suspect vehicle stopped at a red light at the corner of Quincy Avenue and West Howard Street.

When the light turned green, the vehicle turned right onto West Howard Street and Officer Church put his blue lights on. The suspect vehicle immediately accelerated and entered Braintree, speeding through a red light. Officer Church activated his siren and notified headquarters that he was attempting to stop a vehicle on Shaw Street in Braintree. The officer estimated that the speed of the suspect vehicle reached a top speed of 45 miles per hour.

As the vehicle entered the intersection of Shaw Street and Allen Street in Braintree, the driver lost control and crashed into a stop sign. Two males immediately exited the motor vehicle and fled onto Allen Street. Officer Church pursued them on foot while shouting, "Stop, Police!" several times.

Officer Church chased the suspects as they jumped over a fence on Allen Street. At this time, a citizen jumped out of his car, leaped over the fence and tackled the front right passenger suspect (#1).

Officer Church then handcuffed the suspect. While holding suspect #1, Officer Church saw suspect #2, the driver, run into a driveway of a house approximately one hundred yards away. Several Braintree Police Officers arrived on scene (Officer Kenny Murphy with K-9, Officer Billy Cushing, and Officer Jennifer Zakowsky) and they pursued suspect #2. Officer Murphy, with his K-9 unit and Officer Cushing, were able to locate suspect #2 behind the house and they ordered him to the ground and to stop resisting. The officers then handcuffed the suspect and Officer Matt Hockney transported him to the Quincy Police station.

During the booking process, it was learned that suspect #2 suffered a dog bite to his lower leg and he was transported to Quincy Medical Center for treatment.

After returning to the station, suspect #2 refused to give his name, birth date, or any other identifying information and later refused to be booked. Braintree Officers were able to provide his identity from past incidents.

During booking, Quincy Police Teletype Operator Robert Lingoes found that the registry showed no valid license for suspect #2.

Back at the accident scene, Sergeant Joseph Lencki and Officers' E.J. Hartnett, Sean Glennon and Mike Powers were holding a female that had remained in the vehicle's back seat as the two suspects fled. The 16-year-old female said that the two suspects, who she said were friends, picked her up at her house at 3:30 A.M. She stated that she did not know the vehicle was stolen until she was taken into custody. She said that once the driver began to accelerate, she begged him repeatedly to stop.

When asked if she saw the damage to the ignition, she said that she was in the backseat the entire time and wouldn't have looked. The female's mother was called and told to come to the station to pick up her daughter. The mother told the Officers that she caught her daughter attempting to sneak out of the basement at approximately 2:00 A.M. and sent her back to bed. She stated that she woke up at approximately 4:00 A.M. and realized that her daughter was not home.

The female was not charged with any crimes since the Officers could not prove that she had knowledge that she was in a stolen vehicle. An inventory of the vehicle revealed that the ignition appeared to be removed forcibly from the steering column and there was a screwdriver located in a pocket of the driver's door.

The ignition was found on the back, passenger-side floorboard.

The driver, a 17 year old Braintree resident, was charged with "Receiving a Stolen Motor Vehicle, Failing to Stop for a Police Officer while Operating a MV, Resisting Arrest, Possession of Burglariou Tools, Malicious Destruction of Property, Red Light Violation, Leaving the Scene of an Accident after Property Damage, Misleading a Police Officer during a Criminal Investigation, Reckless Operation of a Motor Vehicle and Operating a Motor Vehicle w/o a License." The second suspect, a 16-year-old Duxbury resident, was charged with "Receiving a Stolen Motor Vehicle, Possession of Burglariou Tools, Resisting Arrest and Malicious Destruction of Property."

Nice Work!

FEDERAL GRANT FOR ELDERLY SCAM! I recently received calls from concerned senior citizens that they are being offered "a $5,000.00 grant" from the federal government. All the victim has to do is give the caller their credit card number with expiration date and they will be billed a "one time only" fee of $379.00. Most likely, it will not be a one-time fee, since the suspects may use your card for multiple illegal purchases. This is an old scam that re-surfaces and stings a few victims. Just tell the caller to take out the $379.00 from your $5,000.00 grant money and send the rest to you. I can assure you they won't do this, but if they did, it would be a bogus check anyway!

PAST BREAKS: 200 block of Atlantic Street, Elm Street, 400 block of Hancock Street, Speakman Street, 150 Quarry Street.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by mid-week. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Yard Sale At Quincy Community United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a giant Yard Sale Saturday, May 31 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on its front and side lawns, weather permitting.

In the event of rain, the yard sale will be held inside.

The sale will feature an assortment of gently used clothes, knick knacks and furniture. On the front lawn under the cherry tree, the church's Sigma Phi group will hold a bake book boutique with homemade goodies and books.

Fresh popped popcorn, ice cold sodas, and grilled hot dogs will also be available.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

DOVE Seeking Auction Items

DOVE, Inc., the domestic violence agency and shelter based in Norfolk County, is seeking auction items for this year's special fundraiser, "Harvesting Hope."

This year's fund-raiser will mark Dove's 30th anniversary of serving victims and survivors of domestic violence throughout Norfolk County.

Proceeds help support

DOVE's domestic violence services and programs.

Such programs are of urgent need now, according to DOVE Executive Director Stephanie Flaherty who said that there was a 287 percent increase in deaths related to domestic violence in 2007 compared to 2005.

For more information, call Kathy at 617-770-4065, ext. 21.

COA, Lions Seek Glasses

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once asked, "Must the mood, manner and motives of youth fade away with the years?" Before you answer quickly - look around ... You will see plenty of proof that youth is not always measured in years. Youth need not be a time of life. It should be a state of mind. Youth, regardless of years, should be an adventure in life. When enthusiasm for life exists, wrinkled skin will not wrinkle a mind. Youth only fades away when worry, doubt, distrust, fear and despair burden the body and bow the head. Youth remains when life is faced cheerfully; when a mind wonders and is amazed with the stars, the sun, the moon and the grandeur of God's world. Youth stays on with an attitude of today is another day and what can be done with.

Youth is faith and hope. It is enjoying beauty, being of good cheer. Cast these out and youth and maturity are gone. Retain them and youth remains. Faith, hope, appreciation of beauty and good cheer ... all can be regained.

Yes, the fountain of youth can only be found in a state of mind. ... no other place.

Dorothy M. Leth, 83

Homemaker

Funeral services for Dorothy M. (Delorey) Leth, 83, of Quincy, formerly of Weymouth, a homemaker, will be conducted Friday at 11 a.m. at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mrs. Leth died Monday at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a brief illness.

Born in East Weymouth, she was raised in Weymouth and attended Weymouth schools. She had lived in Weymouth before moving to Quincy 68 years ago.

Mrs. Leth was a homemaker and enjoyed knitting and sewing. She also made afghans for the premature babies at Quincy Medical Center.

Wife of the late Paul W. Leth, she was the mother of Karen E. Baker of Rockland, Philip P. Leth of Quincy, the late Carl L. Leth and the late Paul W. Leth, Jr.

She was the mother-in-law of Richard P. Baker of Rockland, Theresa M. (McArdle) Leth of Quincy and Rosemary Leth of Middleboro.

She was the sister of Russell Delorey of Sandwich, Claire Farrar of Weymouth, the late James Delorey and the late Geraldine DiGaetano.

She is also survived by nine grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Interment will be in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Visiting hours will be today (Thursday) from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Epilepsy Foundation of MA & RI, 540 Gallivan Blvd., second floor, Boston, MA 02124-5463.

Mary P. Livingstone

Retired Registry Of Motor Vehicles Clerk

A funeral service for Mary P. (Gill) Livingstone of Quincy, a retired clerk for the Registry of Motor Vehicles in Boston, will be held today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Livingstone died May 24 at the Caritas Good Samaritan Hospital in Brockton.

Raised in Boston, she attended services at the Ruggles Street Baptist Church in Boston.

Mrs. Livingstone enjoyed bingo and Foxwoods and was an avid bowler.

Wife of the late John Livingstone, she was the mother of Michael D'Amore of Tewksbury, Carol Loonie of Milton, Sharon Belcher and Leanne Vasconcellos, both of Falmouth and John Livingstone of Quincy.

She is also survived by 14 grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and many great-great-grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

She is also survived by a former husband, Leonard D'Amore of Worcester.

Interment will be the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Francis, 33 Boylston St., Boston, MA 02116.

Joanne Devitt

Phlebotomist

A memorial Mass for Joanne Devitt of Quincy will be celebrated Saturday, June 7 at 9 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Miss Devitt died suddenly May 10.

She worked for 14 years as a phlebotomist and CNA at Quincy City Hospital.

She will be remembered for her sense of humor, wit and kindness to her friends, patients and family.

She was the loving daughter of Ann Marie Devine of Quincy and Edward Devitt of South Boston.

She was the sister of Diane M. Sullivan of Hingham, Edward Devitt of Texas and the late Michael Devitt.

She is also survived by many aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews and true friends.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, Quincy.

NQ Completes Sweep Of Quincy With A 11-4 Win

BASEBALL

The North Quincy Red Raiders scored in all seven innings of their game against city rival Quincy High School en route to a convincing 11-4 win at Adams Field last Wednesday night.

North (8-11 overall) received contributions from every player in the lineup, including eight different starters getting a least one hit and driving in at least one run, to back the solid starting pitching of sophomore pitcher Ryan Louis. Louis (3.1 innings, 3 Ks, run, W), who gave way to Joe Edgerly (2.2 innings, 2 Ks, run) and Kevin Chenette (inning, K) in relief, picked up his second win on the mound this spring.

The eleven runs scored by the Raiders were the most runs the team has scored in an Atlantic Coast League game this season. The catalyst for the offensive outburst was junior Joe Vialpando. Vialpando finished 3-for-4 with a RBI and two runs scored and swiped three bags (NQ went 8-for-8 on stolen base attempts).

Other Raiders who finished with multi-hit games included seniors Mike Horgan (2-for-2, 2 BB, 2 runs, RBI) and Alex Tragellis (2-for-4, RBI, run) and juniors Matt Jay (2-for-3, 2 RBI, 2 runs) and Edgerly (2-for-4, RBI).

The win over Quincy helped to snap a three-game losing streak for the Raiders (4-0 loss to Plymouth North, 12-0 loss to Silver Lake & 10-3 loss to Dennis-Yarmouth), but with just one game remaining (last Friday versus Randolph) on the schedule, North will be looking in from the outside when the post-season gets underway this week.

For the Presidents, the defeat continued a tough portion of their schedule. Quincy (10-8), which clinched a spot in the Division I South Sectionals a week and half ago, has lost three consecutive games since that goal was reached.

Against North, the Presidents fell behind 7-0 after three innings. In the top of the fourth, senior Ted Walsh reached base and eventually came around to score on a sacrifice fly by senior Ricky Salvucci, but the Raiders came right back in the bottom of the frame and scored another run. At the end of four innings the score was 8-1 North Quincy.

Quincy would score three more times (one run each in the 5th, 6th & 7th inning) but it would not be enough to overcome the large early game deficit.

The Presidents wrapped up the regular season with back-to-back games against King Philip Regional (a game they won 5-4) and Plymouth South High School late last week and the opportunity to earn themselves a home first-round (or preliminary round) game was stood in the balance.

Either way, Quincy will be playing in the Division I South Sectionals beginning this week.

Notes: The North Quincy jayvee and freshmen teams both defeated their counterparts from Quincy last Wed.... On the year, all three NQ teams went a combined 6-for-6 against Quincy... NQ sophomore Ryan Louis was named to the first-team all ACL... NQ sophomore John Ainsley and freshman Colin Ryan were named to the ACL honorable mention team.

Recreation Summer Sports Clinics, Instructional Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department has announced its summer schedule for their Summer Sports Clinics and Instructional Workshops.

In announcing the summer schedule, Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch noted that by taking advantage of "our outstanding municipal facilities and the great wealth of local leadership, the Quincy Recreation Department is pleased to organize and conduct these activities for the benefit of children who are enjoying the summer school vacation."

Due to the ever-growing popularity of these summer clinics and workshops, the QRD, once again, will have three different ways to register.

The brochures that were distributed to the local schools and other locales in Quincy have a registration form included and should be mailed back to the Recreation Department by Monday, June 2. Beginning on June 2, registration will be processed lottery-style and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist.

Online registration begins on Tuesday, June 3 at 7:30 a.m. at QuincyRec.com and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist. Instructions on how to register on can be found at QuincyRec.com.

The final way to register is through walk-in registration. Walk-in registration for any remaining space begins on Monday, June 16 at 9 a.m. and continues throughout the summer.

For additional information visit our visit QuincyRec.com or call the QRD at 617-376-1394.

These fee-supported activities are offered as part of "Quincy on the Go!" and are designed to provide children with active programs that promote healthy lifestyles. The aggregate have increased by 167, 15 percent since 2003," noted Keenan in his report, adding that "...other departments within the City, in the aggregate, have been cut by 18 positions (-2 percent)..." Keenan defended his budget recommendations, noting he has been "a strong supporter of our police and fire departments, the need for public works and for public libraries."

"This year, however," Keenan said, "a critical financial situation threatens the progress that has been made in these and many other departments."

Keenan said that anything less than the 4.7 percent reduction leaves the city perilously close to its Proposition 2 1/2 limit and the potential for a future override referendum.

Under an override referendum, voters determine whether taxes will be increased beyond the legislated limit under Proposition 2 1/2 limit.

"Since the implementation of Proposition 2 1/2, cities and towns are being torn apart," said Keenan who encouraged sacrifice now "to avoid even greater pain."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee supported Koch's compromise after stating, "We also have to be hopeful."

"We are flirting with a proposition 2 1/2 override," said McNamee, adding, "It's an opportunity for the public at large to have a referendum on the budget. I don't get hysterical about it."

In presenting his alternative, Koch promised that "no academic programs will be affected and no teachers will be lost. We owe our children and their families no less."

Under Koch's plan, the School Department budget reduction will be reduced to $1.5 million and the following positions will be affected:

- Four open firefighter positions unfilled
 - Four open police positions unfilled
 - An assistant city solicitor's position eliminated
 - A library position eliminated
 - Assessor's office restructured by eliminated two full-time positions
 - A position in the auditor's office (eliminated)
 - A masonry position in the Department of Public Works eliminated.
- Voting in favor of Koch's compromise budget were McNamee, Councillor Michael McFarland and Councillor Leo Kelly of Ward 1, Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3; Jay Davis, Ward 4, and Douglas Gutro, Ward 5.
- The Finance Committee will continue budget reviews this week.

Local Bars, Liquor Stores Get 'A Plus' In Compliance Test

Local bars and liquor stores earned an "A plus" in compliance after the Memorial Day weekend testing, according to Police Lt. Peter Turowski.

Turowski credits efforts by local business owners as well as the efforts of police and staff involved in the Alcohol Compliance Program for a 100 percent compliance report.

The Alcohol Compliance

Program is an undercover police-testing program which sends underage agents to test retailers' compliance with liquor laws, specifically regarding the sales of alcohol to minors.

During each test, the undercover and underage customers attempt to purchase alcoholic drinks or bottled liquor. All alcohol establishments must follow specific procedures, such as requesting and reviewing licenses or proper identification from all purchasers.

When an illegal sale occurs, the offenders are reported to the Licensing Board which has fined and suspended the license of violators. Repeat offenders risk the loss of their license to sell alcohol.

Lt. Turowski said the department has conducted an average of four tests a year for the past four years.

GOP City Committee

To Hear Republican Senate Candidate

The reviving Republican City Committee will meet Tuesday, June 10, at 7 p.m. in the second floor community room at Roche Brothers supermarket, 101 Falls Boulevard.

The evening's guest will be Jeff Beatty, a former Army Delta Force officer, FBI agent and CIA counterterrorism officer, who is challenging John Kerry for his U. S. Senate seat.

All committee members and interested volunteers are welcome to attend. For more information, contact Jennifer Logue at 617-328-1384.

Focus On Water, Sewer Funds

Independent Auditors Called In For Budget Review

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Independent auditors from Powers and Sullivan, a Wakefield firm that specializes in municipal audits, will review details of the city's water and sewer enterprise funds at Mayor Thomas Koch's request, according to his Chief of Staff James Fatseas.

Fatseas told City Council Monday that a meeting is planned Wednesday with the auditors. He, also, described ongoing meetings with the state Department of Revenue (DOR).

Participants at Wednesday's meeting will focus on the finances of the water and sewer enterprise funds which have incited a storm of controversy, a war of words between Koch and his predecessor former Mayor William Phelan, and left other officials awash in confusion.

As Koch, Phelan See It Page 13

In 2008, the first year of the enterprise funds, Phelan listed $8.7 million in "Indirect Costs" which have been referred to as surplus.

As one example, School Committee vice Chairman David McCarthy filed a request with the city council asking that the $8.8 million in the sewer and water funds' "indirect costs" be transferred to the General Fund and the proposed $86 million 2009 school budget be fully reinstated by using those surplus funds.

"This does not represent a vote of the School Committee," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, stating that McCarthy wrote the letter as a private citizen.

However, Gutro, also, asked for an explanation and councillors discussed water and sewer issues for some four and a half hours without reaching a conclusion.

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan said that no such $8 million windfall exists to "magically" solve the city's finances.

"It would be great if, all of a sudden, $8 million (was found) for the budget," said Keenan who repeatedly said there is no $8 million surplus anywhere.

The water and sewer enterprise funds are currently operating at a combined deficit of $3.8 million, according to Department of Public Works Business Manager Michael Coffey.

"Those numbers for $8 million are not real numbers," said Keenan who noted that

Fire Chief Pettinelli To Retire July 15

Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli will retire July 15 after serving some 30 years with the Quincy Fire Department.

Pettinelli officially notified Mayor Thomas Koch by letter on May 21. Pettinelli had originally planned to retire in October.

With Pettinelli's retirement, Koch will be appointing the heads of both major public safety departments as Police Chief Robert Crowley retirement date is July 1.

Crowley's successor will

Fire Chief TIMOTHY

be chosen after review by a special committee headed by Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

"In an effort to achieve a seamless transition, I respectfully request that all Civil Service procedures regarding a promotion to the chief of the Fire Department be followed in a timely manner," Pettinelli said in his letter to the mayor.

According to the city's Human Resource director, Stephen McGrath, Pettinelli joined the Quincy Fire Department in 1978. In July, 2005, Pettinelli was chosen Fire Chief, succeeding Paul O'Connell.

City Council Commends Quirk For Aid To Police

Nearly two dozen police officers joined city councillors Monday in applauding businessman Daniel Quirk for his contributions to the Quincy Police Department's training program.

According to Lt. Don Greenwood, some 200 police officers have sharpened their marksmanship and honed their critical response skills over the past five years at the reality based training center on Quirk's property at the former Fore River Shipyard.

"They're able to perform these (training) tasks in a safe environment," Greenwood said, describing the "highly realistic" site provided free-of-charge on Quirk's property.

City Council President Jay Davis, also, cited Quirk's generosity as he presented the formal commendation.

"Officers have been able to perform reality-based training with equipment that has led to improved officer safety," said Davis.

Davis said the training site exposes police to "a variety of active shooter scenarios that may develop and prepares officers "...for tasks that they may have to perform under stressful conditions on the street...."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian

McNamee, also, congratulated Quirk, noting that he has contributed "very positively to Quincy's life."

"The jobs that Mr. Quirk provides are certainly welcome," McNamee said.

Quirk, best known for his automobile sales outlets, also, is one of the largest real estate owners in Quincy. Quirk purchased most of the former Fore River Shipyard, located on the Quincy-Braintree line, in 2003 at auction for $9 million.

Recent discussion for development at the former shipyard have included a wind energy project and housing and business.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On June 3, 1800, President John Adams becomes the first acting president to take up residence in Washington, D.C. Unfortunately, the White House was not yet finished, so Adams moved into temporary digs at a tavern called Tunchiliffe's City Hotel.
- On June 8, 1896, President Grover Cleveland asks federal departments to investigate how many "aliens," or foreign nationals, are currently employed in the federal government. Cleveland believed that the government carried the authority to "prevent the influx of elements hostile to its internal peace and security."
- On June 2, 1912, Carl Laemmle merges his movie studio with several others, creating Hollywood's first major studio, Universal. The studio's major box-office hits have included "American Graffiti," "Jaws," "E.T.," and "Jurassic Park."
- On June 5, 1949, bestselling thriller writer Ken Follet is born in Wales to a devout Christian family that does not allow television, radio or movies. As a result, Follet became a voracious reader. He wrote 10 novels before finally breaking through with "The Eye of the Needle."
- On June 7, 1959, in one of the most lucrative contracts of its time, Paramount agrees to pay Jerry Lewis $10 million to appear in 14 films. In 1946, Lewis teamed up with singer and comedian Dean Martin, and the two clown their way through 18 films before splitting up in 1956.
- On June 4, 1986, Jonathan Pollard pleads guilty to espionage for selling top-secret U.S. military intelligence information to Israel and is sentenced to life in prison. The former Navy intelligence analyst sold enough classified documents to fill a medium-sized room and had been paid approximately $50,000.
- On June 6, 1992, New York Mets first baseman Eddie Murray drives in the 1,510th run of his career, breaking Mickey Mantle's record for career RBIs (runs batted in) by a switch hitter. Murray was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2003 in his first year of eligibility.

Presidential Insults

Not too sure who's going to be moving into the White House come January.

It's tough trying to get there with all the potential flak candidates have to first get through along the campaign trail.

And the pot shots really don't end for whoever makes it to 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. There's always insults waiting.

Democrats Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama have been beating up on one another and Republican John McCain has had his share of political lumps, too.

Which is pretty much par for this political course.

But whoever gets the keys to the White House will soon discover that being president doesn't make you immune to insults—even nasty ones.

Some of our greatest presidents and some of the not so-great have been targets of insults down through history.

Like our own John Adams and John Quincy Adams. The father was called "eccentric" and the son, "repulsive."

Abraham Lincoln was called a "huckster." Ronald Reagan a "bum" and a "terrorist," Richard Nixon and Lyndon Johnson "liars."

But perhaps the nastiest barb of all was fired by Hearst poison-pen Westbrook Pegler at Franklin Delano Roosevelt:

"It is regrettable that Guiseppe Zangara hit the wrong man when he shot at Roosevelt in Miami."

And author-columnist H.L. Menken lobbed this one:

"If FDR became convinced that coming out for cannibalism would get him votes he so sorely needs, he would begin fattening a missionary in the White House back yard."

Those and other presidential zingers are from the "Book of Insults and Irreverent Quotations" by Donald Hook and Lothar Kahn and "The Complete Book of U.S. Presidents" by William DeGregorio.

Here are some others:

About John Adams: "He is distrustful, obstinate, excessively vain and takes no counsel from anyone." (Thomas Jefferson)

About John Quincy Adams:

"Of all the men whom it was ever my lot to accost and to waste civilities upon (he) was the

Rizzo Speaker Tonight At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting

Dean Rizzo, director of Quincy 2000, will be guest speaker at the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday) in the Community Room at the Church of the Good Shepherd, corner of Harvard and W. Squantum Streets.

Rizzo will report on what role Quincy 2000 plays in the local community through its Business District Partnerships.

All meetings are open to the public.

Food Fair At FR Clubhouse

A food fair is held every first Wednesday of the month from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Perishable food, such as fruit, vegetables and bread are available at no charge. The program is open to anyone.

most doggedly and systematically repulsive." (W.H. Lytleton, governor of North Carolina)

About Abraham Lincoln: "He is a huckster in politics, a first rate, second rate man." (Wendell Phillips, abolitionist)

About James Polk: "I more than suspect that he is deeply conscious of being wrong, that he feels the blood of this war, like the blood of Abel, is crying in the wilderness against him. He is a bewildered, confounded and miserably perplexed man." (Congressman Abraham Lincoln on Polk and the Mexican War)

About Harry Truman: "It defies all common sense to send that roughneck ward politician back to the White House." (Republican Senator Robert Taft)

About Richard Nixon: "Nixon is a shift-eyed goddamn liar and people know it. He's one of the few in the history of this country to run for high office talking out of both sides of his mouth at the same time and lying out of both sides." (Harry Truman)

About John F. Kennedy: "I sincerely fear for my country if Jack Kennedy should be elected president. The fellow has absolutely no principles. Money and gall are all the Kennedy's have." (Republican Senator Barry Goldwater)

About Lyndon Johnson: "He tells so many lies that he convinces himself after a while he's telling the truth." (Robert Kennedy)

About Gerald Ford: "He's a nice fellow but he spent too much time playing football without a helmet." (Lyndon Johnson)

About Ronald Reagan: "How can you take this man seriously? Perhaps even he doesn't know what he is talking about. He is the biggest liar of all the American presidents—the worst terrorist in the history of mankind...a mad man, an imbecile and a bum. His ideas are from the era of Buffalo Bill—not the nuclear age." (Fidel Castro)

About Dwight Eisenhower: "I think that when the President stops being president the best job we could give him in our country would be as director of a children's home. He would not harm children. But as head of a mighty nation he is more dangerous and might do a lot of harm." (Nikita Khrush, Soviet premier)

About George H.W. Bush: "If ignorance ever goes to $40 a barrel, I want the drilling rights to George Bush's head." (Jim Hightower, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture)

George W. Bush didn't make the list, but a couple of years ago, Venezuela's Hugo Chavez called him "the devil" at a United Nations session.

Some pretty strong words for Presidents. In the White House, it's not always "Hail To The Chief."

Sometimes it can be "Hell."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1936 postcard published by Jeen's Jailhouse, a popular wine and dine spot on Hancock Street in Wollaston. They were located on the corner of Carruth Street across from the Eastern Mass. car barn. The group shown here - Jack Francis and his Rhythm Boys - were regulars at Jeen's which broadcast a live radio program every weekday at 4 p.m. on WHDH. Note the jailhouse decor behind the group. Jeen's had three separate rooms: a bar, dining room and a lounge for dancing. They were known for their Italian cuisine, but they also offered lobsters and grilled steaks. Complete dinners were only 50, 65 and 85 cents. Differing Opinions on That Controversial Billboard

I am writing in connection with the recent controversy in my neighborhood (Ward 4) concerning the gargantuan and hideous billboard erected at Biondi's Gas Station. Like many of my neighbors I fail to see any benefit whatsoever to the neighborhood.

Conversely the sign, in my opinion can accurately be categorized as blight, which benefits only one party, the owner of the sign. Don't bother repeating that the City of Quincy can avail itself of the ad space at no cost when the sign is not in use. This is completely meaningless and insulting to the citizens of Ward 4 who work hard everyday and take great pride in maintaining their homes and neighborhood. The common sentiment heard over and over again is that City Councillor Dan Raymond would never have allowed this in his neighborhood but for reasons no one can understand Jay Davis did not support his constituents.

Furthermore, equally frustrating is that fact that when Councillor Raymond attempted to bring this issue up for discussion he was silenced from the bully pulpit by none other than City Council President Jay Davis. Ward 4 residents want to know what we can do about this sign and the City Council President should not silence this discussion simply because he is on the opposite side of the issue. It is not the way democracy works and it is not what we in Ward 4 elected Councillor Davis to do. In an age when most cities, including the City of Boston, recognize that huge billboards in neighborhoods are an eyesore and bring down property values and thus are trying to eliminate them, the City of Quincy is approving the construction of these monstrosities. Why? It simply defies common sense and ignores the overwhelming will of the people of Ward 4.

As for the notification that was distributed, I read The Ledger, I read The Quincy Sun, I watch the City Council hearings, but I never heard anything about this until after it was approved. It is funny how there is plenty of money for mass mailing during an election year detailing every time a City Councillor got a light bulb changed or got a pot hole filled but it was not seen fit to make sure all residents of Ward 4 were informed of this via some type of mailing. I wonder why? But you don't need to wonder why there are signs that state "Impeach Jay Davis" popping up on lawns in Ward 4.

Ed Brown
Connell Street

Like many in Ward Four and throughout Quincy, I was angry and actually pretty stunned when the Biondi billboard went up. Not enough residents (myself included) made the effort to oppose it, and now we regret it.

Some few did make the effort, and should be commended. One individual who did make a strong effort to inform us was our City Councillor Jay Davis. Jay held a neighborhood meeting, made phone calls, sent letters, and even walked door to door with flyers to alert his constituents. Based on Jay's excellent record of service as our ward councillor for several years, we would expect nothing less. Despite his efforts, few residents were sufficiently interested to speak up at the Zoning Board public hearing.

Hindsight is 20-20, as they say, and there is much talk now about what could have been done differently. We all wish we had been more vigilant, and I am resolved to do better in the future. Whatever fate of the billboard may be, I want to thank Jay Davis for all he has done and will continue to do for Ward Four and the City of Quincy.

Quincy's Yesterdays

D-Day Invasion Marked Quietly

By FRANK McCAULEY

Allied (British, Canadian and American) invasion armies landed in Normandy and drove 9 1/2 miles into the vaulted Nazi West Wall early June 6.

There was no organized recognition of D-Day in Quincy, save for some prayer services in churches of all faiths.

"This is not time for celebration," said Mayor Charles A. Ross called out of his bed at 3 a.m. when the news flash of the invasion came.

"This is a time for prayer and hard work," Ross said.

At the great shipyards at Fore River and Hingham it was just another day of toil and sweat. Fathers working at the shipyards, who had sons and daughters in the service, went about their tasks with lumps in their throats and prayers in their hearts.

Award-Winning Films On Tap For Library Showing In June

The Oscar-nominated film "The Savages," and the independent flick "August the First" are on the docket for screening during the month of June at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

"August the First" will be shown Thursday, June 12, at 7 p.m. The award-winning American film, directed by Lanre Olabisi, is unrated and not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

It is the morning of Tunde's graduation party and things have already begun to unravel. Tunde has managed to alienate his sister, Simisola. His older brother, Ade, persistently plagues him with criticism, and their mother has started drinking again.

Unbeknownst to most, Tunde has orchestrated the return of his long estranged father, resurrecting unresolved family anguish against the backdrop of Tunde's celebration.

As the day turns to night, old wounds are reopened and bad habits are revived. Layer by layer, deception and half-truths are peeled away as secrets are uncovered in what will become the most unforgettable day the family has ever experienced.

"The Savages," set for Thursday, June 26, at 7 p.m., is rated R for some sexuality and language and star Oscar-winner Philip Seymour Hoffman and Academy Award-nominee Laura Linney, who deliver unforgettable performances in the coming-of-middle-age story.

Until recently, all John and Wendy Savage had in common were a lousy childhood and a few strands of DNA. But after years of drifting apart they are forced to band together to care for the elderly, cantankerous father who made their formative years "challenging."

In the process, both of these aimless, perpetual adolescent fortysomethings may just, at long last, have to grow up.

The screenings are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Boston Harbor Islands Slide Show, Tour At Lilbrary

Author David Kales and photographer Ron Goodman will give a free slide presentation of the Boston Harbor islands Tuesday, June 10, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Kales and Goodman collaborated on the recent book "The Boston Harbor Islands: The History of An Urban Wilderness," copies of which will be on sale following the presentation.

The presentation will examine the pirate havens and the military fortifications on the islands and the efforts to revitalize them, including their designation as a National Park Area.

For more information on the presentation, call 617-376-1301.

Kales will lead a walking tour of Thompson Island on Saturday, June 14 at 2 p.m., commencing at the Squaw Rock parking lot by the Nickerson Legion Post at the end of Dorchester Street in Quantum.

Tour participants will cross to the island on the sand bar from Squaw Rock at low tide which will make it necessary to wade a short distance in shallow water.

Hiking boots or sneakers, sunscreen, a hat and drinking water are recommended.

For more information on the hiking tour, call 617-472-0799.

The presentation and the tour are sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program and Quincy's Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Quincy Hospital 1958 Nurses Class Marks 50th Anniversary

A half-century faded away and seemed like yesterday for 16 nurses who recently celebrated the 50th anniversary of their graduation from the former Quincy City Hospital School of Nursing, according to their classmate, Marjorie Campbell.

"Many happy memories were remembered and enjoyed," reported Campbell. The nurses came, many with their husbands, from Arizona, Ohio, New Hampshire and all over Massachusetts for the weekend, which began with a tour of Quincy Medical Center.

Class members enjoyed luncheon at Strawberry Fair, Norwell and a banquet at the Radisson Hotel, Rockland.

"Many of the nurses had not been in the hospital for many years, some not since graduation," according to Campbell. "We have many happy memories of the three years we lived at Gordon House."

In the first event of the weekend, the Class of 1958 received special recognition at the Quincy City Hospital School of Nursing Alumnae Banquet. In 1979, the nursing school closed after graduating its last class.

Sheila Blood organized the reunion. Campbell helped with the publicity. The 1958 graduating class had 32 members; nine are deceased.

Half the members of the class attended all or some of the events. They were Blood, Campbell, Marjorie Tong Townsend, Carol Ford DeYoung, Mary Nygren Wignall, Judith Ferguson Kressler, Judith Anderson Deltano, Marie Marecki, Carol Riley Karlson, Marjorie McNamara Campbell, Janet Nelson Inkley, Sandra Woods Shaw, Ruth Kiley Goodwin, Sylvia Stratton Sanchez, and Natalie Smith Nerger, Mary Hayes Comeau, and Agnes Thompson McIntosh.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Mashed Potatoes, Spinach Bake

Who doesn't love mashed potatoes. And if you like spinach, here is a great recipe I found for the dish with some small additions.

It can be made ahead of time and just placed in the oven when ready to serve.

SPINACH MASHED POTATOES

6 medium potatoes (peeled, cut and boiled)

1 package fresh spinach (10 ounces)

3/4 cup sour cream (light can be used)

1/4 cup butter or margarine

2 teaspoons chives (minced)

salt and pepper to taste

1 cup shredded cheddar cheese

In a bowl, mash the potatoes. Cook the spinach until wilted and then drain well. Add to the mashed potatoes- the spinach, sour cream, butter, chives and seasonings and mix well. Top with the cheddar cheese and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes or until cheese is melted.

QBA Summer Family Festival Set For July 17-18-19

The Quincy Business Association (QBA) will hold its 37th Summer Family Festival July 17-19.

Traditionally, the city closes Hancock Street in Quincy Center to vehicular traffic to allow local vendors and crafters to display merchandise outside on what becomes a pedestrian mall.

Each year, two special dinnertime programs provide lively musical entertainment. Staging is set up on Hancock Street for various entertainment acts to perform.

Throughout all three days, there will be music and interactive programs, games and fun for the young.

The local business community in cooperation with the office of Mayor Thomas Koch hosts the event. Some limited space will be available for crafters and vendors not competing with Quincy Business Association members.

For additional information about participation, call the QBA office at 617-471-3232.

Organ Recital June 8 At First Presbyterian

Allen Thomas, director of music at First Presbyterian Church in Quincy, will present a recital of organ music Sunday, June 8 at 7 p.m. at the church, 270 Franklin St., South Quincy.

A free will offering will be taken and all donations will be directed to the church's mission work both locally and in Bangladesh.

Thomas, the former director of music for the Holbrook Public Schools, will perform works by Johan Sebastian Bach, Cesar Franck, Jehan Alain, Charles Ives, Antonio

Vivaldi and others.

The program will highlight the versatility of the three Allen Renaissance digital organ with sounds ranging from the German Baroque period and the French Romantic to the American Theatre organ.

A reception will follow the recital.

Sheets: Tom Flatley 'True Friend Of Quincy'

James Sheets, who served 12 years as mayor of Quincy, was in Pennsylvania when Thomas J. Flatley, developer and philanthropist, died May 17. He pays tribute to him here as a "true friend of Quincy."

By JAMES SHEETS
Former Mayor

Tom Flatley was a true friend to Quincy.

Many people are aware of his numerous good deeds in helping those in need. They are not aware of his support and assistance to the great City of Presidents, Quincy.

In the mid-1990s, Tom Flatley visited my office in City Hall. He said he was impressed with what was happening in Quincy and if I was willing to work with him he would purchase that half of Crown Colony in South Quincy, yet to be developed.

It was my opinion that this was the type of commercial development that should occur in Crown Colony where it could attract new corporations with more jobs while expanding the property tax base taking pressure off Quincy home owners.

I indicated to Mr. Flatley that I would work with him on one condition, the first building to be constructed would have to be a new Marriott Hotel. He quickly agreed and indicated that he was a friend of Bill Marriott and in the past, in other locations, he had worked with Bill Marriott and built several hotels.

I explained I wanted to use the hotel/motel tax money to purchase open space, help maintain the parks and develop tourism in Quincy. Former Parks Director and present Mayor Tom Koch put this plan together, earmarking this tax money for those purposes. I also indicated that along with the Adams Best Western Inn we needed another hotel, if we were to attract additional tourists to Quincy.

JAMES SHEETS

The first building constructed in Crown Colony by Mr. Flatley was the 465-unit Marriott Hotel. Ear marked motel tax money has already helped in the purchase of open space, maintenance of the parks and promoting tourism.

One of the most difficult challenges faced by the city of Quincy was saving Quincy Hospital. A growing burden on the taxpayers of Quincy, but necessary to save lives, a way had to be found to transition Quincy Hospital from a City Department to a private non-profit Medical Center.

To accomplish this miracle, we needed at least $12 million from the state. Governor Cellucci agreed to forward a $12 million grant to the state legislature for approval so the hospital could be saved. The Speaker of the House of Representatives opposed this grant. I needed a back-up plan.

I decided to call Tom Flatley. The next morning he was in my office and I told him if the city's effort to get money from the state failed, we would need $12 million from another source or we would have to close the hospital. I asked him to help. He said he would go back and talk to his financial advisers.

The next day he called me and said his advisors all said "no." However, he said he would do it anyway. If the state funding effort failed, he would provide $12 million, but the Quincy Medical Center would have to begin paying back the principal after five years. Principal payments would be small with no interest being charged.

There was one additional condition, no one was to know that he, Tom Flatley, was the source of this funding. To this day I honored his request. But now, I feel the story should be told. We ultimately received the state money, but there was no question Tom Flatley would have honored his word.

When I left office in 2002, I was working with Mr. Flatley on the "Ramp Project" at Crown Colony. He said he would raise $1.5 million dollars from the private sector to do the engineering drawings for the new ramps if I could get a commitment from the Governor and Secretary of Transportation for $18 million to build the ramp. Mr. Flatley raised the $1.5 million and I secured a letter from the Secretary of Transportation and Governor committing the state to pay for the construction of the ramp.

Today the ramp is being built. It means less traffic congestion on Centre Street and with new corporations moving into Crown Colony, it means more jobs and property tax revenue.

Thank you, Tom Flatley, for being a friend to Quincy. You have left very large footprints in the sand for all generations to follow. We are a stronger and better city and nation because you walked this way.

For Discovering Unique Careers Youth Program Eastern Bank Donates $10,000 To Quincy Asian Resources

Eastern Bank representatives recently joined members of the Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) youth program to announce a $10,000 grant that will fund a series of career workshops for Asian high school students to be planned by their peers.

Building on a partnership that started last year, the funds will enable QARI, a non-profit organization serving the Asian community in Quincy, to greatly expand the program and help first and second generation Asian Americans learn about potential careers.

"QARI is grateful for this commitment from Eastern Bank as it will enable the youth program to continue to provide an opportunity for high school students to explore careers in a supportive environment with positive role models and mentors," said QARI Executive Director John Brothers.

tor John Brothers.

In 2006 and 2007, through a small grant from Eastern Bank, a planning group of Asian high school students designed a Web site to educate their peers about nontraditional and traditional careers. The project, called the Discovering Unique Careers (DUC) program, is growing significantly this year to include five workshops focused on career planning and an upgraded Web site thanks to the support of the Eastern Bank Foundation.

"Eastern Bank welcomes the opportunity to assist an outstanding organization like QARI in offering youth development programs," said Robert DiGiovanni, regional vice president for Eastern Bank. "This grant truly highlights the importance of communities and corporations working together to improve the lives of young people and it's rewarding to be part of its success."

Current and past DUC participants attended the grant announcement and shared their insights on how they have benefited from the program.

"The high school students come to the program with a lot of enthusiasm, and this is another step in the right direction for their education and growth," said QARI's May Cheung who helps run the youth program. "These students aim to inspire their peers and challenge stereotypes of what Asian Americans can pursue, and they achieve this by working together as a team and building on their skills to carry out events and informational materials that will help other teens build a successful future."

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community. For more information about QARI and its programs, please contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit www.qari.info.

Thomas Galvin Second Official Historian In City's History

Thomas M. Galvin of Gardner Road is Quincy's second official historian in the city's history.

Mayor Thomas Koch announced the appointment by proclamation at the recent Quincy College 50th anniversary fundraising event at the Best Western Adams Inn, North Quincy.

Galvin, a fourth generation Quincy resident, is a director of Quincy College Course, Inc., founding organization of the college.

Galvin, who was raised in Wollaston and Norfolk Downs, has long been a community and business leader.

He is a retired executive of Boston Gear Works, past president and chairman of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, first president and chairman of Quincy 2000 Collaborative and a founding member of the Quincy Partnership.

He is a member and past trustee of the Quincy Historical Society, a member and past director of the Quincy Rotary Club, a member of the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers and a life member of the Wellfleet Historical Society.

He and his wife, Judy, have been married for 47 years and have three sons and five granddaughters.

He is a historical lecturer and tour leader.

Quincy's first official historian was William Churchill Edwards, who served in the 1940s to 1960s and wrote "Historic Quincy" in 1957, a book that has become the city's unofficial history.

Galvin's rare post cards of Quincy's yesterdays are a popular weekly feature in The Quincy Sun.

In his proclamation, Koch said in part:

"Tom Galvin has made it his life's work to study, celebrate and share our city's rich history from its first settlers through the 20th century.

"Countless Quincy residents have gained a deeper understanding of our history and have shared their own hometown memories through Mr. Galvin's work and wonderful postcard collection appearing weekly in The Quincy Sun."

QUINCY COLLEGE MARKED its 50th anniversary at a recent fundraiser at the Best Western Adams Inn, North Quincy. Members of the Board of Governors joined President Sue Harris at the celebration. Do unions make a difference

There was a time not so long ago that bosses made it illegal to belong to a union. When Massachusetts workers marched to demand things that we now take for granted, they were often beaten and sometimes killed. But they kept marching.

Because of their courage and determination, we now have

- A ban on Child Labor
- The eight-hour day
- Health Insurance
- Unemployment Compensation
- Safer workplaces
- Paid holidays, vacations and sick days
- Respect and dignity on the job

In Quincy, workers' rights are under challenge again. The City of Quincy – to "save money" – wants to use contractors who abuse workers to build the new Quincy High School. The mill owners put 8-year olds to work in the mills to "save money." It was wrong then. It is wrong today.

Tell Mayor Koch (376-1990) that Quincy workers deserve good jobs on the Quincy High School project.

Independent Auditors Called In For Budget Review

the state DOR officials expressed concern regarding the enterprise funds and the city's ability to meet their projected totals.

In his review, Keenan focused on the "Indirect Costs" cited by McCarthy and critics of the mayor's budget.

"The only fact that's clear," said Keenan, "is, 'that it's a mess.'"

Indirect costs are included in the water and sewer enterprise funds as a way of covering all city services connected to the delivery of water and sanitation projects.

However, Keenan suggested errors in Phelan's charging off the $2.4 million in indirect costs of sewer and water to the city's police department, another $2 million to the fire department, and another $31,000 attributed to City Council in Phelan's budget.

Indirect costs are legitimate, according to Keenan but they must reflect the indirect cost of delivering services, such as the proper share of health insurance or billing expenses.

Instead, Keenan said the funds' Indirect Costs skyrocketed from "...three million to eight million dollars. I don't know why."

"Now, we're left with a water and sewer fund that's in deficit," said Keenan, adding, "the Department of Revenue is not going to fall for it again."

The water and sewer enterprise funds were established under Phelan's administration in an effort to clarify water and sewer costs as recommended by federal accounting standards.

In the past, any deficit in either fund would be taken care of through the city's General Fund so that real estate tax dollars covered deficits.

"The ratepayers will be subsidizing the taxpayers," said Keenan referring to Phelan's use of "Indirect Costs."

Phelan said Tuesday that his administration used the percentage amount allowed by the DOR and spread the percentage evenly across all departments.

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick agreed that the first year of enterprise funds is usually difficult for cities and towns. The enterprise funds separate all sewer and water costs and charge the ratepayers accordingly.

Fitzpatrick noted that the original figures for the water and sewer enterprise funds totaled roughly $33 million in needed revenues. He also stated that "Indirect Costs" are a totally acceptable accounting item.

However, Fitzpatrick said that when the recap came in last December, "It (water sewer total) was now $39 million which allowed the tax levy to be less because you recognized a fund source other than the tax levy."

City Solicitor James Timmins noted that the use of "Indirect Funds" is a perfectly legal accounting item. "The act itself was legal."

However, Timmins and councillors recommended a detailed list of acceptable indirect costs on the water and sewer budgets.

In addition to questions regarding the enterprise funds, councillors questioned the $23 million increase in Koch's proposed 2009 budget over last year's budget.

Councillor Joseph Finn said Phelan "did us a service in raising this issue."

However, Finn, also noted that most municipalities have a difficult time adjusting in the "first year of enterprise funds."

As Koch And Phelan See Those Controversial Budget Figures

Mayor Tom Koch:

The Days Of Budget Manipulation And Phantom $$ Over

(In the absence of a matching statement from Mayor Thomas Koch, The Quincy Sun is including the unedited text of a press release detailing his side of the financial dispute with former Mayor William Phelan.)

Mayor Thomas Koch announced that the city will no longer manipulate figures to make its finances look falsely positive, pointing directly to at least $5.6 million, possibly more, in phantom revenue raised through water and sewer rates last year that was later used to offset taxes.

The state Department of Revenue is keeping a close watch on Quincy, and has warned about using excessive water and sewer money to cover expenses for city government. Koch inherited a $3.8 million deficit in the city's water and sewer fund, a shortfall due in part to fiscal gamesmanship, the mayor said.

"We promised an open book, and that is what we are seeing now. We are moving forward to clean our house and straighten out the books, and what we have seen becomes more troubling day after day," Koch said. "We are not going to take from the pockets of our water and sewer ratepayers and drop it in the pocket of our property tax side just to make the books look better or more healthy than they actually are."

Last year, Mayor William Phelan submitted a budget to the city council that included $3.1 million in what is called "indirect costs" in the water and sewer departments. That money is money charged to ratepayers for items such as employee benefits and salaries in the water and sewer department.

But after delivering the budget, Phelan decided to raise an additional $5.6 million in revenue for those indirect costs by raising water and sewer bills and did not inform the Quincy City Council of his intentions. The money was then used to offset the city budget, a "robbing Peter to pay Paul" scenario that falsely boosted the city's financial health and kept taxes lower, Koch said.

The list of indirect costs raised by water bills to offset the city budget included: More than $2.5 million from the police department that was covered by raising water and sewer rates; more than

TOM KOCH

$1.5 million of the fire department budget covered by raising water and sewer rates; nearly $230,000 from the Park Department and even $50,000 from the City Council, budget that was covered by water and sewer rates,

"It is nearly impossible to imagine that the police and fire departments used a full 12 per cent of their budgets on water and sewer operations, yet that is exactly the math that was used previously," Koch said. "It is the definition of a shell game and it ends now."

Since taking office, Koch has highlighted a series of financial challenges, keeping with his pledge of transparency at City Hall.

He highlighted a $1.4 million payment for the Honeywell energy management project that was never budgeted; $1.7 million in debt payments that were unbudgeted and not even identified until Koch took office; $1.7 million in employee raises for contracts settled in 2007 that were never budgeted; $400,000 street paving contract change orders that were never budgeted; the $3.8 million deficit in the water and sewer department; and $2 taken from the city's rainy day fund to lower taxes in 2007, creating a structural deficit.

None of this includes the millions of dollars in extra debt payments that will be due because of the $46 million extra we pay for the new Quincy High School.

Last month, Koch submitted what he called a "maintenance budget" that started to correct inherited problems and kept city service at current levels. He later brokered a compromise budget with the City Council's finance committee that included $3 million in budget cuts in an effort to protect services and offset a portion of the tax raises necessary to correct the city's financial position.

At the same time, he instructed the Department of Public Works to conduct a wholesale investigation of the water and sewer departments, which he termed as "clearly broken." That review has included tracking down unmetered developments, increasing collections and fixing a series of billing problems. The city expects to see the positive results of that work in coming years, Koch said.

"We are without question getting our house in order," Koch said. "But to suggest, as former Mayor Phelan has, that there is some magic bullet hidden in a surplus, is patently false. We are no longer playing games with our resident's money, whether it is through the water bills or through property taxes."

The mayor's budget anticipated no "indirect cost" revenues being transferred from water and sewer rates during the fiscal year. Ultimately, some of the money may be available but he suggested that anticipating that revenue would place the city in the exact situation it faces now.

Former Mayor Bill Phelan:

Blame Game Plus Take Hike Won't Advance Quincy

By BILL PHELAN
Former Mayor

There is an old joke about Soviet Premier Khrushchev assuming office.

His predecessor advises him, "There are two letters in your desk, the first time you get in trouble, open the first letter and do as it says. Then the second time you get in trouble, read the second letter, and do as it says." When Khrushchev has his first disaster, he opens the first letter which reads, "Blame me." Khrushchev does as instructed, and the problem eventually goes away. Years later, a second disaster threatens. Remembering his success with the first letter, Khrushchev opens the second letter. It says: "Write two letters."

Quincy's Mayor Tom Koch seems to have read the first letter, and is blaming me and my administration for leaving him a fiscal mess that will require THE BIGGEST TAX INCREASE IN QUINCY HISTORY averaging $600 per household — and budget cuts. The truth is, as the Ledger recently reported, the numbers Mayor Koch is using to justify his massive tax increase just don't add up.

But please don't take my word for it, or Mayor Koch's. There are disinterested parties who have already weighed in on the fiscal situation Koch inherited.

An independent audit of city finances — required by law — was conducted just before I left office. It showed the city with a surplus of $17 million! And it's clear that Wall Street bond salesmen aren't interested in Quincy politics, and care only about the numbers. While I was mayor, Quincy received two bond rating increases from Moody's as well as two bond rating increases from Standard and Poors. These ratings reflect not just the city's present fiscal condition, but predict its financial future.

No one can dispute that despite inheriting a $5.6 million deficit my administration ended every fiscal year with a surplus, put more and more money in the bank each year, and saved the taxpayers over $33 million by not taxing to the levy limit (the legal limit property could be taxed under Proposition 2 1/2.)

When we left office Quincy's budget was approximately $17 million in the black, with $15 million in the bank between reserves and free cash, and there was $14 million untaxed levy capacity. In short, as noted by the bond rating agencies, the city's finances were in good shape.

So what is really going on? Last year my administration raised $149 million in total taxes. The new mayor wants to raise about $23 million more for a total of $172 million. Mayor Koch wants to raise your property taxes to the absolute limit of the unused levy capacity, plus the 2 1/2% permitted by law.

But the mayor's numbers just do not add up. When I publicly questioned the budget figures they are using to justify this tax increase, The Koch Administration spokesperson admitted that they really aren't sure about their numbers. Then why push for a tax increase?

With skyrocketing gas and heating oil bills, rising food prices and other expenses, the last thing Quincy families need is a $600 property tax increase. And raising taxes should be the very last thing Mayor Koch does. Instead, the mayor needs to go back to the drawing board, recheck his arithmetic and seek innovative new revenue sources as we did. Rather than soak taxpayers, we collected back rent from Quincy College, collected back taxes and parking fines, (ETC, ETC)

By bringing innovation, good bookkeeping, fiscal restraint and honesty to the budget process, Quincy's fiscal health can be maintained without new taxes.

Openings Available For Youth Basketball Academy

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti reminds area parents and kids that there still are openings for youngsters in his Future Captains Basketball Academy, which is being led this summer by Bill Loughnane, Boston College High School head basketball coach and former Massachusetts high school Coach of the Year.

The academy, which focuses on the qualities that transform players into leaders, is free-of-charge and caters to boys and girls between the ages of 12-14.

"The great thing about this academy is that the traits that make a good team captain also carry over into other facets of everyday life," said Bellotti. "Kids come out of this program better prepared for life in general as well as sports. And they have fun at the same time."

In discussing Loughnane, Bellotti noted: "We are very lucky that a coach of Bill Loughnane's caliber was available to us. The kids taking part in this summer's academy are in for a terrific learning experience."

In addition to honing basketball skills, the Future Captains Basketball Academy includes presentations on defining roles of a team player, the role of officials, bullying/hazing, sportsmanship, substance awareness, academics, peer pressure, decision making and social life.

The academy is held at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, Braintree Public Safety Complex. There are three one-week sessions for boys and three one-week sessions for girls, beginning July 7 and ending Aug. 15.

Openings remain in the first and third weeks of the boys sessions (July 7-11 and Aug. 4-8) and in the second and third weeks of the girls' sessions (July 28-Aug. 1 and Aug. 11-15).

Applications for the Future Captains Basketball Academy are available at city and town halls, local police departments, middle schools, town libraries and recreation centers throughout Norfolk County.

Additional information can be obtained by emailing Becky Lee at blee@norfolksheriffma.org or by calling 781-751-3522.

Mrs. Keeley died Monday.

She was a devoted wife, mother and cherished grandmother who adored her family. She was a kind, caring and generous woman who enjoyed the simple pleasures of life and cherished her time with her family.

The wife of 47 years to John J. Keeley, she was the mother of Karen Keeley of Quincy, John Keeley and his wife Patricia, Maureen Rego and her husband Chrs. Kelly Beatty and her husband David and Marybeth Nicholas and her husband Patrick, all of Weymouth.

She was the sister of the late Hartley, Frederick and Elizabeth Greenleaf and the late Helen Moore and the sister-in-law of Marion

CAROL A. KEELEY

Greenleaf of Wakefield and Mary Keeley of Quincy.

She is also survived by a brother-in-law, Paul Cronin of Scituate, 10 grandchildren, many nieces and nephews, and a dear friend, Barbara Boussy.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to Fr. Bill's Place, 38 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Blanche S. Caiewski, 95 Line Worker For Raytheon

A funeral Mass for Blanche S. (Jarasitis) Caiewski, 95, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, a retired line worker at Raytheon, was celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Saint Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Mrs. Caiewski died June 1 at Quincy Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, Quincy.

She was born in Boston. She worked for Raytheon for 24 years.

Mrs. Caiewski's life revolved around her family. She especially enjoyed her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Caiewski loved to cook and enjoyed family celebrations and holidays. She took great interest in the day trips planned with her assisted living friends.

She also enjoyed people, reading and crochet.

Wife of the late Anthony Caiewski, she was the mother of Blanche DiNocco and her late husband Robert of Quincy, William Caiewski and his wife Donna of Marshfield, Joan Palmer and her husband Richard of Marshfield; and her late daughter-in-law Marilyn (Mullaney) Caiewski.

She was the sister of Peter Jarasitis of Somerville and the late Vincent Jarasitis, the late Francis Jarasitis, the late Charles Jarasitis and the late Alex Jarasitis.

She is also survived by eight grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Interment will be in Saint Michael's Cemetery, Boston.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Ann's Parish, Hancock St., Wollaston, MA 02170.

Flag Day Parade, Celebration To Honor Veterans June 14

The 57th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration will honor Quincy's veterans who have returned home, as well as a special contingent of veterans who serve the city's police and fire departments.

"It is necessary and appropriate to honor the dedication and sacrifices made by our servicemen and women from the city who have safely returned home after proudly serving our country," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee.

"This year, we pay special tribute to our returning veterans who also protect and serve our citizens daily through their dedicated service on the police and fire departments," he added.

All returning veterans are welcome to participate in the parade and celebration. Those who are interested may contact Flag Day Committee member Henry Bradley, Director of Veterans' Services at 617-376-1193.

The Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday evening, June 14. The event, including the parade, flag raising ceremony and fireworks display is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and the Koch Club.

The parade steps off on Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. and will proceed down Hancock Street and disband at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park. Featured participants include the American Belles, marching bands, drum corps, color guards, military vehicles and, the perennial highlight, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

The parade originated in 1951 and was started by the late Richard J. Koch, father of Mayor Koch, and the Koch Club and focused on honoring our flag and teaching youngsters to take pride in our country.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park which will include a flag raising of a massive 30 foot x 60 foot version of Old Glory, patriotic music and sing-a-long, fly-over, and howitzer salute capped off with a dazzling fireworks display at approximately 9:15 p.m.

Host Families Needed For Upcoming Babe Ruth World Series

Organizers of this summer's 14-year old Babe Ruth World Series tournament are actively looking for families to host players from across the country during the national event scheduled for August 16-23 to be played at Adams Field in Merrymount Park.

Families interested in hosting players for the tournament should contact Marie Sullivan at 617-407-5053. Host families must agree to house two players and would need to be available starting on August 14 when players arrive in Quincy.

Responsibilities include, primarily, driving players to games and practices and taking care of basic player needs. Babe Ruth organizers will provide cases of water, gift certificates to Stop and Shop and other incidentals for the players.

"If you love baseball, or have younger children who love baseball, or have grandchildren who love baseball, this is just a wonderful opportunity," said Sullivan, who is coordinating the volunteer service. "It is a great experience to share with someone from another state."

All hosts are CORI checked, and Babe Ruth organizers will step in to handle any major issues that may arise, organizers said.

A number of other volunteer opportunities will be available for the tournament, which is returning to Quincy for the third time.

Home Freezers

A home freezer can be a good bargain over the long term, but buying a freezer also can be a major expense.

Here are some things to consider in deciding whether having a freezer is the right move for you.

Determine how much capacity you'll need. Rule of thumb is to multiply the number of family members by 1.5 cubic feet, adding more to the calculation if you'll be adding large quantities of meat from hunting or bulk buys, or if you'll be freezing vegetables from a large garden.

Read the EnergyStar rating labels for the amount of energy the freezer will use, and multiply by the kilowatt hour cost (you'll find that on your electric bill) to determine your costs to run the freezer.

Consider the styles — upright and chest — and the pros and cons for both.

Upright freezers are shaped like a refrigerator and therefore take up less floor space. Since they open from the front, it's easier to find what you want, but bulky items can be hard to store. Uprights usually cost a bit more than the chest style, but most are self-defrosting. When you open the door of an upright freezer, your cold air spills out onto the floor, which adds to your energy cost.

Chest freezers are more energy efficient because the cold air doesn't escape when you open the top. Most are manual defrost, which saves energy, but can be an unwanted chore. It can be difficult to find items that are at the bottom.

Options you'll want to consider:

- A lock with key for safety around children
- Self-defrost
- Magnetic door seal
- Interior light
- A defrost drain for manual defrost
- Adjustable temperature control
- Warranty and on-site service

Don't buy more freezer than you need, due to the operating costs. Freezers work best if filled most of the way. With a too-big freezer, you'll pay extra for the freezer and then again every month when your electric bill comes due.

A freezer can be a money saver if it means fewer trips to the store — less gas, less impulse buying — or that you won't eat out as often. But consider your actual usage to determine if it will be worth your while to own one.

Selling Your Home?

Price It Right The First Time

The old rule of pricing your home high because you can always come down doesn't apply in this declining market. Studies show that you'll get more for your home if it is priced right the first time.

The trick is to be realistic about the current market value of your home. According to a recent Associated Press report, there is such a glut of available homes on the market right now that it would take 9.6 months to sell the current supply of homes. Waiting several months to sell a home could leave many recession-plagued sellers in financial distress.

For example, a home with a $250,000 mortgage at an interest rate of 6.5 percent would accrue approximately $15,600 in mortgage payments over a 9.6-month period. This could be a real financial burden for many.

So what are the rules in this current real estate market? Dan Steward, president of Pillar to Post, North America's leading provider of home inspection services offers these three tips:

- Have a home inspection done before listing the house. This lets sellers identify any problems, and the seller can decide whether to fix them. These early inspections make it easier to sell your home at the highest valuation. Usually, for every repair a homebuyer finds, he or she will typically ask for double or triple that in a price reduction. For example, paying a $5,000 for a roof repair is a lot more enticing than losing $15,000 in the sale. In addition, having work done before a house is listed leaves a seller with a maintenance checklist to pass on to the potential buyer that itemizes what has been repaired and what still needs to be repaired.

• Houses that look good, are well maintained and tastefully decorated sell quicker. Put yourself in the buyer's shoes. With so many houses to choose from, a serious buyer doesn't have to settle for a fixer-upper to get a great price. Ask your local real estate agent for advice on what cosmetic improvements to make.

• Always be ready to adjust your price. If your home isn't attracting buyers in the first month that it is listed, that's when you should think about adjusting your asking price.

Small Water Leaks Mean Big Costs

According to the EPA, at least 36 states believe that they will suffer water shortages by 2013.

Conserving water has become "the name of the game." Builders install high-efficiency showerheads, low-flow sinks and toilets and rain gardens in green buildings, but plumbing leaks can still waste water.

Homeowners can tell when their toilets overflow or their basements flood, but many leaks prove subtle. Copper pipes can develop pinholes, and plumbing systems can fail, causing the small drips and drops that reduce water efficiency.

Wasted water adds up for homeowners. A pipe dripping one drop of water each second will lose nearly 3,104 gallons of water each year—a loss homeowners do not want to see on their water bills.

Currently, leaks account for 13.7 percent of homes' water use. The homeowners must pay for this wasted water and, worse yet, must pay for damage it causes. Even a small leak can encourage mold growth. Mold, a major indoor allergy source, can reduce indoor air quality and is nearly impossible to remove completely.

Leaks usually prove easy and in expensive fixes if people can detect them. New technologies, like "circuit-breakers" for pipes, are now allowing homeowners to detect small leaks before they become big problems. Like an electrical circuit breaker, which protects electrical wires from overloads, these new products automatically shut off extra water flow.

"Popular Science" magazine noted one product, the FloLogic System, for its revolutionary idea. FloLogic is able to monitor an entire home's plumbing system from one location in the water main. When the flow through the system's sensor exceeds a preset limit, the product shuts off the water and sounds an alarm at the keypad. The alarm can also be linked to home security systems.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop At City Hall June 24, 26

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will hold a first-time homebuyer workshop Tuesday, June 24 from 5 to 9 p.m. and Thursday, June 26 from 5 to 9 p.m. in the second floor conference room of Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The workshop is sponsored by Sovereign Bank.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

There is a $15 fee per person.

To register or for more information, call 617-770-2227 ext. 31.

The workshop is open to all Massachusetts residents, regardless of income. Seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first-time homebuyers.

Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss mortgage options. Other topics include legal aspects of home buying, and the importance of home and lead inspections and other information.

The workshop is a prerequisite for first-time home buyer mortgage and grant programs.

History in the Making

by Susan & Jeremy

Relocating from New York had its challenges. We wanted a house with historic character in a quiet neighborhood. Our CENTURY 21 Annex Realty agent, John Heaney, knew the area like the back of his hand. He really listened to what we wanted and thanks to him, we now have a home in which we can create our own history.

Affordable Tree-Trimming

Q. My yard has three great old trees whose branches are reaching well out over the street. The city recently sent me a notice that these branches will have to be trimmed back. I don't mind being asked, but I can't afford a tree-cutting service on a fixed income. What are my options? — Barry F., Winter Park, Fla.

A. Trimming away tree limbs, removing dead trees and other large-scale tree maintenance tasks are definitely jobs that should be handled by professionals — particularly when removing limbs over public streets and around power lines. But the price for such services can be steep.

Your first call should be to the city itself, to find out if there are any tree maintenance programs in place that will defray some of the cost of de-limbing those trees. The city might also have a program for home repairs to help pay for home repair and maintenance costs. Other nonprofit assistance organizations also might be able to help.

Notices like this can be appealed to the city, so to avoid any fines while searching for assistance, go ahead and ask for an appeal. Be sure to mention that you are having financial difficulty.

Cities with historic districts may have grant programs in place — if your home is located in a designated historic district, find out if you qualify for any property improvement grants.

In any case, you'll have to do some homework, fill out paperwork, make a few phone calls and be determined to get a clear answer on obtaining financial assistance.

Additionally, once you're ready to hire a tree maintenance service, ask for a written estimate and the service's license number, and don't allow any work to be performed until you have agreed to and signed the estimate.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homegurur2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Energy Savings: Don't Overlook Windows

When most people consider energy savings, they think about things such as lowering thermostats, turning off lights and perhaps setting the washing machine to cold water. What many don't realize is that they may be overlooking an important area. Windows let in natural light, but they also let in unwanted heat and damaging UV rays that take their toll on furnishings and energy costs. Sun-control window films can be an easy, cost-effective way to block heat and UV rays, helping to reduce energy costs and protecting furnishings from fading.

Until recently, most heat-rejecting window films were tinted dark, used metal or were highly reflective, giving off a mirror-like appearance. Certain films, such as Prestige Series from 3M, are clear, nonmetallic films that block up to 66 percent of heat penetrating windows, which can result in less stress on air-conditioning systems and can help lower overall energy costs in summer months. Because they are metal free, the films are not susceptible to corrosion and don't interfere with wireless signals.

Underscoring the effectiveness of window films, select manufacturers recently joined the Clinton Climate Initiative's landmark global procurement agreement to help reduce carbon dioxide emissions by making energy-saving technologies affordable and accessible to cities around the world. Under the agreement, the companies will sell energy-saving window films to 40 of the world's largest cities at greater volumes and reduced cost.

In addition to energy savings, window films offer myriad benefits, including increased security. By helping to hold shards of glass in place, safety and security window films can provide an extra layer of protection against severe weather and would-be intruders. Pairing window films with an attachment system, such as 3M Impact Protection Adhesive, actually bonds the filmed glass and frame of a window to enhance window strength.

QCAP Homebuyer Workshop Begins June 10

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will hold a first-time homebuyer workshop in Quincy on three evenings: Tuesday, June 10, June 19 and June 24.

The workshop will be held at 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor conference room, Quincy, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Attendance at all three sessions is required in order to receive a certificate of attendance. Sessions are open to everyone regardless of income, credit ratings, or downpayment availability.

The free workshop is sponsored by Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.

Workshop speakers are professionals from different real estate fields. Participants will receive a workbook, which contains references that pertain to homebuying.

Upon completion of the course, participants will receive a certificate, which is a prerequisite for down-payment closing cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required. For more information, con-

Planners Win Award For Showcasing Development

The Planning Department's celebration saluting National Community Development Week last March can now be officially described as "award-winning."

Planning Director Dennis Harrington was notified last week that his department has won the John A. Sasso National Community Development Award for showcasing the work it has done with its CDBG funds.

Since 1975, the federal

Community Development Block Grant program has provided more than $67 million to Quincy for housing rehabilitation, public works, affordable housing, handicapped accessibility and other economic development.

"We had a very strong application, due to the fact that our Community Development Week events concluded the involvement of Congressman William Delahunt and Taylor Caswell, the New England regional Director of HUD," said Harrington.

"We greatly appreciate the support of our congressman and Mr. Caswell with respect to these vital programs."

"I am very pleased with the National Community Development Association's recognition of our Community Development Week activities," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

"I am very proud of our staff in the Department of Planning and Community Development who work tirelessly to administer our community development programs, which provide a better quality of life for youth, seniors and low-income individuals throughout this great city.

Carbon Monoxide Dangers: What Would You Have Done?

The other day I was approached by Lt. Hobin who conveyed the details of an incident he felt had some educational value for the public. Hearing it, I agreed. It has to do with a recent carbon monoxide (CO) incident when alarms were activated and in one instance ignored.

It's unfortunate in a way where a day earlier I was interviewed on Cable Access TV on this very subject, CO, while I would love to have had the opportunity to share the circumstances of this incident there as well. Relating to actual incidents can be a learning experience for all of us, especially if we can see ourselves responding the way others have or have not, and consequently learn from their actions. So let me take this opportunity to convey some of the details of this incident and ask what would you have done if your carbon monoxide alarm sounded?

At roughly 8:30 p.m., Engine 1 was called to a condo unit within a multi-family dwelling to investigate the activation of a carbon monoxide alarm. Upon entry into that unit, a positive carbon monoxide reading was found using our own equipment. The problem Lt. Hobin and his crew had to solve was, there were no fossil fuel burning appliances within the condo unit. Fossil fuel burning equipment is any equipment utilizing natural gas, propane, fuel oil, coal or wood as a source of energy. Neither of the appliances, the heating unit or stove, utilized these sources of energy. So where was the CO coming from?

Firefighter Murphy knocked on another door to speak with the owners of that condo unit. Their CO detector had been in alarm earlier while in this instance the owner removed the battery in the detector assuming the alarm was a malfunction and never called the fire department. Readings were taken in that unit with our own equipment and higher CO concentrations were found. Remember that carbon monoxide (CO) is poisonous, odorless, colorless and tasteless; without the installation of a CO alarm, its presence can go undetected.

As in the first condo unit, this unit too was devoid of fossil fuel burning equipment. So what was the source of CO?

Investigating the entire building, a gas fired water heater was found at the far end of the building. Earlier in the day, roof work was performed and a tarpaulin was draped over the side of the building. What these workers neglected to realize was, in doing so, they were blocking a side wall vent. Combustion gases from that gas water heater, CO included, were then redirected back into the building.

The condo owner who called when his detector activated did the right thing and tragedy was avoided by the subsequent investigation and actions of Lt. Hobin and his crew. The second condo owner assumed the alarm was a malfunction and ignored its warning.

Remember that CO is poisonous, colorless, odorless and tasteless. What would you have done?

Every residential occupancy must now conform to Nicole's Law and have properly placed, working carbon monoxide alarms. If you haven't installed them already, please do so. You can call here in the Fire Prevention office (617-376-1015) to discuss proper placement.

We look forward to assisting you.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

LIVING WITH GOUT

Gout is a type of arthritis characterized by redness, swelling, and a burning pain. Often affecting the toes, gout is caused by a build-up of uric acid, a by-product of urate, which is naturally produced by the body and certain high-protein foods. Your podiatrist can prescribe medication that will help prevent gout, but there are steps you can take to make it less likely to occur. Keeping your weight down will less the amount of pressure on your joints. Limit the amount of protein you eat. Organ meats, anchovies, and some other types of fish are particularly high in protein. Limit your alcohol intake, as alcohol inhibits the breakdown of uric acid. Also be sure to drink plenty of fluids.

Many medical conditions that affect the body's joints cause damage to the feet. That's why you should see your podiatrist regularly, especially if you have any condition that may cause gout. Although we don't treat the underlying medical conditions, we do work closely with your primary care physicians to provide comprehensive care and catch problems early. For an appointment for footcare for the family, please call us at 781-986-3668. Our full service footcare facility is located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S: Gout is more common in men than women.

Quincy Students Show Carpentry Skills At YouthBuild Challenge

Seven students from the Training Resources of America, Inc. Quincy YouthBuild program participated in the 12th annual YouthBuild Challenge held recently at the Home Depot in Methuen.

Competing with nine other teams from all over New England, their hopes were high for a repeat of last year's win. This year they were awarded Honorable Mention status.

Cutting wood, swinging hammers, and assembling the three-walled structure were: Matthew Miller, Michael Morganelli, Joaquin Storms, Joseph Carnes, Ryan Serafini, David Barron, and James Joyce. Only six students were allowed in "the pit" at any time, so one student rotated out throughout the competition.

The students received direction and feedback from their teachers Keith Hale, team coach, and Tom Shruhan, both of the Quincy Housing Authority, which provides the Quincy YouthBuild worksite and skills training. Lead carpenter Paul Curran served as referee.

One important direction was "Measure twice!" since the students were judged on the accuracy of their measurements as well as the speed, quality, skill, teamwork and safety. "Remember it's quality, not speed."

The project involved using plywood, sheeting and drywall, as well as double-headed nails to facilitate dismantling the structures after judging. The structures were framed and leveled with openings for a door and window.

At the midway break Chris Cato of the Green Initiative told the students, "You need to lead in building green." This included buying building materials locally and using recycled supplies wherever possible. He urged them to be "environmentally responsible citizens." A table with a solar energy display highlighted use of alternative fuels.

Cato reminded them, "Home Depot made this space available, so let's leave it looking better when we leave," which they did with a thorough clean-up.

But it was not "all work and no play" as entertainment included recorded music and hip hop performances by some of those involved in the program.

The upbeat atmosphere was tangible when event coordinator Yamira Cartagena of Lawrence led the group in a cheer with "When I say 'Youth,' you say 'Build!'"

Through the day one could hear "shoutouts" over the loudspeaker for students who had completed their GED and/or gotten jobs.

"I'm extremely proud of all my young people for their dedication. They worked very hard to get here," said TRA Quincy Manager Isabel Cobb.

Also on hand to support the team were Youth Build Counselor/ Case Manager Rhonda Callahan, Alumni Coordinator/ Office Support Hollie Smith, Public Relations Associate Diane Cooney and QHA Modernization Project Manager Rita Vaga.

Merck Manual Award given to outstanding students in medical studies and, in her junior year, she was inducted into the Alpha Omega Alpha National Honor Medical Society.

19 Quincy High School Students Inducted Into National Honor Society For Mathematics

Nineteen Quincy High School students were recently inducted this year into Mu Alpha Theta, the National Honor Society for High School Mathematics.

The students are seniors Yi Mei Dong, Daiyi Siti, Shi Jun Wu, Cheng Wei Yang, Tsz Chun Yung, Min Zhang, Cindy Zheng; juniors Chaoran Chan, Lili Gu, Xiao Dan Situ, Minyi Tan, Shu Wang, Lap Pong Wong, You Wu, Yan Yan Xiong, Lei Zhao, Xiao Ting Zheng, Zu Yang Zhu and sophomore Barbara Wong. All of the students are members of Quincy High School's Math Club, which has had a charter from Mu Alpha Theta since 2000.

Members from Quincy

High School's Math club meet weekly from October to April to prepare for and take part in regional and national competitions.

Under the able leadership of the club's presidents Tsz Chun Yung, this year's members used puzzles, games and mind-benders to learn mathematical problem-solving strategies

Past-president Wu Xi He was this year's champion problem-solver. Math Club members of Mu Alpha Theta wear that organization's insignia at graduation, a double silk cord of gold and sky blue.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, May 28, at approximately 9:15 p.m., officers were dispatched to the area of Star Market on a report of an armed robbery. Sergeant Gregory Goyette arrived on scene first and interviewed the victim and immediately informed responding units of the description of two suspects.

The male victim stated that he was walking to Star Market from Fruit Square when two males in the alley approached him between the Fruit Basket and Rite Aid Pharmacy. He stated that they asked him if he wanted to buy some "crack."

LT. DAN MINTON

When the victim said no, one suspect asked him if he had any money while the other suspect pulled out a knife and held it toward him saying, "Hurry the %^&$ up!" The victim stated that he emptied his pockets and gave them approximately $3.00 in change and his watch. The suspect took the victim's wallet, and then threw it to the ground. The victim was directed to pick up his wallet and as he did, one of the suspects kicked him, then yelled at him to, "Run!"

The victim described the suspect who had the knife as a young black male approximately 5'08" tall with a thin build, black hair in cornrows or short dreads and wearing a white T-shirt. He described the other suspect as a young black male approximately 5'07" tall with a medium build, black hair and wearing a red jacket. The victim stated that he last saw one of the males running toward Granite Street and he would definitely recognize the suspects if he saw them again.

At approximately 10:55 p.m., Officer Paul Murphy was driving east on Copeland Street when he spotted two males whose clothing and physical description closely matched the description of the suspects in this case. Officer Murphy pulled up near the suspects and observed one of the suspects throw something to the ground, landing on top of a storm drain. The suspect was asked what he threw and he said, "My knife," as he bent down and attempted to pick up the knife. Officer Murphy ordered him to drop the knife and called for another unit.

Officer Joseph Paccioretti arrived shortly thereafter and the Officers detained the suspects while Officer William O'Neill picked up the victim of the earlier robbery to attempt to identify the suspects who robbed him.

While on their way to the location, Officer O'Neill and the victim passed two young black males on Copeland Street near Kincaid Park. One was slightly taller than the other and the shorter one was wearing an orange shirt. Officer O'Neill gave the victim an opportunity to take a second and closer look at these two males in case they might be the suspects who robbed him. After looking at these two males, the victim said that they were not the suspects.

When Officer O'Neill pulled up to the suspects, the victim stated that he was one hundred percent certain that they were the youths who had robbed him earlier this evening. The knife was shown to the victim and asked if it was the knife used against him. He responded, "Yes. Absolutely. That's the knife they had."

The suspects, one a 15-year-old Quincy resident and the other a 16-year-old Boston resident, were placed under arrest at that time and transported to the station for booking. Both suspects were charged with "Armed Robbery, to wit, knife" and the four-inch blade knife was taken into evidence. Nice Work!

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

You Did It! Now Don't Let Up

Q. After working so hard to reach my weight goal, I would like to change my workouts from five days a week to three days a week. It took me six months to reach my goal, and I am getting a little bored and now would like to change my workouts to a maintenance routine. Is this possible?

A. Congratulations on meeting your fitness goals during the past six months. Your hard work definitely paid off. I would love to tell you that you can now limit your exercise routine and maintain the success you have just achieved; however, it's not that simple. Although you may be able to modify your workouts to maintain your current level, you will have to continue to work.

The maintenance phase of exercise is a place many people strive to reach. If only they can achieve their goals, then maybe they can limit the amount of exercise they do and still maintain their level of fitness — or not work out at all as high an intensity and remain at their goal weight, body fat or fitness level. Before you consider limiting your exercise, look at what it required for you to meet your goals.

Exercising five days a week can be a great commitment of time and energy. When you have a goal, it seems logical to spend as much time as possible working toward it. It is important to remember, though, that you will have to work just as hard to maintain it. This might not mean working out five days a week, but it might entail continuing to modify your workouts.

Change up your workouts. If working out five days a week is not possible anymore, then make the most of three days, but change from your normal routine. The cardiovascular routine that helped you reach your goal is great for now, but over time your body will adjust to the challenge that is needed to complete this exercise and will not have to work as hard to complete it. This can result in lower calorie expenditure, which in turn will change the number of calories you burn each workout and affect your ability to maintain the fitness goal you reached.

If your body was burning 325 calories on the treadmill each workout and now is burning only 300 calories, you will begin to see changes to your results because your body is no longer burning those 25 additional calories each workout. Over time, if you maintain the same nutrition habits and do not make up the calorie difference in other activities, you will begin to see your body change.

To avoid burning out or getting bored, try new activities. Think outside the box of your normal routine and add other workouts that are fun and exciting and allow your body to maintain the intensity you achieved while reaching your goal. Your "maintenance phase" will consist of new exercises, not the elimination of exercise.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475

Granite Medical Group Achieves Top Clinical Quality Ratings

Granite Medical Group, an affiliate of Atrius Health, announces that its internal medicine practice achieved four-star ratings in clinical quality measures in the 2008 Massachusetts Health Quality Partners (MHQP) Quality Insights: Clinical Quality in Primary Care report.

Overall, Atrius Health received four out of four stars, the highest possible ranking, on 16 of the 19 clinical quality measures in the MHQP report.

Granite Medical physicians scored at or above the 90th national percentile (four stars) in important preventive and chronic care measures including appropriate use of medication for treatment depression; hemoglobin testing, cholesterol screening and kidney disease monitoring in adult diabetics; correct imaging use for lower back pain; colon cancer, cervical cancer and breast cancer screenings; cholesterol screening after a heart attack or heart surgery; and chlamydia screening in young women.

Granite Medical was founded in 1997 and joined Atrius Health in 2005. Their 20 physicians and 5 nurse practitioners are committed to providing patients with the highest quality of care at its convenient location in Quincy. In addition to internal medicine, many of the Granite Medical providers have expertise in a sub-specialty, including cardiology, endocrinology, gastroenterology, gerontology, hepatology, nutrition, podiatry, pulmonary medicine and rheumatology.

Granite Medical accepts insurance from most major health plans, including Aetna, Blue Cross Blue Shield of MA, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Neighborhood Health Plan, Tufts Health Plan and Tufts Medicare Preferred. For more information, visit www.granitemedical.com.

MHQP is an independent, non-profit organization that collects and publicly reports statewide patient experience and clinical performance data for physicians to help improve the quality of health care services delivered to Massachusetts residents.

MHQP compiled quality data from nearly 150 medical groups across the state for their fourth annual report. The results of the MHQP 2008 Clinical Quality in Primary Care report can be viewed at www.MHQP.org.

Get Your Feet 'Spring Ready'

With warmer temperatures approaching, people will begin to prepare their feet for their spring debut—which means making sure their feet look and feel good.

One way to achieve that feeling is to get a professional pedicure. In a recent American Podiatric Medical Association (APMA) survey of women ages 18-49, close to 50 percent stated that they had received a professional pedicure by the age of 25—a ritual that may be more healthful than you had think.

"Pampering and grooming your feet promotes good foot hygiene and should be done frequently to contribute to not only your foot health, but also to your body's overall health," said Dr. Marlene Reid, an APMA podiatric physician.

The following tips will help you attain a safe and perfect pedicure, which will put some spring into your step for the warmer, sandal-wearing season ahead:

For salon pedicures:

Think clean: Salons are typically cleanest earlier in the day, so consider making your pedicure appointment during the morning hours.

Limit the risk of infection: As precautions, take your own utensils and refrain from shaving your legs prior to your visit to limit the risk of cuts and scrapes getting infected. Additionally, don't allow technicians to use a razor to remove dead skin on your feet. This can lead to infection if done incorrectly.

For pedicures at home:

Properly care for cuticles: Always use a rubber cuticle tool to gently push back cuticle tissue. Never cut cuticles as this can increase the risk of infection. Resist pushing back cuticles often—this can make cuticles thicker and harder to manage.

Stick to straight: Use a toenail clipper with a straight edge to clip toenails straight across. Rounding toenail edges greatly increases the chance that ingrown nails will develop.

Smooth feet correctly: Begin by soaking feet in warm water for five minutes. Follow up by scrubbing feet gently with a pumice stone, foot file or exfoliating scrub to remove thick, dead skin build-up.

Finish up with polish: Always use nail polish when putting the final touches on your spring-ready feet. Only apply polish to healthy nails—if nails are thick or discolored, don't cover them with polish. This locks out moisture and prevents the nail bed from breathing. If fungus problems persist, consult a podiatric physician immediately.

Health Awareness

A Donation That Makes Hopes, Dreams Come True

Every day someone makes the decision to save a life by becoming a marrow donor.

It's a step that can save the life of a person who needs the marrow donation but it also helps transform the lives of those who donate.

Jackie Byrd is a good example of a person who gave a little bit of herself so that someone else could live. When she was in college she pledged a sorority with a community service project focused on raising awareness in the African American community about the need for more people to join the National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP) Registry.

When Byrd joined the Registry she recalls thinking, "It will never happen to me. I will never be called. I'm not the one—I'm not the chosen one."

Many years later, Byrd did receive the call. She was asked to visit her local donor center for additional tests to confirm that she was indeed a match for a patient searching for a second chance of life. A week later a coordinator from the center called to tell her, "You are the one."

Byrd's commitment to donate her marrow was something she took very seriously. "As a teacher, I believe in children and I believe in lives, and if I'm going to walk the talk, this was something I had to do. There was no turning back once I was chosen."

More than 6,000 men, women and children a day search the National Marrow Donor Program Registry for a life-saving donor. These patients have leukemia, lymphoma and other life-threatening diseases for which a marrow transplant could be their only hope for a cure. Patients like Paizley Carwell Bowens.

Paizley was born with sickle cell anemia—an inherited blood disorder that caused her to spend much of her life in and out of the hospital and in constant pain. Even though chemotherapy helped, it was not a cure.

Paizley's doctors told her mother that she would need a marrow transplant. According to the NMDP, only 30 percent of patients have a matching donor in their family for a transplant. Unfortunately Paizley's sister was not a match.

And so began Paizley's search of the NMDP Registry of nearly 7 million people for a donor who could save her life. A donor who Paizley had never met who would be willing to step up and donate when called. That donor was Byrd.

"I thank God for people who are willing to give a little bit of themselves to bless children like me," said Paizley. "Thanks to Jackie and all the other people who helped me, I will be able to make my hopes and dreams come true."

Joining the NMDP Registry is easy. A few minutes of paperwork and a quick swab of the inside of the cheek is all it takes to be added to the Registry.

People who are interested in joining need to meet a few basic requirements: be between the ages of 18 and 60, met general health guidelines and be willing to donate to any patient in need.

Visit www.marrow.org or call 1-800-MARROW-2 for more information about the National Marrow Donor Program and how you can save a life.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PURELY COSMETIC

Thanks to television makeover shows, there has been a widespread increase in public awareness of cosmetic dentistry procedures. Understandably, the procedure most requested by patients is tooth whitening, and with good reason. In nearly all cases where tooth whitening is deemed appropriate, patients have a relatively fast, affordable, and effective way to improve their appearance. In short, tooth whitening provides an awful lot of "bang for the buck" without pain or recovery time. Still most dentists report that tooth whitening represents only a small fraction of the cosmetic procedures they perform. The fact is that the cosmetic procedures classified as "preventative" are much more common, underscoring the important role that cosmetic dentistry plays in maintaining good overall oral health. Many things we do on a regular basis can contribute to stained teeth. For example, smoking cigarettes and drinking beverages like coffee, tea, cola and red wine can discolor the teeth. Having a bright, luminous smile is the number one aesthetic concern of most patients. We feel that cosmetic dentistry cannot only change the way other people see you, but it can also greatly improve the way you see yourself. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. While replacement of a lost tooth serves the cosmetic purpose of eliminating an unsightly space, it also provides the practical function of preserving the integrity of the bite and chewing ability.

Taunton Tames Quincy In Sectional

SPORTS

By SEAN BRENNAN

Time ran out Sunday night at Taunton High School for the Quincy Presidents in the Division I South Sectional softball tournament.

Quincy, the number seven seed, previously had knocked off Fontbonne Academy 2-0 in a first round game on Saturday at Mitchell/McCoy Field, but the quick turnaround and the pitching of Taunton senior Erin Wade ended the Presidents' successful season in the quarterfinals.

"Taunton is one of the best teams in the state," said head coach Mike Sedar. "But even with the final 5-0 result, we were in that game till the end. We played well defensively, but they were just the better team."

"I am proud of my kids. And am pretty happy with how the season turned out. We are a young team, but that is not the reason we lost. If anything we grew as a team this year and we will take what needs to be fixed and fix it for next season."

For Quincy (17-4), Wade presented a different pitching challenge than any that they had faced all season long in the Atlantic Coast League, she can bring the heat.

"She is the best," said Sedar. "We don't see any gas. We hit off-speed all year long, and we come in and this kid is throwing maybe in the high 50s and 60s. This is the fastest kid we've seen all year. There is no way we can fix that in one day."

The Presidents own star pitcher, freshman Kori Sorenson, held her own against one of the state's best pitchers. Sorenson finished the quarterfinal game with six strikeouts, but once the Tigers went up 2-0 after two innings of play, Quincy could not recover and the game and their season was finished.

On Saturday, the Presidents hosted Fontbonne Academy in a first-round game. And behind the solid pitching of Sorenson (7 innings, six Ks) and the timely hitting of senior captain Marybeth Torpey, Quincy escaped with a 2-0 victory.

"Fontbonne is a good team so it was nice to escape with the 2-0 win," added Sedar. "We played real well defensively and Kori was great again on the mound. It was great to get back to the post-season (Quincy was 1-19 in 2007) and get at least one win. It is something we can build on moving forward next season."

Fontbonne and Quincy, playing in extremely windy conditions, were deadlocked at 0-0 after five and half innings of play, but in the bottom of the sixth inning, the Presidents made their move and scored twice.

The first run scored on an error by the Fontbonne catcher. Quincy had a runner on third and first and a delayed steal forced an errant throw into centerfield scoring the game winning run. Torpey, with one out and a runner on second, hit a flare to right field that scored the second run of the frame.

With a two-run lead and three outs to go for a victory, Sorenson retired the final three batters she faced to seal the win for Quincy.

"Kori pitched her heart out all season long for us. Without her we would not have been as successful as we were this year," said Sedar. "People kept saying after the Taunton loss that for as young as we were we played great. I never used our age as an excuse. We learned a lot about our team and the experiences gained will only help us moving forward."

"We are excited about what this team can do in the years to come."

The ACL North Division champions had four starters named to the Atlantic Coast League all-star team. Those players were Marybeth Torpey, Elisa Lam, Olivia Berry and Kori Sorenson.

MIKE FINN of Quincy recently celebrated his birthday at a Boston Cannons "Qdoba Birthday Bash" with Cannons player, Brett Bucktooth. Mike Finn and his friends and family were among the thousands of fans in attendance at Harvard Stadium May 23 to see the Boston Cannons take on the Rochester Rattlers. Birthday celebrations are held two hours prior to Boston Cannons home games adjacent to the concession stands. Guests have the opportunity to partake in an autograph session with the guest of honor's favorite Cannons player. The Boston Cannons are part of Major League Lacrosse, a professional outdoor lacrosse league.

Attleboro Ends North Quincy Run

The North Quincy Red Raiders' post-season came to a quick end last Thursday evening with a 2-0 loss to North Attleboro High School at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The Raiders (12-8), the number 16 seed in the Division I South Sectional tournament, had the opportunity to take an early first inning lead, but were denied a run on a controversial umpire decision.

Leadoff hitter, senior Kasey O'Connell, walked to start the game for North and immediately stole second base. Senior catcher Kerry Coughlin flew out to center field for the first out and with sophomore Jess Ainsley at the dish, O'Connell advanced to third base on a passed ball.

Ainsley then pulled a 3-1 pitch to left-center field and as the ball was caught, O'Connell took off for the plate and beat the throw, but after North Attleboro complained to the men in blue, the umpires got together and ruled that O'Connell had left the bag early and therefore was out at third.

The decision denied North a run and North Attleboro took advantage of the call by scoring a run in the top of the second inning to take the 1-0 lead.

North Quincy pitcher, senior Paige Bonanni (seven innings, two runs), shutdown North Attleboro for the next five innings, giving her team the chance to get back into the game and the Raiders came oh-so-close to tying the contest in the bottom of the fourth.

O'Connell bunted her way own to begin the fourth and Coughlin moved her into scoring position with a perfect sacrifice bunt. After Ainsley popped out, senior Rebecca Goreham laced a singled to center. With two outs, North Quincy head coach Mike Connor waved O'Connell home. Unfortunately for North, the North Attleboro center fielder threw a bullet towards the plate, cutting down O'Connell on a close play at home and ending the threat.

This golden scoring opportunity would end up being the last chance North Quincy would have to score in this game as the North Attleboro defense retired the final nine North batters in order.

North Attleboro scored an insurance run in the top of the seventh for a 2-0 lead, and when the Raiders went 1-2-3 in the bottom of the inning the game and season came to an end.

Rebecca Goreham, Paige Bonanni, Kasey O'Connell, Simone Leary and Kerry Coughlin all played their final varsity games against North Attleboro.

Natick's Defense Too Much For Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents' post-season run ended with a 13-5 first round loss to Natick High School last Friday evening in the Division I South Sectional tournament.

"It was a good game and we did a nice job of getting the ball in play, but we went up against a very good defensive team in Natick and that was the difference," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "We had our chances to score some more runs, but it just seemed that every ball we hit, and we hit plenty real solid, ended up being caught. We made some errors in the infield and it all just caught up to us in the end."

The Presidents finished the season with a 11-10 record and, by earning their second straight appearance in the Division I South Sectionals, Quincy has now advanced to post-season play five out of the last six seasons.

"I am very proud of the team for staying together and advancing to another post-season," added Draicchio. "I am especially proud of my eleven seniors. They have all done so much for the program over the years and all of them are great kids. Getting to the post-season five out of the last six years and twice in a row is a great accomplishment for these players and for the program. It was a good year."

The eleven seniors who will be graduating and moving on to bigger and better things include Mike LeBel, Rick Salvucci, Ted Walsh, Joe Reggianinni, Robert Ranalli, Tony Salaris, Kyle Craig, Dave Griffin,

BASEBALL

Edwin Nunez, Corey Morgan and Eric Englehart.

"These eleven seniors helped to set a no-nonsense approach all year long," said Draicchio. "They are a great group of seniors and they all worked hard every day to help set an example for the underclassmen. All of them will be missed, but we will have a core group of eleven underclassmen back next season and that gives us hope that we can improve and get better moving forward."

Draicchio's team returns 2008 regulars, juniors Sean Gray, John Parry and Andrew Papille and sophomores Lance Peterson, Kevin Keith, Leroy Wallace and Colin McCarthy. These players and the experienced they have gained playing this year should bode well for Quincy moving forward.

"Our underclassmen have all gained valuable experience and that should translate to good things next season," Draicchio added. "Most of these players will be playing competitive organized baseball over the summer and we will do everything to get them prepared to play when baseball season comes around again."

Seniors Greg Gaffney, Ed Sholes and James Wilbur and freshman Luke McDonough were all called up to the varsity roster for the post-season.

Next spring, Quincy will be moving to a new league. The team will be leaving the Atlantic Coast League behind and will play instead in the competitive Patriot League.

"Next year we will be starting play in the Patriot League," Draicchio said. "It is a very good and competitive league. It is going to pose different challenges, but we will be ready when the season begins."

Quincy seniors Mike LeBel and Ricky Salvucci were recognized by the rest of the ACL for their play this season. Both LeBel and Salvucci were named to the league all-star team.

Fellow seniors Ted Walsh and Eric Englehart were named to the ACL Honorable Mention all-star team and senior Dave Griffin was named ACL Sportsmanship award winner.

Joy's Sports To Hold Basketball/Soccer Programs

Joy's Sports will hold basketball and soccer programs for boys and girls ages 7 to 14 beginning July 7 through August 8.

The basketball program will be held at the Broad Meadows Middle School and the soccer programs at Joy Hanlon Field in Quincy Point. Both programs will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Cost is $105 per week-discounts are available. For more information call Rich Hanlon, Director, at 617-827-8697.

Quincy Rec Swimming, Boating & Sailing Testing

The Quincy Recreation Department and Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch announce that the QRD will conduct an advance-testing program in preparation for registration for its summer instructional swimming program at the Lincoln Hancock Community Pool.

Children are registered for lessons according to their swimming ability.

This testing program is for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter.

The schedule for testing is Friday, June 13 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. The boating and sailing prerequisite swim test will also be offered during the same time period.

Pool lessons are open to Quincy residents over age six who have a current pool participation card issued by the Quincy Recreation Department.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the QRD at 617-376-1394. The normal recreation-swimming schedule will be canceled during the hours of testing.

Summer Swimming Instruction Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department and Director Barry J. Welch announce that the QRD will conduct swimming instruction at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool, weekdays during July and August.

Water Safety Instructors and Lifeguards, trained in accordance with the standards set by the American Red Cross teach lessons.

There will be two summer sessions. Session #1 begins Monday, June 30 and ends Tuesday, July 22. Session #2 begins Thursday, July 24 and ends Friday, August 15.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross. Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development; Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The QRD will also offer Lifeguard Training that will run for both July and August. Please contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course.

Instruction is for children who are age six and over and are Quincy residents. Lifeguard Training candidates must be 15 years of age and must pass a prerequisite swim test held on Monday, June 30 at 4 p.m.

Registration for all classes will be held at the Water Street entrance of the Lincoln Hancock Pool according to the following schedule:

Session 1: Class dates are June 30-July 22 and registration will be Thursday, June 19 at 9 a.m.

Session #2: Class dates are July 24-August 15 and registration will be Wednesday, June 18 at 9 a.m.

The QRD will not accept pre-registration or phone registrations. Assured placement in the class, day and time of choice should be done at the above dates and times. Post-registration is accepted on a space available basis.

For additional information, call the QRD at 617-376-1394.

Quincy Resident To Host Fundraiser for Pan-Mass Challenge

Robin Franceschini, a Quincy resident and a teacher at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, is participating in this summer's Pan-Mass Challenge.

In order to help meet the $4,000 (minimum) fundraising goal, Franceschini and Anne Annacone of East Bridgewater will be hosting a wine-tasting event at Ecco Tratoria on Monday, June 9 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The cost of the event is $100 for two people, which includes food, wine and an entry into the raffle for Red Sox tickets, golf outings, Dunkin Donuts gear and more. The grand prize being raffled off is Two Round Trip Club Class tickets to London via British Airways.

If you are interested in tickets, call 617-773-9176 for more information.

Hershey National Track, Field Youth Programs

The Quincy Recreation Department and Director Barry J. Welch announce that the QRD will once again sponsor the Hershey National Track and Field Youth Program.

This is the 13th year the QRD has sponsored this event and the local community meet is the first step in a competition, which could result in a local athlete advancing to the National Championship at Hershey Park, Pennsylvania. New England champions are awarded an all-expense paid trip to the finals, courtesy of Hershey Chocolate, the national sponsor.

This program is open to all kids ages 9-14. Participants are not required to have previous track experience or be a member of a community track program. This meet is also open to athletes from surrounding communities. All participants must provide the sponsoring agency with proof of age before they will be allowed to compete. There are no entry fees and spikes and starting blocks are provided.

Registration for the Quincy Meet will be held at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 17 for boys and Wednesday, June 18 for girls at Cavanaugh Stadium (Birch St. off Hollis Ave. near Atlantic Middle School, North Quincy). The meets will begin at 6 p.m. and registration will be held the day of the meet.

The age of the athlete shall be his/her age as of December 31, 2008. Both boys and girls will compete in three age categories: 9-10, 11-12 and 13-14. Those youngsters currently 8-years old, but who will turn 9-years old by Dec. 31, 2008 may compete in the 9-10 age group. Youngsters currently 14-years old who turn 15-years old before December 31, 2008 are not eligible.

The events are as follows:

Age 9-10 Boys and Girls: 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 400-yard dash, 4 x 100-yard relay, standing long jump and softball throw.

Age 11-12 Boys and Girls: 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 400-yard dash, 800-yard dash, 4 x 100-yard relay, standing long jump and softball throw.

Age 13-14 Boys and Girls: 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 800-yard run, 1600-yard run, 4 x 100-yard relay, standing long jump and softball throw.

Each athlete may compete in up to three events, if three events are chosen, one event is required to be a field event.

"Learning, participation, enjoyment and physical exercise are the main elements of the program," noted Welch. "I must stress the importance of the basic philosophy of this program-to stimulate the participation of all eligible children. It is no way to be constructed as an all-star program for chosen individuals."

"Through proper guidance and assistance from the Quincy Recreation Department, it is our firm belief and hope that we may positively shape the direction of the future of these children."

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An apparent act of injustice might turn out to be either an error in judgment or just plain stupidity. So calm down and cool off, and let the explanations roll out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's upsetting when someone you trusted might have failed you. But with new opportunities ahead, you'll soon be too busy to feel even a wee bit sorry for yourself.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A sense of uncertainty could be a good reason to change your position on an important matter. Someone close might try to talk you out of it, but it's your decision to make.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Being too zealous in pursuing your goal could create some resistance. Try to be more mindful of what you ask people to do, and they'll be more likely to do it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Things change as you go from being ignored to being lionized once again. This is a good time to reintroduce those previously rejected ideas to a more receptive audience.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone new in your life creates both anticipation as well as anxiety. Avoid the potential for misunderstandings by watching what you say and how you say it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch your budget so that you don't overspend now and have less to invest when the time is right later on. Arrange to share your weekend with someone special.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The temptation to involve yourself in a friend's or family member's personal problems is laudable. But get the facts before you make a firm commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to keep the faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You've reached an important point in your ongoing pursuit of your goals. You might now want to consider letting someone you trust join you on your journey.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been going through a spate of uncertainty involving people you care for. But it might be time to take a stand on a position you feel sure you can defend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Treading water keeps you busy, but it won't get you where you need to go. Time to stop making excuses and to start moving ahead toward your goals.

BORN THIS WEEK: You see life as both creative and pragmatic. You would not only be a fine artist, but also a successful one.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The flag is the symbol of our national unity. It is the spirit of our undying devotion to our country. It stands for the best that is in us; for loyalty, character, and faith in democracy.

Isn't the flag - Patrick Henry, Jefferson, Franklin, Washington, Gettysburg and Valley Forge; Paul Revere, Jackson and other great men and women who have given us our heritage? When you look at the flag, can't you see the Alamo, Pearl Harbor, the Merrimack, Wake Island, and Korea? And, lest we forget, isn't the flag Flanders Field, Bataan, Iwo Jima, Normandy, Vietnam, Babe Ruth and Davy Crockett?

The great events and people of our past and present are wrapped up in the folds of our flag... Yes, the flag is a symbol of this blessed nation; a giant in industry, education and commerce. It is the symbol of millions of fertile square miles, wheatlands, coal mines and steel plants... It is our great Republic, a shining beacon of light, noble and glorious; the haven for the oppressed and persecuted and truly one of God's great gifts to mankind...

This is what our flag means. Can we wave it too much? We don't think so... Don't you agree?

A memorial service for Ruth Louise (Libbey) Tatreau, 83, of Rockland, formerly of Quincy, was held May 31 in the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Mrs. Tatreau died May 26 at South Shore Hospital.

Born in Milton, she was the daughter of the late Aldrich and Marion (Kellaway) Libbey.

She was educated in the Weymouth schools and worked at the McGillvery's Drug Store in Quincy, Raytheon and the Quality Control Division of Sigma Instruments of Braintree.

She enjoyed reading, bingo, crocheting, her Persian/Himalayan and Maine Coon cats and attending many of the Lions functions with her late husband, Everett.

She was the mother of Dawn L. Spano of Braintree, Richard E. Tatreau of Quincy and Douglas M. Tatreau and his wife the Rev. Ellen Tatreau of Albany, N.Y.

She was the sister of Beverly Pheanis of Lakeville and the late Aldrich Libbey Jr.

She is also survived by eight grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Summer On The Hill Harmony Youth Chorus

The First Baptist Church of Wollaston will host two opportunities for youth people in the Quincy area.

The Harmony Youth Chorus will be held the week of July 28 - Aug. 1 from 9 a.m. until noon.

Boys and girls of all faiths and cultures who have completed grades 1-7 may register. The cost will be $25 per child or $50 per family.

Charles Dillingham from the Braintree Schools music department will direct the chorus again this summer.

A "Tiny Treasures"

workshop, directed by Jan Burton, will be held Aug. 4-8 from 9 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. Boys and girls from ages 9-13 may register.

Cost per child is $20. This group is limited so register early.

Each participant will will and decorate an ice cream and candy shop, making a counter and stools, and creating ice cream sundaes, cones, candy and good goodies in miniature.

To register or for more information, call the church office at 617-472-0824.

DOVE Seeking Auction Items

DOVE, Inc., the domestic violence agency and shelter based in Norfolk County, is seeking auction items for this year's special fundraiser, "Harvesting Hope."

This year's fund-raiser will mark Dove's 30th anniversary of serving victims and survivors of domestic violence throughout Norfolk County.

Proceeds help support

DOVE's domestic violence services and programs.

Such programs are of urgent need now, according to DOVE Executive Director Stephanie Flaherty who said that there was a 287 percent increase in deaths related to domestic violence in 2007 compared to 2005.

For more information, call Kathy at 617-770-4065, ext. 21.

RELIGION

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have Sunday Worship Service and Church School at 10 a.m.

The Rev. William C. Harding will conduct the service and preach the sermon "The Terror of the Tongue."

Childcare is available for infants and toddlers.

Following the worship service, there will be fellowship time in the Allen Parlor. Light refreshments will be served.

All are welcome. The church is handicapped accessible.

Quincy Community United Methodist

COA, Lions Seek Glasses

The Council on Aging is joining the Quincy Lions Club to collect glasses for the needy who need them but can't afford them.

If you have glasses you no longer need and would like to donate them to a worthy cause, call the COA at 617-376-1506 for further information.

Children's Sunday At Quincy Point Congregational Church

Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., will celebrate "Children's Sunday" June 8 at the 10 a.m. worship service.

The service will be led by the children from the Sunday school. Theme of the service is "We Are Alleluia People - We Are The Church."

Jack Sweeney will serve as deacon of the day.

Following the service, there will be coffee, light refreshments and conversation in the fellowship hall.

A car wash fundraiser to benefit the Heifer Project will be held in the church parking lot Saturday, June 7, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Proceeds will go to the foundation.

Special Summer Music Program for children is planned during July. Dates and information on registration will be announced in the near future.

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., will observe Children's Sunday June 8 at 9:30 a.m.

All are invited to attend this special service marking the conclusion of the Sunday school year.

Students from the church's Sunday school program will conduct the entire morning worship service, leading the congregation in prayer, delivering scripture and gospel readings and presenting the sermon "Who ME, Lord?"

The church's Junior Choir will also perform the anthem, "Here I Am, Lord."

As part of the Children's Sunday program, Sunday school students will receive certificates and awards for their participation and achievements during the school year. Each child will receive flowers donated by Sam Rounseville in memory of his mother, Elda Rounseville, who devoted many years of service to the church's Sunday school.

A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service.

Mike Whalen Joins HopeFound

J. Michael Whalen, former assistant editor of The Quincy Sun, has been named marketing and communications manager at hopeFound, a Boston-based organization that fights homelessness.

Whalen worked at the Sun from 1991 to 1998, starting as a reporter before being promoted to assistant editor. He also has worked for several other newspapers, as well as the former WJDA Radio in Quincy. He and his wife Deirdre live in Weymouth.

Formerly known as

MIKE WHALEN

Friends of the Shattuck Shelter, hopeFound is dedicated to preventing and ending homelessness by providing programs and services that help individuals achieve self-sufficiency, as well as secure and maintain permanent housing.

HopeFound serves more than 3,500 people each year, in Boston and across Massachusetts. The organization is recognized both locally and nationally for program innovation and successful outcomes for chronically homeless individuals. For more information, visit www.hopeFoundboston.org.

Registration For Squantum Yacht Club Sailing Program

Registration for the Squantum Yacht Club Sailing Program will be held on Saturday, June 7 from 10:30 a.m. until 12 noon at the Squantum Yacht Club.

Children who wish to participate in the sailing program this summer and their parents should come to the SYC to register. This program teaches children how to sail safely and skillfully and race competitively and always with a respect for the sea.

All participants must be at least eight years old by July 1, 2008.

For more information on registration, call 617-773-0175.

Squantum 5 Road Race June 19

The Eighth Annual Squantum 5 Road Race to benefit the Dana Farber Marathon Challenge (DFMC) will be held on Thursday, June 19 at 6:45 p.m.

The race begins and ends at Waterworks (Marina Bay), along Dorchester Bay, Quincy Bay, and back to Marina Bay. The 5-mile racecourse is flat, except the third mile and is USATF certified.

There is a $20 pre-registration fee, with checks payable to "Squantum 5 Road Race," P.O. Box 7316, Quincy, MA 02169. There is a $25 post-registration fee for any runner who wishes to sign up and run on the day of the race.

Visit HYPERLINK http://www.squantum5.com for additional race information.

QCAP Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will hold a first-time homebuyer workshop in Quincy on three evenings: Tuesday, June 10, June 19 and June 24.

The workshop will be held at 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor conference room, Quincy, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Attendance at all three sessions is required in order to receive a certificate of attendance. Sessions are open to everyone regardless of income, credit ratings, or downpayment availability. The free workshop is sponsored by Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.

Workshop speakers are professionals from different real estate fields. Participants will receive a workbook, which contains references that pertain to homebuying. Upon completion of the course, participants will receive a certificate, which is a prerequisite for down-payment closing cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required. For more information, contact Ann Marie Casey at 617-657-5319.

Shiela McIntyre, Linda Stice Honored As 'Women Of Distinction'

Two Quincy women with long histories of public service have been cited by the Woodward School for Girls as "authentic women and model community servants who have enriched our community in many ways."

More than 300 people attended Woodward's annual spring fund raiser at Granite Links Golf Course to witness the Women of Distinction Awards conferred on Sheila McIntyre and Linda Stice.

McIntyre, widow of former Mayor James McIntyre, has a long history of supporting charitable organizations, including homeless veterans who renamed their home base the Sheila McIntyre Veterans House.

She has been a member of the board of trustees of the St. Boniface Haiti Foundation for 12 years and has visited the unhappy Caribbean island to witness the poverty herself.

Stice, a former longtime member of the Quincy School Committee, has directed her efforts toward providing strong support for children by encouraging adults to understand their place as role models for the young.

She formerly served as the executive director of the Quincy-based Commission on the Family from 1995 to 2002 and is currently executive director of the Affordable Housing Trust Fund in Quincy.

McIntyre was introduced by former Mayor Arthur Tobin and Stice by Bob Curry of Curry Hardware. Each received citations from State Rep. Stephen Tobin and gifts from the Woodward

THREE DOZEN RESIDENTS described how the double-sided billboard at 311-315 Willard Street adversely impacts their quality of life during a public hearing Monday. Some 150 persons attended the meeting.

36 Speak Against Billboard

150 Protestors Pack City Hall To Oppose West Quincy Billboard

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Three dozen speakers ranging from a teenager to a 93-year-old lifelong West Quincy resident urged city officials Monday to have removed the lighted 82-foot double billboard recently erected at 313-315 Willard Street.

Addressing city councilors at a public hearing on the billboard, residents called it a quality of life issue. They spoke of being betrayed by their elected officials, of a Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) out of control, and of potential legal action against the city.

Speakers described the billboard as "horrific, a ghastly monstrosity, an albattross, a spaceship at night," and an "abomination." They carried signs with photos of the billboard captioned, "Our Mourning View."

Neighbors said the double billboard, with its tantalizing model hawking vodka advertisement, lights up their children's bedroom windows and is the skyview at recess for elementary school children at the nearby St. Mary School.

Also affected, they said, are parishioners at the church, and tourists at the Granite Railway hiking path.

After each billboard opponent spoke, the nearly 150 persons crowding the council chambers, filling the aisles and the exit hallway, clapped and applauded.

"That litter on a stick is nothing but a blight on my home," said Thomas Maloney, a Copeland Street property owner, adding his family "has called Quincy home for over 100 years."

"I've left my infant daughter, eight weeks old, for the first time to come here," said resident

BILLBOARD PROTEST SIGNS describe the 82-foot high billboard on Willard Street as "a spaceship at night." Other signs describe, "Our Mourning View" and ask, "Would you Like to Wake Up To This?" Previous reports had incorrectly described the structure as 60 feet tall.

Bellotti Committee Makes Recommendation

Keenan To Be New Police Chief

An ad hoc committee selected to pick a new chief for Quincy's embattled Police Department has named Capt. Paul Keenan, 49, the mayor's brother-in-law, to the $154,000 a year post.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch is expected to appoint him on June 30, when the current chief, Robert Crowley, 61, retires.

"We have many challenges as a city in which the Quincy Police Department will play a vital role and I look forward to working together with the men and women of the department and Chief Keenan on tackling those challenges head-on," said Koch.

Keenan has been a Quincy police officer since 1983, moving up to sergeant in 1991, lieutenant in 1995 and captain in 2005. His experience extends through patrolman, detective, almost all the departments in the force.

He and his wife, Karen, live in Hanover and have four grown children, Jonathan 23, Andrew 22, and the twins, Zachary and Jillian, 19.

Keenan was chosen over Capt. Michael Miller, his only competitor, by a five-member committee, headed by Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

One of the keys to Keenan's selection, said Bellotti, was that he "was more likely to 'breach the barrier' currently existing between the Patrolmen's Union and management.

"Captain Keenan has impressively articulated an inclusive strategy for restoring harmony and trust within the department.

"Captain Miller likewise has a plan for dealing with the union, but it is the opinion of the committee that Captain Keenan's strategy is more likely to bring synergy to this work force."

Chief Crowley had been at odds with the Patrolmen's Union ever since he was appointed by former Mayor William Phelan in 2004.

Keenan said his plan for

Few, If Any, Victims Of Heat Wave In Quincy

They gave a heat wave the other day and, thankfully, no one showed up.

"We haven't seen anyone today," said Janice Sullivan, spokeswoman for Quincy Medical Center, which is usually the repository of last resort for victims of a heat wave.

"I guess they're taking the experts' advice."

That advice when the temperature hits the 90-degree plus mark, as it did Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, is to drink lots of water, lay off the exercise and find a cool place to sit and wait it out.

By Tuesday night it was expected to be all over with temperatures in the mid-80s on Wednesday and a mild 70 degrees spreading its wings over Greater Boston on the weekend.

Whatever it was, the people of Quincy, particularly those at risk, the elderly, the very young and the disabled, appeared to have accepted the heat wave in stride.

"It's not like it used to be," said Tom Gorman, the director of emergency management. "Most buildings have air conditioning now. Most people know what to do.

"Elderly people who live alone are the main thing. Neighbors have learned to check on the elderly. If they need assistance they call the Council on Aging."

Drew Scheele, the commissioner of Public Health, thinks highly of the River Bay Club at 99 Brackett St. as a haven that welcomes refugees from the heat.

"Any of the public libraries is a good place," he says, "Or South Shore Plaza in Braintree. You can always go to a local supermarket and just stroll along, taking your time shopping.

"And then there's the beach. There's always a cool ocean breeze there."

Another place to gain relief from the heat is the "Senior Cooling Center" at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., where a full summer schedule of activities is underway.

But that's for another day, when they give a heat wave and somebody shows up.

Dist. Atty. Keating Asks Parents To 'Take Ten'

All of Quincy's eighth grade parents should be getting something in the mail from Dist. Atty. William Keating this week - an invitation to take ten minutes that could save their child's life.

"The DVDs that will be arriving across Quincy this week were crafted to give parents a way to open, or reopen, a discussion with their kids about getting into a car with a driver who has been drinking," Keating said. "It is short and it does not preach, but lets young people hear from another South Shore young person making the wrong decision can mean in real terms."

That young man, named Cory, was convicted in Norfolk Superior Court of killing his two best friends in a drunk driving crash that ended a night of fun and celebration. In the film, he is still incarcerated at the Norfolk House of Correction serving his sentence for motor vehicle homicide. High school drama students serve as actors for the party and driving scenes.

"Young people will often deny it, but major studies show that they want to hear from their parents on what is right and wrong, safe and not safe," Dist. Atty. Keating said. "This video provides a basis for talking this subject through and making a plan for what the child should do if asked to take an unsafe ride."

With eighth graders entering high school next year, Dist. Atty. Keating believes it is not too young for parents to be opening this topic with them: "They may be invited into the cars of older high-schoolers and they will have a choice to make-soon."

The District Attorney has promoted direct access to the film both on www.norfolkda.com and on YouTube.

The decision to mail eighth grade parents grew out of Keating's discussions with and in participation in Mayor Thomas Koch's newly formed Drug Task Force-most notably with fellow task force member and School Committee member Kevin Mulvey. Keating's effort is sponsored and endorsed by some of Quincy's most prominent names: Mayor Koch, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, School Committee members: David McCarthy, Vice Chairman; Jo-Ann Bragg, Elaine Dwyer, Anne Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey, Nick Puleo, Middle School Principals: Christine Barrett, Jennifer Fay Beers, Laura Bogan, James McGuire and Lawrence Taglier.

Work To Start Monday

Major Water Main Project On Hancock St.

A $1.5 million MWRA water main replacement on Hancock Street from St. Ann's Road to the intersection of Adams Street is scheduled to begin on Monday.

The first phase of the state-funded project, which includes replacing a 100-year old water main and repaving of Hancock Street, will run from St. Ann's Road to Furnace Brook Parkway.

There will be a "rolling no parking zone" around the construction area as the project moves forward to keep traffic moving on Hancock Street throughout the duration of the project. Department of Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville.

The road will not be closed at any point, and there will be no detours, but Prendeville advised that residents and commuters should plan to take a little extra time in the morning and afternoon.

"This is an important, necessary project that will have great long-term benefits, but there will be some disruptions while construction is ongoing," Prendeville said.

"But the DPW, the Quincy Police Department and our traffic department will be on the site daily doing everything possible to make sure the contractor minimizes those disruptions for the neighborhood and commuters."

The daily construction schedule will be from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the contractor expects the project to last much of the summer.

Residents, who have questions or concerns, are asked to call DPW Resident Engineer Bob Backman at 857-488-8413.

Summer Beach Water Sampling Underway

The Quincy Health Department began its summer beach water sampling Wednesday.

Water samples will be collected every Wednesday thereafter, through Sept. 10 at 13 beach locations. The results will be analyzed for enterococcus counts by a private laboratory, and will be made available to the media throughout the summer months.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), (formerly the MDC) will collect and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. The sample results will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Thursday/Friday of each week.

Quincy will utilize the state standard of 104 or greater enterococci colonies as an indication of potential health risk. Beaches will single sample counts of 104 or greater will be resampled and posted with warning signs. Such beaches are considered unsuitable for swimming and the warning signs will remain in place until individual water samples show enterococcus counts below 104. Once five (or more) samples have been collected, the geometric mean standard of 35 will be used in addition to the instantaneous sampling result. Beaches with a geometric mean of 35 or greater will be posted.

If a period of rainfall occurs after the water samples are taken each Wednesday, it is important that people understand that such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality that will be reported on Fridays. Contaminated storm water flows can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains after 1/4 of an inch of rainfall or greater occurs in a given day. We therefore recommend that people refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a significant rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to dilute and cleanse the water.

The city has been involved in a Bathing Water Quality Improvement Program over the past several years. This program involved the detection and repair of problems while those sewer and storm drainpipes that adversely affected Quincy Bay. This program administered by the City's Department of Public Works, continues today, with ongoing, routine maintenance practices such as street sweeping, drain cleaning and tide gate inspections.

For more information, contact 617-376-1278. A 24-hour message will be available to obtain the weekly beach sampling results. The results will also be posted on the City of Quincy's Web Page Link (Beach Results) at <http://ci.quincy.ma.us/>

A Christmas Present

Sheets' Water Buffalo To Feed India Orphans

By TOM HENSHAW

The water buffalo that former Mayor Jim Sheets gave his wife, Joann, for Christmas will soon be providing milk and cheese for orphans at the India Hope Center in the village of Motipur, just outside New Delhi.

Global Action, a non-profit Christian ministry based in Colorado Springs, is promoting India Hope Center which is building a community for children who have been living on the streets in the sub-continent.

Joann Sheets, who is into such things, heard about Global Action shortly before Christmas so when the time came to exchange family gifts, she told her husband: "You know what I would really like for Christmas?" "What's that?" he asked. "A water buffalo," she said.

Unfazed by the bizarre request, a check was written and a 600-pound water buffalo was assigned to the provide milk and cheese to the orphans of the Indian village.

The community will have space where foster parents can raise seven or eight orphans in homes with four bedrooms, a kitchen and living room. Construction started on the foundations April 15.

Eventually, said Jim Sheets, the village will consist of 20 such homes and Joann Sheets' water buffalo along with others will be providing milk and cheese for 140 orphans.

For good measure, Jim and Joann Sheets also contributed 10 chickens — one for each of their grandchildren — to the village larder so the youngsters can start the day with a hearty breakfast of milk, eggs and cheese.

Abhishek Subhan, operational manager of the India Hope Center, who was in Quincy the other day and stopped to lunch with the Joann and Jim, described the plight of India's children of the streets.

"When we get them most of them are suffering from malnutrition, their stomachs are swollen and their bodies infested with worms and parasites," he said.

"When they become healthy, we make sure they go to school, have nice clothing and learn to play like normal children. They like to sing and laugh. They can't believe their good fortune."

Eventually, it is planned to include dairy and poultry farms, a green house, shops, a medical clinic, sewing and welding machines and more water buffalos and chickens

Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble to make the village self-sufficient.

Warning Issued On Anti-Billboard Signs

The city's Code Enforcement officer Ken Burke last week issued some one dozen warning notices to West Quincy residents regarding signs protesting the billboard on 313-315 Willard Street.

Burke said Tuesday that the violation notices were not issued for lawn signs. The warnings were issued only to residences where signs have cropped up on "...telephone poles and trees, city property."

"We understand their frustration," said Burke, noting that none of the warnings involved fines. Burke said no citations were issued for lawn signs.

City officials have no choice but to respond to complaints on illegal signage, said Burke, adding they can not pick and choose their cases. Often-times, Burke said that public safety is at risk.

The caller said he'd stopped at a "Stop" sign and the driver in front of him wouldn't move because he was reading a protest sign tacked under the stop sign.

Jay Duca described the process at Monday's Ordinance Committee meeting after residents and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi reported the surge in violation notices.

"No one's being singled out," Duca said, stating that his office must enforce the codes for all.

Ambassador McCullough

If Quincy ever decides to have an Ambassador of Goodwill, I have a nominee:

David McCullough.

The noted author-historian has been promoting Quincy's rich history for the past decade.

And is largely responsible for Quincy's tourism surge because of his Pulitzer Prize winning biography John Adams.

And the recent HBO adaptation of it as a highly acclaimed seven-part TV series.

McCullough, you might say, came, saw and fell in love with Quincy.

That was when he was first here researching for a book he was writing in 2000 about John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

But which turned out, instead, to be the John Adams biography with Jefferson in a supporting role.

While doing his research he became fascinated with letters written to one another by John and Abigail Adams and other Adams documents.

At a reception and lecture at the Thomas Crane Public Library in 2000, you got the impression that his research had made him a bigger fan of Adams, who has walked through history in Jefferson's shadow.

"A man of extraordinary integrity and a life long passionate patriot," he said of Adams.

And, although Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, it was Adams, McCullough who said "drove it though Congress."

And, it was Adams who nominated George Washington as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army.

"And most importantly," McCullough added, "John Adams was the husband of Abigail Adams." (That observation touched off a wave of appreciation from the women in the audience.)

McCullough was at the library that June night to help raise funds for the then planned new addition.

It was his way of giving back and saying thanks for the welcome and assistance he received researching the book.

He can command a hefty fee for a speaking appearance but this one was on him. A freebee.

He invited a party of 10-seven family members and three friends to the lecture held in a tent on the library lawn. And although he was giving the lecture free he insisted paying for his guests.

At the $500 per person reception in the library before the lecture, those attending had a choice of taking home as a gift a copy of one of two of his books: Truman, a Pulitzer Prize winner and Mornings On Horseback, the story of Theodore Roosevelt.

And each got to individually meet McCullough who graciously took the time to chat with them and autograph the book they had chosen, personalizing each one.

None of that quick scribble and "who's next" assembly line.

I remember Paul Harold who played a major role in the transfer of the Adams Birthplaces from the city to the National Park System selecting the Truman book which McCullough autographed:

"For Paul Harold who is doing such good work for Quincy and history."

McCullough and I discovered we had something rare in common.

I mentioned that while everyone else in the world was into computers I was still using my old Royal typewriter and taking a lot of ribbing from friends and others coming into the office.

McCullough laughed and said, "Me too. I'm still using my Royal."

I already had a copy of Truman (a gift from my son, Bob) so I took Mornings On Horseback. And he autographed it:

"For Henry Bosworth with best wishes, distinguished by the fact he still uses the greatest of typewriters, the Royal. And so do I."

The only difference is that he gets Pulitzer Prizes out of his Royal.

But the autograph gave my Royal new respect. The jokes stopped.

I watched with interest the recent HBO segment on McCullough.

He got a shot of the Adams Mansion in along with a little tour. And made sure everyone knew it was located in Quincy. (The HBO series never mentioned Quincy) McCullough also showed his office in what looked like a barn in his back yard on Martha's Vineyard.

Inside had a neat modern look and everything in its place. Including his Royal.

"I do all my writings on it," he said. "No computers here."

He continually spreads the word about Quincy's history and keeps finding reasons for coming back to visit.

Maybe Tom Koch might consider that ambassadorship.

Kevin Glennon's Viral Campaign For Obama Makes Smithsonian Institution

Quincy advertising consultant Kevin Glennon was part of a team honored recently at the Smithsonian Institution by having part of their viral advertising campaign for Barack Obama accepted into the Institutions' collection at the National Museum of American History.

Glennon gathered with New Jersey ad man and viral pioneer Jack Goldenberg on a viral campaign to elect Barack Obama President. The campaign centered around people mentioning one positive thing about Obama each time they were asked for the time. To bolster the effort, Goldenberg created five Obama for President wristwatches that are being sold online at obamawatches.com. Three of the five watches were accepted into the Smithsonian collection.

"I've worked on traditional viral campaigns like McDonald's first Happy Meal and Cabbage Patch Kids dolls and I've seen these products years later at garage sales," said Goldenberg. "but seeing the Obama for President watches displayed one day at the Smithsonian will be quite an honor."

Glennon developed the strategies to the modern interactive methods, such as seeding popular blog sites and other online communications, to create an online viral campaign for Obama. He also developed the online store and electronic advertising materials.

Recently, Glennon has worked on local efforts such as the Koch mayor campaign as a communications consultant, and has also developed web sites for the Quincy Police Mutual Aid Association, and the upcoming Officer Jamie Cochrane Memorial Road race.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 real photo postcard view of the Wollaston Boulevard from the end of Bromfield Street. The Metropolitan Commission had just build the Police Station and Bathhouse on the right. They also had just connected Bromfield Street to the Boulevard. At the time cars were not allowed to park over the curb along the beach and had to be left on the roadway. That wasn't a problem at first since in 1910 there were fewer than 300 automobiles registered in Quincy. The bathhouse was demolished several years ago and the site is now known as The Richard Reilly Overlook. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

42-Hour Work Week For Quincy Firefighters

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor James R. McIntyre signed a new 42-hour work week for Quincy firefighters.

The new contract reduces the workweek from 48 hours to 42 hours. Present at the signing were Fire Chief Edward F. Barry, Councillor at-Large John J. Quinn and John Menz, Jr., president of Quincy Firefighters Local 792.

Mayor McIntyre also signed contracts for registered nurses at the hospital, giving them a 6 % salary hike.

Public Works, L.P.N.s and nurses' aides will receive a 6% raise effective July 1.

2,200 TO MARCH FOR OLD GLORY

Some 2,200 youngsters and adults will join forces in a demonstration in Quincy Saturday. They are getting together simply to boost their country and flag.

The occasion will be a 2 p.m. Flag Day parade and ceremonies sponsored by the Koch Club, a non-profit recreational-civic organization.

There will be Stars and Stripes by the thousands.

An estimated 1,200 boys and girls, five to 14, will march through the Quincy Center area, each proudly carrying Old Glory.

The flag bearers, all members of the Koch Club, will be joined in the march by another 1,000 youngsters and adults including veterans' units, bands and drum and bugle corps. "All kids love a parade," noted Richard J. Koch, Sr., club founder and executive director.

READERS FORUM

Say There Is No Structural Budget Deficit

There have been many misstatements made by the Mayor and the City Council concerning the alleged structural budget deficit and the fiscal shell game in the City of Quincy.

I am the former Vice President and Researcher Director for the Quincy Taxpayers Association. I am also an appointed public official with 23 years of municipal financial experience. In my opinion, and I believe the facts support it, there is no structural deficit in the City of Quincy. The previous administration was able to secure two bond upgrades for the city by national credit rating agencies.

These agencies look at current finances, written fiscal policies, and projected future finances to make their determination on credit worthiness. They perform this analysis on thousands of communities across the country and most communities do not get upgraded. You cannot have a structural deficit when you have 14 million in excess levy capacity as the City had in Fiscal Year 2008 as well as over 16 million dollars in free cash and stabilization funds. There is no structural deficit.

I have reviewed the current Fiscal Year 2009 budget and projected revenues, which I received from the Mayor's Office. The estimated receipts for the water and sewer accounts in Fiscal Year 2008 (last year) were $39,149,841 according to the Tax recap filed with the Department of Revenue. Even assuming Mr. Coffey's statements concerning the projected $3.8 million deficit in these accounts, the City would receive $35,349,841 in revenue for this year. Mayor Koch's budget submission is for approximately $33.1 million dollars. A revenue difference of $2.2 million dollars.

Assuming a water and sewer rate increase of 3%, this revenue difference would grow to over $3.3 million dollars. I am told that this deficit is actually closer to $2 million but we won't know until after June 30. Also, there has been no discussion concerning major accounts that may owe substantial amounts of money and collection efforts that have been initiated to rectify this problem. Also, I have been told that the city motor vehicle collections are a million dollars more than were projected and I don't believe that the Honeywell trust account is included in this budget.

This is at least $4.385 million dollars of additional revenue. And this doesn't include any free cash or stabilization funds that the city could use to further reduce the tax rate. The taxpayers need to ask the City Council and the Mayor why major budget cuts are even necessary. There is no structural budget deficit.

Lincoln Hancock Pride

I am proud to say my kids attend the Lincoln Hancock School.

I realize everybody is entitled to his or her own opinion, but you should know the facts before you make a decision. Lincoln Hancock has a bad rap due to the area in which it resides in, but it is by far the best!

I have four children, three who attend Lincoln Hancock and one at Amelio Della Chiesa and I couldn't be happier. Lincoln Hancock this year has a new principal, Mrs. Ruth Witmer and a new assistant principal, Mr. Daniel Gilbert and as you know, it starts from the top. If you don't have good leaders, you won't have good results.

This year has been phenomenal with a lot of changes taking place. They have a monthly program, which I feel has been a huge incentive for the kids. I have the privilege to work at Lincoln Hancock and I see the respect the kids have for each other as well as the leaders and educators. I can honestly say this domino effect is working.

So, to all the negative people out there who wish to go out of district because "he said, she said" you should look into the school and join the PTC and get involved before you shy away because you are missing out on the best school in West Quincy!

As the school's motto states: I am proud to say, "I am Lincoln Hancock Proud."

Open House June 21 At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, recently designated a National Historic Landmark, will offer public open house Saturday, June 21 between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 322 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Homestead is nearing the completion of an extensive restoration that included painting the exterior.

For more information, visit the Homestead's website: www.nscda.org/ma/quincy-homestead.htm.

Doll Maker To Speak At Fenno House June 20

Jane Bradbury, a world-recognized doll maker and artist, will show her work and relate her experiences Friday, June 20, at 2 p.m. at Assisted Living at Fenno House, 540 Hancock St., Wollaston.

She will display her hand-made dolls and make a presentation of her life working to create both porcelain and polymer clay dolls over a period of 30 years.

The event is free and open to the public.

Bradbury has worked for Disney World and the Home Shopping Network, winning many awards from doll magazines in the United States and a "People's Choice" award at Disney World.

One of her teddy bears is featured in the Teddy Bear Museum in Japan.

Flea Market Saturday At Merrymount Beach

The Merrymount Association, a nonprofit civic group, will have its annual flea market Saturday, June 14 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Merrymount Beach.

Table space is available for $25. Persons must provide their own tables.

For more information, call Theresa Lynch at 617-786-9045 or Linda Fitzgerald at 617-773-3531.

Caesar Murdered In Quincy?

The following story was written by students in the Advanced Level English Language Learner Department at Quincy High School.

The students recently performed a play ("Julius Caesar") at QHS. They are students of Andrea Szikszay, a native of Hungary, and a Fulbright Scholar visiting for one year.

"You too, Brutus? Then fall, Caesar!"

The last scene in Quincy High's ELL play "Julius Caesar" came to an end. Tides of applause flew to us and our hearts were filled with joy. We did it! Our show was a total success!

Behind the success, there lays our hard work. All the performers in this play are new immigrants, from other countries. We're new to the land and culture, so it is really a challenge for us to put a play on stage. Speaking English is still a pain to most of us let alone perform in a play.

However we did it.

It took us two months to prepare. Every one spared no effort to do their best. We corrected each other's wrong participations. We spent our spare time remembering those long dialogues. We were not professional performers, but our attitude was surely as professional as it could be. The major role Caesar was played by a girl, the following is her experience: "It is really hard for a girl to play a man's role. In order to be more like a man, I trained myself very hard. Every day I practiced before the mirror again and again. I worked really hard."

Finally, the big day arrived. Everyone was so excited as well as nervous. Just like what Trung, who played as Flavius, said, "I was nervous before I went out, when I was behind the curtains. Then I saw my friends. They were all looking forward to my performance." Everyone really did a good job — we could hear applause every now and then. Finally, our show came to an end. It was a total success! We hugged each other and our hearts were filled with excitement! We did it! We overcame the challenge! Just like Ali, who played Antony, said "It was such a great experience! I wish I could have a chance to do it again!" Our director Mrs. Szikszay, who was our ELL teacher here at QHS from Hungary, on a Fulbright Teacher Exchange Program. She was worried that we would fail, but we succeeded!

It was really hard and it took a lot of time to prepare and to put it on stage but we did it. Even though we were not professional actors, the passion that we put in this play, made us real actors. All this storm of things created a wonderful memory that is always going to be in our minds. It's going to give us strength for life and always a sweet taste when we look back in memories.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS at the Teaching About Child Labor National Conference. They are (from left) author/activist/physician Dr. David Parker of Minnesota, grade 8 Broad Meadows Middle School students Breanna Bassett and Rose Fitzmaurice.

GETTING TO KNOW the community which encourages global and local service, a member of the National Education Association's International Affairs Division reads a copy of The Quincy Sun. Rose and Breanna brought 50 copies of The Quincy Sun. All 50 were scooped up by conference attendees.

BROAD MEADOWS students, Rose Fitzmaurice (left) and Breanna Bassett, put the finishing touches on their Operation Day's Work - Quincy keynote presentation.

Broad Meadows 8th Graders Rose Fitzmaurice And Breanna Bassett Address Child Labor Local Students Keynote Speakers At National Conference

Operation Day's Work, an after school club at my school, has given me a voice. I was a small, quiet 6th grader once. Over the past three years I've gotten a lot of experience in public speaking thanks to O.D.W. I've spoken at schools and conferences, and I help lead meetings. I never would have guessed I would be doing this back when I was in 6th grade. — Rose Fitzmaurice, grade 8 student, Broad Meadows Middle School

There is no vacation from the campaign to end child labor. Over the April school vacation, Rose Fitzmaurice and Breanna Bassett, two grade 8 students from the Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy, were keynote speakers at a national child labor conference at Drew University in New Jersey designed to train teachers on ways they can prepare their students to live and work in the Global Age.

This Global Age includes a world in which over a hundred million children are forced to work, do not have a childhood or an education. Rose and Breanna shared with conference participants "Operation Day's Work (ODW), a global service project for at risk peers co-founded by Broad Meadows students back in 1998. Rose and Breanna now help to lead ODW at Broad Meadows.

ODW is offered also at Quincy High, North Quincy High and Archbishop Williams High schools.

Schools in four other states have ODW clubs. Nationally, twelve ODW schools vote to partner each school year with one in-country, non-governmental organization (NGO) to establish a school, orphanage or health center in one developing country. Students choose which annual project and which NGO to partner with. Any school can join ODW. It's free.

The conference, Teaching About Global Child Labor, was sponsored by Drew University's MAT program, the International Labour Organization (ILO) and the International Center for Child Labor Education (ICCLE). The conference brought together professors, policy makers, authors, activists, 11 and 12 year old former child laborers from Colombia, the two Broad Meadows Middle School leaders of the school's Operation Day's Work club, government officials, U.S. teachers, teacher unions and future teachers to build and strengthen worldwide efforts to protect and promote the rights of children everywhere.

Armand Pereira, director of the International Labor Organization-Washington, DC, told the conference audience that "Child labor is very complex. Ending child labor requires: consumer choice; business ethics; business responsibility; micro-loans for poor moms; cooperation among governments; enforcement of laws; and universal primary education." The ILO Director added, "The challenges are most severe in Asia and in sub Sahara Africa."

Mark Taylor, U.S. State Department Senior Coordinator, added, "Recent forced, abusive child labor cases have been investigated by the U.S. State department involving children in July 2007 in brick kilns in China, in apparel factories in India in October 2007, and in shrimp processing factories in Thailand in September 2006. Children are seen by too many as commodities." Mr. Taylor added, "The U.S. State Department works with other governments in a three prong approach to combat child labor: prosecutions; protection and prevention."

That's what adults are doing to end the causes of child labor. Rose and Breanna spoke next to share what U.S. youth can do.

Rose made a Power Point presentation to show and tell about ways Broad Meadows students educate themselves and their community about the child labor issue. Rose shared statistics from Junior Scholastic magazine which lists for each county in the world its GDP, literacy rates by gender, life expectancy by gender, and more. Researching this data helps students understand where in the world children are most at risk of entering child labor and leaving school. "As a result of our research, Asia and Africa are the places we mostly target our aid," said Rose. "This year's project is to partner with Village Health Works of Burundi to build a Community Health Center in Kigutu, Burundi. No hospital, clinic, electricity or roads exist there. If we can raise $30,000 then our project will bring all of that to the 20,000 people who live and die too soon in Kigutu, Burundi."

Their 2008 partner, Village Health Works, has already raised over $100,000, but need $30,000 more to finish and fully open the center. The students in Operation Day's Work voted to raise the remaining $30,000 needed to complete the project. The students raise funds by holding Cultural Fairs, cocoa sales and penny drives.

People think charity is writing a check and giving it to someone in need. It's not. Yes, sometimes it helps, but it's the time and hard work that makes it really rewarding. I take two hours out of a week to do Operation Day's Work. That's time spent working with others to do well in the global community. If everyone did the same, it would be amazing. — Rose Fitzmaurice, grade 8 student, Broad Meadows Middle School

Previous Operation Day's Work annual projects have established schools or scholarship programs in Ethiopia, Haiti, Nepal and Bangladesh thanks to partnerships between the students and

SOME OF THE 70 teachers from 8 states who attended the Teaching About Child Labor Conference surround Broad Meadows students Breanna Bassett and Rose Fitzmaurice after their keynote speech at Drew University in Madison, New Jersey.

Salesian Missions, the Heifer Project, Volunteers Association of Bangladesh, Partners in Health and more. Orphanage projects have been completed in El Salvador, Ethiopia and Rwanda.

The 2005 ODW project in Vietnam addressed one of State Department Senior Coordinator Mark Taylor's main points - protection. In 2005, ODW students voted to fund the Vietnam project because it provided education and protection for 40 ten year old girls in a rural village. Girls in rural areas of Vietnam are at high risk of becoming sold into or tricked into the worst forms of child labor-child slavery. The 2005 ODW partnership resulted in micro-credit loans being provided to the girls' moms to offset family income lost as the girls enter boarding school. Other women in the village volunteer to educate the girls in their rights. Boarding school teachers develop their literacy skills. As a result, the entire village sees the rewards of education and economic empowerment of moms. In return for the education, the 40 ten year olds promise to give their seats to others upon graduation and to return to teach the new girls their rights. The 2005 ODW project delivered on all of the project goals.

For me, it's the pictures at the beginning of each new school year that is proof that our annual project was a success. To see a Rwandan vocational graduation or Ethiopian orphan children moving into their new group homes, it's the best feeling in the world. — Rose Fitzmaurice, grade 8 student, Broad Meadows Middle School

Another keynote speaker, author and physician Dr. David Parker of Minnesota added, "Child laborers suffer from trauma and long term physical health risks."

Breanna and Rose gave up three days of their vacation to offer hope to those assembled at the child labor conference that actions can be taken by students as well as adults to end the horrors of child labor. Breanna told the conference, "We care, and we take action."

ODW teacher advisor at Broad Meadows, Mr. Ron Adams, addressed teachers from 8 states in attendance: "In Operation Day's Work, students like Rose and Breanna learn about the state of the world's children. They then take actions such as requesting proposals from reputable organizations in needy nations. They debate the strengths and weaknesses of proposals received back. Then, by secret ballot, they vote on which one proposal to turn into reality. Each year they change the world a little. They learn how to organize and how to create sustainable, meaningful changes in the lives of some of their global peers."

Breanna added, "It's U.S. youth helping global youth to help themselves."

The International Centre on Child Labour and Education (ICCLE) and Drew University's Master of Arts in Teaching Program (MAT) co-hosted the Global Child Labor Conference in collaboration with the International Labour Organization (ILO) in Madison, NJ, on April 25-26. The conference was co-sponsored by the National Education Association (NEA), American Federation of Teachers (AFT), the International Initiative to End Child Labor/Emily Sandall Foundation, Ramsay Merriam Fund, Galen Films, and the Theological School and Division of Continuing Education, Drew University. This conference was also supported by the Office of the Mayor of Bogota, Colombia, Secretary of Social Affairs. They facilitated participation in this conference of two officials along with two former child laborers.

19th Annual Golf Classic

Our special thanks to the 2008 Quincy Medical Center Golf Classic Committee and our team of hard-working volunteers!

At Annual Meeting

QCAP, Inc. Recognizes Extraordinary Community Service

The Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) Board of Directors inducted new board members and officers at its 43rd Annual Meeting and Awards Ceremony held recently.

Among the new appointees were Josephine Shea representing Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch and Julianne O'Toole of Quincy, representing the Head Start Policy Council.

Board officers elected include: President Paul M. Connolly, Vice President Kathryn M. Murphy, Esq., Treasurer Jean L. Kenney, Assistant Treasurer Christopher J. Meyers and Secretary Janet Crowley.

Other Board Members include: Michael Berry, Tackey Chan, Janet Crowley, Ruth E. Doyle, Judith E. Farmer, Kevin Glennon, Julie Greene, Linda A. Kelly, Linda MacDonald, Earle MacLeod, Timothy McMoon, James Murdoch, Grace Raymond, Paul Ricca, and Zaida H. Shaw.

QCAP Board President Paul Connolly welcomed more than 85 people to the meeting and recognized several elected officials in attendance including Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, Representative Bruce Ayers, City Councilors Douglas Gutto and Kevin Coughlin and Norfolk County Registrar of Probate Patrick McDermott. Mayor Koch offered his greetings, and expressed appreciation of QCAP's mission and work.

Judy Farmer, from the Board of Directors presented the annual Extra Mile Community Awards to community members who go above and beyond in their support of QCAP's mission and its clients. This year's award recipients included Representative Bruce J. Ayers for his unwavering dedication to helping those in need especially low-income and disabled residents; Head Start Health Advisory members Robert W. Walker, MD and Stephen A. Locke, DMD, who have played a quiet, yet vital role in improving the health and welfare of the young children in QCAP's Head Start program; and Uncle Sam Rounseville and Jean Kenney for their long-time support of and many unrecognized contributions to the mission of QCAP and the Quincy community.

In addition, Nancy Craven, Head Start Children Services Coordinator, was presented the Lois Craig Memorial Employee Award, for her exemplary service to the QCAP Head Start families and children, and the community. QCAP employees, Patricia Norve, Head Start Bus Driver, Barbara O'Brien, Head Start Lead Teacher, Sandy (Alexandra) Perkins, Community Care for Kids Intake Specialist and Denise Shea, Head Start Teacher, were honored for twenty years of dedicated service to QCAP's clients.

"I am delighted to celebrate the achievements of some of our unsung heroes. The people we honored have made extraordinary contributions to QCAP, our clients and the community without expecting any recognition. We thank them for their tireless efforts to improve the quality of life for all community members," said Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

Flag Day Parade, Celebration To Honor Veterans Saturday

The 57th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday, June 14. The event will honor Quincy's veterans who have returned home, as well as a special contingent of veterans who serve the city's police and fire departments.

The Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday, June 14. The event including the parade, flag raising ceremony and fireworks display is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and the Koch Club.

The parade steps off on Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. and will proceed down Hancock Street and disband at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park. Featured participants include the American Belles, marching bands, drum corps, color guards, military vehicles and, the perennial highlight, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

"It is necessary and appropriate to honor the dedication and sacrifices made by our servicemen and women from the city who have safely returned home after proudly serving our country," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee.

"This year, we pay special tribute to our returning veterans who also protect and serve our citizens daily through their dedicated service on the police and fire departments," he added.

All returning veterans are welcome to participate in the parade and celebration. Those who are interested may contact Flag Day Committee member Henry Bradley, Director of Veterans' Services at 617-376-1193.

The parade originated in 1951 and was started by the late Richard J. Koch, father of Mayor Koch, and the Koch Club and focused on honoring our flag and teaching youngsters to take pride in our country.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park which will include a flag raising of a massive 30 foot x 60 foot version of Old Glory, patriotic music and sing-a-long, fly-over, and howitzer salute capped off with a dazzling fireworks display at approximately 9:15 p.m.

For more information, contact the Park Department at 617-376-1251.

Soccer Coach For Able, Disabled Award Winner

A man who dedicated more than 25 years to youth soccer in Quincy and gave handicapped youngsters a chance to play, too, has been selected to receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The award will be presented to Malcolm MacNeil Saturday, June 14, at Pageant Field in Upper Merrymount Park following the 57th annual Flag Day parade.

MacNeil was selected based on his years of coaching, serving on the board of directors and as president for 22 years, motivating the thousands of Quincy kids who have participated in Quincy Youth Soccer.

Two years ago, he founded TOPS (To Offer a Program of Soccer) to work with children ages 5 to 15 who have a handicap that prevents them from participating in the regular youth program.

"Malcolm has committed endless hours to the youngsters of our city through his dedication to Quincy Youth Soccer," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee.

"His work with the TOPS program highlights his willingness to provide opportunities for all of our city's youngsters which truly exemplifies the motto of the Koch Club, 'Everyone willing to help, willing to help everyone.'"

The award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, the mayor's father, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

MacNeil and his wife, Joanne, have lived in Quincy for 38 years and have four children, Lauren, Brian, John and Matthew, and 10 grandchildren.

Keenan To Be New Police Chief

dealing with the Union is basically to "sit down with them and open the lines of communication, create a dialogue."

Bellotti's committee also was impressed with Keenan's interpretation of community policing as "a system-wide philosophy and not as merely a program

(and) his exceptional ideas about developing public relations strategies to enhance the reputation of the department."

Keenan said he plans to be visible to the public by attending community meetings and being accessible.

There was a "collective sense," said Bellotti, "that Captain Keenan presently has the personal presence, operational aptitude and appropriate temperament to lead the department through what is currently a challenging and transitional time.

"The Committee believes that Captain Keenan is now ready for the role of Chief."

Jonathan Sheehan Looking To Double Fundraising Goal

Last year, Quincy youngster Jonathan Sheehan raised $1,580 for the Pan-Mass Challenge for Kids in Hingham. This year, Sheehan, who was the number 1 fundraiser in 2007, hopes to double that amount.

The Pan-Mass Challenge for Kids is a charity bike race for kids age 3-15 from all over the South Shore that helps to raise funds for the Dana Farber Cancer Institute through the Jimmy Fund. The Challenge is broken up into three courses—tykes and trikes, a 2.5-mile course and a 7-mile course, all of which take place in Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

This year's Challenge is scheduled to take place on June 22.

Sheehan, a third grader at Merrymount Elementary School, sent out a letter to family and friends asking for their support as he looks to double his contribution to the Jimmy Fund. He has committed to riding the course twice this year in order to reach his fundraising goal of $3,000.

Last year, Sheehan and the more than 500 participants helped to raise more than $62,000 to help fight cancer. The event teaches kids about philanthropy, working to help others, enjoy a great physical activity and have a fun and rewarding day of biking and raising awareness for the Jimmy Fund.

If you would like to donate to Sheehan's cause go to www.kids.pmc.org and enter in Jonathan's rider ID: SJ0048.

This year's Challenge on June 22 will be followed by a celebration featuring Kelley Tuthill of Channel 5 TV, a balloon artist, treats, beverages, a raffle featuring Red Sox tickets and gift certificates to businesses in the Derby Street Shoppes and Hingham Square area.

Anyone interested in taking part in the event as either a biker or volunteer can register at kids.pmc.org/hingham.

Third And Fourth Grade Students Get Close-Up Look At Hospital

Bernazzani Students Visit Quincy Medical Center

One hundred and twenty third and fourth grade students from the Bernazzani Elementary School in Quincy recently visited and toured Quincy Medical Center as field trip.

The field trip served as a fun, interesting and non-threatening introduction to the hospital, and provided a behind-the-scenes look at what happens there. It also exposed students to the wide variety of career opportunities that exist in healthcare.

QMC President & CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, welcomed the student, their teachers and chaperones, and fielded some questions from the children before staff members escorted them on a tour.

The tour included a stop in the Cafeteria for snacks and information on nutrition and infection control. After that, the students visited different areas in the Radiology Department, Laboratory and Emergency Room. Outside the E.R., EMTs from Fallon Ambulance invited the kids aboard two ambulances.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196 bed acute care community teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, and emergency medicine. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of care.

THIRD AND FOURTH grade students from the Bernazzani Elementary School in Quincy recently visited and toured Quincy Medical Center as field trip.

Beechwood Life Center To Disband After Aug. 29

After Aug. 29, the Beechwood Community Life Center, which has served Quincy's seniors, adults and children alike for 27 years, will be no more.

Directors, faced with eviction from the city-owned building in September, voted unanimously "to provide full services at the 440 East Squantum St. location no later than Friday, Aug. 29."

"Then we will dissolve," said Judith A. Paul, president of the Board of Directors and widow of Beechwood's founder. "Then there will be no more Beechwood."

The location in the former Myles Standish School will then revert to the city to become the new Senior Center and administrative offices of the Department of Elder Services.

Beechwood has occupied the building since 1994 with a lease due to expire in September, 2009, under which it pays no rent but covers all utilities and minor building upkeep.

Mayor Tom Koch, noting that Beechwood had agreed to give the building back if the city needed it, laid claim to the old schoolhouse for a senior center in March and asked for it back on Sept. 1.

"We explored with the city the possibility of getting another building," said Paul. "But it was not possible. We will hold our last programs this summer. We expect a good summer."

Since its founding as a community center by the late Dr. Cecil Paul, Beechwood has added a child care and learning center which offers hundreds of enrichment programs for older children.

"Day care will have to move to other programs when Beechwood dissolves," said Paul. "Some are already moving now. I feel we have done as much as we can. We can't continue."

The Board of Directors reported to the staff and clients of Beechwood that, during weeks of negotiation with Koch, the mayor was "unequivocal in his intention not to extend the lease with Beechwood."

"In light of Mayor Koch's decisions, the organization's Board of Directors and Finance Committee have met repeatedly to decide upon a plan of action in keeping with community needs and our fiduciary obligations to our wonderful organization.

"Efforts have included: a report on current and projected finances from a certified public accountant; a presentation by a parent representative; a joint meeting with the mayor and parents; and an appearance at the Elder Committee, Quincy City Council.

"At every opportunity the Board has echoed the wishes of parents, families, seniors, staff and all members of the Beechwood community that the lease be extended in order that we may continue our citywide services.

"The Mayor has not offered us any lease extension or other alternative."

The directors' report said Beechwood's clients and staff deserve to be given a realistic date they can rely on for future planning, hence, the Aug. 29 closing.

"In consideration of the needs of our families, children and seniors currently being served, we will make every effort to remain open, continuing to provide the high quality care that our children/families/seniors deserve through the summer.

"Beyond that, we must accede to the mayor's decision to terminate our lease and our 27 year Beechwood/City of Quincy partnership in order that Mayor Koch initiate the city's own provision of senior services for the city of Quincy at the East Squantum Street site."

Open House, Yard Sale For Animal Shelter June 28

The Quincy Animal Shelter will hold a Summer Family Day, including an open house and a yard sale Saturday, June 28, on adjoining properties on Broad Street.

The open house will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the

Do unions make a difference

There was a time not so long ago that bosses made it illegal to belong to a union. When Massachusetts workers marched to demand things that we now take for granted, they were often beaten and sometimes killed. But they kept marching.

Because of their courage and determination, we now have

- A ban on Child Labor
- The eight-hour day
- Health Insurance

In Quincy, workers' rights are under challenge again. The City of Quincy – to "save money" – wants to use contractors who abuse workers to build the new Quincy High School. The mill owners put 8-year olds to work in the mills to "save money." It was wrong then. It is wrong today.

Tell Mayor Koch (376-1990) that Quincy workers deserve good jobs on the Quincy High School project.

QMC Honors Employees, Managers And Volunteer Of The Year

Quincy Medical Center recently honored several employees, managers and volunteers of the year at a ceremony held at the 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital.

The awards were presented by QMC President and CEO Gary Gibbons, MD.

The award recipients are: Victor Sumera of Quincy was named one of QMC's two Managers of the Year. Sumera is the medical center's Environmental Services Supervisor and has had a big impact at QMC despite having been with the hospital for less than two years.

According to his co-workers, Sumera manages his staff with both excellence and compassion; leads by example, often starting work at 6 a.m. and staying late into the afternoon; and truly understands team work.

Lucy Corvini of Plymouth was also named one of QMC's two Managers of the Year.

Corvini, a Quincy Medical Center employee since 2004, was honored for her keen attention to detail, unfailing customer service, extensive technical knowledge and excellent human resource skills.

"Lucy is a tremendous employee and an asset to the medical center," Dr. Gibbons said. "It is a pleasure to recognize her efforts."

Manet Health Records Go High Tech

Manet Community Health Center is going high tech.

Starting Monday, June 16, and extending over the summer months, patients' paper charts at all five Manet health center sites will be replaced by an Electronic Medical Record (EMR).

The center called it "a bold and strategic step for the health center that keeps Manet current, innovative and progressive in the delivery of care."

The electronic hookup is particularly advantageous for Manet, which maintains health centers in North Quincy, Snug Harbor (Germantown), Houghs Neck, Quincy Medical Center and Hull.

The EMR will allow Manet doctors and nurse practitioners to have instant entry to patients' health history, medications and lab test results ensuring the highest quality, best coordinated, on-time services.

"This is one of the most important steps Manet has ever taken to improve our ability to care for our patients," said the center. "An EMR improves patient safety and organizational efficiency."

"An EMR encourages better patient outcomes and markedly improves patient satisfaction along with standards of care."

The high tech effort was led internally by Dr. Bill Brandon, chief medical officer, and Jane Maffie-Lee, chief operations officer and acting CEO at Manet.

Children's Choir Camp At Sacred Heart Parish

The music ministry of Sacred Heart Parish will hold its second Children's Choir Camp the week of Aug. 4-8.

The innovative program, for children entering grades three through seven as of September, 2008, will be held on the parish grounds, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily. This year's camp theme is "Joseph and his Amazing Dreams."

The goal of the camp is to foster a better understanding of the Church's liturgy and music. Camp will include times for fun, games and crafts as well as singing and prayer. A hot lunch and two snacks will be provided daily. The week culminates on Friday, Aug. 8 with a short musical presentation based on the story of Joseph, his brothers and Pharaoh. A "make your own sundae" party for all in attendance will follow the performance.

An extended day on Thursday, Aug. 7 is planned and final musical rehearsals, a short Evening Prayer liturgy, and an optional family movie night in conjunction with the parish's "Popcom, Movie & Discussion" night. The movie for the evening will be "Mad Hot Ballroom."

Camp openings are available. A minimum number of 10 participants is needed by Sunday, June 15. The cost is $100 per child and includes all workbooks, music, crafts, lunches, snacks, and dinner and popcorn on Thursday. A $25 deposit for each child is due with registration, and the remainder paid in full by Aug. 1. For camp reservations or more information contact Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666.

Jack Kelly of Quincy was recognized as Quincy Medical Center's Volunteer of the Year. He has been a volunteer in the QMC Radiology Department since 200, after having worked as a letter carrier with the U.S. Postal Service for 42 years.

Kelly is described as "extremely reliable, an independent worker, and a great asset to the department."

Blair Wentworth of Needham was awarded the Quincy Medical Center President's Award in recognition of his outstanding service to the hospital.

Wentworth is QMC's director of Facilities Management.

"Blair is an invaluable asset to the hospital, and he is known for his tremendous commitment to his work," Dr. Gibbons said. "If that means researching a project at 2 a.m. at home to find a quicker, cheaper solution, that is what happens."

Dr. Gibbons credited Wentworth with successfully keeping the recent renovation of the hospital's new cardiovascular suite on schedule and on budget.

"Being 'on-call' for Blair is a 24-7-365 commitment, as it is to many of us," said Ed Browne, QMC vice president of General Services.

"However, Blair takes it the extra mile by making sure the operators not only have his cell and home phone but also both of his beeper numbers."

"When deadlines are set, Blair always puts the well being of the patients above all else. If that means he is here late in the evening or on a weekend to ensure a milestone is met, then he is here."

Wentworth has been with QMC since September 2001.

Dana Chandler of Roxbury was honored as one of Quincy Medical Center's two Employees of the Year.

Chandler works in the Environmental Services department and has been a QMC employee since 2000.

According to his co-workers, Chandler "consistently goes above and beyond his job requirements in an extremely happy and efficient manner to meet the requests of all the different floors" and "is obliging and courteous to all employees, patients and visitors."

Sara Taccini, R.N., of Weymouth, was also recognized as a QMC Employee of the Year.

Taccini, a nurse in the Emergency Department, has been at QMC for almost 15 years.

"She is always so kind and compassionate with her patients and their families," wrote her co-workers when nominating her for the award.

"She is continually upbeat, happy and enthusiastic no matter what is going on in the hectic emergency department. She is very competent and reliable at all times. She goes above and beyond every day and even went to the extent of going out to the parking lot to turn off an elderly patient's car lights after they forgot."

QMC provides South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services.

150 Protestors Pack City Hall To Oppose Billboard

Kristen Scott who said she and her husband had bought a home in West Quincy after it was described as a "hidden jewel."

"For all the young families in West Quincy, please take this down," she said.

Another young resident, Michelle McGaughey, described a "Welcome back to Quincy" party she held last year for residents returning to Quincy after living in Norwell.

Now, she said bumper stickers will be saying, "OFQ," as in "Originally from Quincy."

Residents described a community profoundly impacted by the sign. A lawyer for Quarry Hills residents promised legal action as did a West Quincy businessman.

A former Crown Colony resident said the sign, also, damages the city's business image and tourism efforts and could affect tax abatements in the area. She said the Boston Financial Data Services (BFDS) staff at Crown Colony can see the "hideous" billboard.

Atty. Matthew Lawlor of the Boston law firm Robinson & Cole, LLP, is representing businessman Thomas Maloney who never received abutters' notification.

Lawlor congratulated City Solicitor James Timmins for organizing the city's appeal to the state advertising board and outlined his own misgivings regarding the billboard.

Lawlor cited the problems with notification, as well as a "level of vagueness in the ZBA application and written decision which leaves me at least with questions about whether this billboard really has obtained all of the zoning relief it needs."

Another resident Ed

Mackey charged that the ZBA hearing on the billboard application was packed with out-of-towners and Biondi employees. The owners of Biondi's Service Center leased the sign site for 25-years to a New York advertising firm.

"I asked that the meeting be stopp'd," he said, describing a conversation with State Rep. Stephen Tobin, the attorney for Biondi Service Center.

Mackey called the ZBA hearing "a stacked meeting" and claimed that he was told, "I had no right to question this procedure."

City Council President Jay Davis of Ward 4 later disputed that Mackey's description of the ZBA hearing, suggesting that the individual had been disruptive during the meeting.

During the Ordinance Committee meeting that followed, councillors described the approval process as flawed at the state level which rubber-stamped the billboard application and, at the city level where abutter notification was spotty, approval possibly illegal, and the ZBA accepted a defective citizens' petition favoring the billboard.

Councillors voted to ask that city officials not use the billboard advertising space offered free to the city as part of a mitigation package offered by Biondi's. The mitigation, also, includes donations to public schools and various city programs.

However, Councillor Joseph Finn suggested the city use the billboard with a message, "Take This Billboard Down."

Councillors also voted to ask the ZBA to reverse their vote and for the state's billboard advertising council to withdraw its approval and reject the next annual permit.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said that, in one report, a ZBA member described the proposed structure as 65-foot high and as a single billboard.

In fact, the structure is 82 feet high with two 48 by 14 foot illuminated signs. One irate speaker noted that the sixty-foot height has been used erroneously in the past in most published reports.

As for the petition, Tom Maloney of Copeland Street said some names had no addresses and, "Many who signed were not from our ward."

Questions about the petition only deteriorated after that. Cheryl Van Dine of Babcock Street, Houghs Neck, said she doesn't know "how my name appeared on the petition."

Van Dine said that she had signed a petition "...to keep alcohol out of the (local) 7-11."

Both Raymondi and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin reported at least two others whose names appeared on the petition after they'd signed an anti-alcohol petition.

"Her name was on the petition illegally," said Coughlin of his constituent. He called the efforts "puffing up the petition." Coughlin later, suggested establishing standardized petition forms to guard against bogus petitions.

City Solicitor James Timmins described the city's ongoing legal efforts to have the billboard removed. Timmins said that he is waiting for a response from the state.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly praised Timmins' efforts but suggested that the city hire an attorney who would focus all his attention on the billboard battle.

Timmins, also, warned residents that the clock is running down on legal appeals. He suggested that a last possible date for personal action would be in June and that may even be too late.

City Council President Jay Davis chaired the council's public hearing. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee chaired the Ordinance Committee meeting.

All votes were unanimous. Councillors John Keenan and Douglas Gutro, Ward 5, were out of state on business. Both councillors have worked and supported efforts to have the billboard dismantled.

Davis Apologizes Over Billboard Issue

In the weeks since the West Quincy billboard at 313-315 Willard Street was built and completed in May, City Council President Jay Davis has been under fire in his own ward and by his own constituents for the structure.

In Ward 4, many of Davis' constituents blame him for allowing the 82-foot billboard to be built. They consider it a blight on their neighborhood and fault Davis' actions.

At Monday night's Ordinance Committee meeting, Davis apologized to anyone that he may have offended regarding the issue.

"I apologize to anyone I hurt," said Davis, explaining that councillors are "not engineers or building inspectors" and few people envisioned the size of the mammoth billboard structure.

"I love the city as much as anybody," said Davis said who described his efforts to alert his West Quincy constituents to the ZBA hearing, "I work very hard (as councillor)."

Not only are people "attacking my integrity," Davis said but he described one harrowing incident where he was "shoved down four stairs."

Davis said he did everything he thought possible to inform residents of the issue, but is sorry to anyone he offended

Since the issue exploded, Davis has repeatedly outlined his efforts to inform area residents well before the June 2007 Zoning Board of Appeals hearing.

"I walked the neighborhood. I tried to talk to people," Davis said, adding that he'd put his notice and letter in people's mailboxes and talked to everyone he could.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee chaired the Ordinance Committee meeting Monday and, immediately, invited Davis to address complaints regarding his part in the billboard approval process.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop At City Hall June 24, 26

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will hold a first-time homebuyer workshop Tuesday, June 24 from 5 to 9 p.m. and Thursday, June 26 from 5 to 9 p.m. in the second floor conference room of Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street.

The workshop is sponsored by Sovereign

Bank.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a home-buying certificate.

There is a $15 fee per person.

To register or for more information call 617-770-2227 ext. 31.

The workshop is open to all Massachusetts residents, regardless of income. Seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first-time homebuyers.

Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss mortgage options. Other topics include legal aspects of home buying and the importance of home and lead inspections and other information.

The workshop is a prerequisite for first-time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs.

Backyard Basics

Making The Most Of Outdoor Living Space

Warm weather calls for a celebration. Whether it is a casual gathering of family or an all-out backyard bash, Ginny Bean-publisher of Ginny's catalog and Founder of Ginneys.com-has some timely tips for getting outdoor space ready for the occasion:

1. Pick furniture that is durable, comfortable and functional: Outdoor furniture not only provides a place to sit and dine, it also helps organize your space. Keep the season carefree with pieces that are water, fade and stain resistant.

2. Introduce seasonal color with plants: Just because your patio is paved doesn't mean you have to go without plants. Freestanding planters are the easiest and most versatile solution.

3. Establish an oasis of shade: Portable canopies and garden gazebos provide a cost-effective option. Some have the added bonus of removable weather and insect screen sidewalls.

4. Add lighting: Make your outdoor space useful even after the sun goes down. Get creative in mounting lights on tree branches, arbors or wood railings. Go "green" with a wide range of available solar-powered accent lights.

5. Create a focal point:

In the same way you would decorate a room inside your home, use yard art to accent your outdoor space. A functional focal point serves double duty. A firepit or chiminea provides a gathering spot for warm conversation and togetherness.

Visit Ginneys.com or call 800-487-9024 for more practical seasonal ideas or to request a copy of Ginny's summer catalog.

Spending Your Stimulus Check

Some of you have already received your stimulus rebate checks from the federal government. Others will get theirs in the next few weeks. Everyone should have theirs by mid-July. How are you going to spend your rebate?

Polls show that, despite the hope that consumers will jumpstart the economy by quickly spending the money, most are opting to make smarter choices. Here's what the experts recommend, and what most consumers say they will do: Pay off a high-interest credit card, or put the money into savings.

Retailers, however, have geared up to help you spend the money by offering special deals.

Some will cash the check and give you a 10 percent bonus if you convert the whole amount to a gift card to be spent only in that store.

Some will cash your check with no strings attached and give you money off a large purchase made in the store.

Some will cash your check, give you a percentage off a large purchase, and put the balance of the check on a gift card that can be used anywhere.

But beware any expiration on the card or the deals. One store chain will give 10 percent off purchases made within two days only.

As for the size of the check, it's not difficult to calculate how much you'll receive. If single, your rebate will be $600. Married couples filing jointly will get $1,200. Each child under age 17 who is claimed as a dependent will add $300 to the check. Some seniors and disabled veterans will receive $300 if they file, even though they don't usually file because of low income.

The timetable to send out the rebates is broken down into categories by last two digits of Social Security numbers, with the higher numbers going out later. All checks should be mailed by July 11.

If you think you should have received your rebate and you don't have it yet, go to the Internal Revenue Service Web site [www.irs.gov] and click on the "Where's My Refund link. You'll need to have the following information ready: Social Security number, filing status and the number of exemptions on your 2007 return. (Note: Unless your check is due to be sent within a week, or has already been sent, you won't get any information.)

the fiber cement's growing popularity is due to the fact that it is easy to maintain. It will not rot like traditional wood siding, is impervious to wood-boring insects and is resistant to warping from exposure to the sun.

CertainTeed's Fiber Cement siding products are also considered a "green" material choice as the composition includes recycled fly ash. Along with its recycled content, the company's Fiber Cement siding features the most authentic-looking grains and textures of any fiber cement on the market. The environmentally friendly product is lighter weight and lower density, reducing the energy required to produce, transport and install. In 2008, CertainTeed's WeatherBoards and ColorMax Fiber Cement siding were named American Building Product Award winners by Home Magazine.

With all these features, the variety of fiber cement styles and colors homeowners have to choose from is remarkable. It is arranged in a wide range of profiles and features an array of beautiful, prefinished color and premium stains that can be coordinated with soffit, trim and accessories, allowing for an endless selection of design options.

Get Your Yard Warm Weather Ready

It's time to get your lawn back in shape after winter. It doesn't need to be an all-day process or cost a lot if you follow a few no-frill lawn tips. In no time, you'll be on your way to a healthy looking lawn that would make even the most avid gardener jealous.

Here are a few quick and easy lawn care tips from Yard Machines outdoor power equipment, the hardest working tools for the lawn:

Cut low initially: Winter snow and wind dry out the lawn, turning tips of grass blades brown. To help your lawn recover in spring, the initial cutting should be at a lower mowing height, ideally 1.5 inches. The first cut will remove the winter damage and help the lawn to thicken, reducing spring weeds and ultimately saving money on weed treatments.

Prevent crab grass: Crab grass generally appears in lawns in late May, so now is the time to apply herbicides, specifically pre-emergent herbicides. The ideal time will vary depending on where you live and how warm a spring you are having. If dealt with early, crab grass can be largely prevented, thus saving you time and money in the future.

Bare patches: Throw some extra grass seed down and water daily to fill in spots. In no time you'll have a filled-in yard.

Fertilize and aerate your way to green grass: Visit your local garden store for a few bags of fertilizer, depending on your lawn size. In most cases, you can get away with one spring and one fall fertilization. Early spring is the best time to aerate your lawn to help warm cold soils, increase water, nutrient and oxygen movement and enhance rooting for better grass growth and color.

Mulch your grass: If you don't want to spend the extra money on fertilizer, mulch your grass clippings and throw them back on the lawn for added nutrients.

Mower maintenance: Make sure to perform proper maintenance on your mower. Sharpen the blades each year to keep your mower cutting better and smoother with each use. Clean the deck twice a year with a hose to remove caked-on clippings and dirt. Also, be sure to check and change the oil, filter and spark plug.

For example, could save up to 50 percent on the utility bill for cooling.

Money does grow on trees

By planting trees and shrubs homeowners can create shade in the summer and windbreaks in the winter. Not only do they add aesthetic value, but carefully positioned trees can save up to 25 percent of the energy a typical household uses for cooling. Trees and shrubs can also be planted near an air conditioning unit to conserve energy. A shaded air conditioner will use as much as 10 percent less energy.

Add Insulation

Air ducts that aren't insulated can lose up to 60 percent of heated air and BBB Accredited Business, Owens Corning, notes that an estimated 60 million American homes are under-insulated. The Department of Energy recommends 15.5 inches of fiberglass blanket insulation or about 18 inches of blown insulation for attics.

New Options For Illuminating The Home

Trends to watch for today's modern-style home are energy-efficient lighting and lighting with dimmer options. Eco-friendly LED (light-emitting diode) lights now offer many options and styles. There are also sleek dimmer lights for home or office that allow for easy light adjustment. The examples below are innovative trends in the lighting category:

• LEDs are opening up a world of shapes and colors, changing what many people expect from lighting. One example is the Orten'zia Rechargeable Table LED Lamp by Terzani (www.ylighting.com), which can create soft, playful light outdoors.

• Both fluorescents and LEDs offer many new design applications. There are multitudes of aesthetically pleasing options out there. Take the Anastasia LED Table Lamp, for example, which has a compact light source possible only with LEDs and a laser-cut structure that creates floral-inspired light and shadow silhouettes around the base. No longer are designs constrained by the traditional lightbulb.

• You can make a statement with a versatile light that utilizes a "magical" touch switch feature, which conveniently sets the mood in any room. The Simple Original Accent Lamp and the Park One Light Table Lamp, both from Kovavs, have touch dimmer features that make adjusting lighting easy.

Loose Stair Tread Needs Repair

Q. I returned home from a business trip last week and, walking up the stairs, one of the steps actually lifted up from the back as I put my foot on it, then flopped back into place as I continued up. I put some wood glue along the back edge and tapped it tight against the vertical board behind it, but it has come loose again. Any tips? — Edward F., via e-mail

A. If you can access the underside of the stairs, place sturdy screws through the riser (the vertical board between each step) and into the back of the step to make sure it stays in place.

Many staircases are enclosed, however, so you'll have to make the repair from the topside. I'd recommend inspecting the step closely before securing it to make sure it's not damaged. If you can pull the step away from the riser and stringers (the vertical bracing on either side of the step) without damaging the wood, do so. (A pry bar and hammer are helpful.) Inspect all surrounding wood for damage and scrape away old glue and paint from the contact surfaces.

If the step is damaged — cracked, broken or rotted — it should be replaced; measure and cut a new tread to size and test fit. If it's not damaged, remove old nails and test fit.

Apply a bead of construction adhesive along the tops of the stringers, and set the step in place. To fasten it from the topside, drill pilot holes through the tread into the tops of the stringers (two or three each side) and drive screws through them. Countersink the screws and fill the holes with wood putty or plugs.

Money-Saving Home Improvements Through Energy Efficiency

For people wanting to cut energy costs around the house, Better Business Bureau (BBB) has advice on home improvements that can take a bite out of your energy bill.

BBB offers the following home improvement advice to help reduce energy costs:

Look toward the windows

While replacing old windows with more energy-efficient options requires an upfront investment, homeowners will reap the benefits of this improvement for years to come. Some energy-efficient windows are designed for warmer climates with coatings that prevent heat absorption. Homeowners in cooler climates should consider installing storm windows which can reduce heat loss through windows by 25 to 50 percent. Simple things such as locking windows and using curtains will help in maintaining a comfortable temperature in your home.

Stop the leaks

According to the U.S. Department of Energy, there are many culprits for air leaks around the house that contribute to inflated heating and cooling bills: 31 percent of air is leaked through floors, walls and ceilings, 15 percent from ductwork, 14 percent from the fireplace, 13 percent from plumbing penetrations and 11 percent from doors. Applying weather stripping to windows and doors is an easy do-it-yourself project for most homeowners.

Out with the old, in with the green

Appliances account for 20 percent of homeowners' energy bills. When shopping for new appliances, heaters, or air conditioners, BBB advises consumers to look for the Energy Star logo — the federal government's label for energy efficiency. While such purchases can be initially expensive, a new, energy efficient air conditioner,

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, May 29 2008, at approximately 8:50 A.M., Officers Kevin DiMattio, Michael Sullivan and James Sullivan responded to the Rite Aid Pharmacy at 475 Hancock Street for an armed robbery call that had just occurred. While enroute to the call, the dispatcher learned from Rite Aid employees that the suspect alluded to having a gun and after taking some money, he fled on foot across the parking lot. The suspect's description was given as a white male in his thirties wearing a gray shirt, beige shorts and a gray baseball cap.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, Officer DiMattio interviewed Rite Aid employees and learned from the register clerk that the suspect approached her and said, "I'm sorry. My kids are starving." He told the clerk that he had a gun and demanded that she open the register and give him all the money inside the cash register. The clerk said she first thought it was a joke because the suspect was so polite. The clerk could tell by the suspect's face that he was serious so she opened the register and gave him two twenty dollar bills, two five dollar bills and fifteen to twenty one dollar bills. The suspect then calmly walked out of the store and then ran across the parking lot towards Hancock Street.

The clerk then notified the store manager, who then called "911" to report the robbery. The store manager showed Officer DiMattio store surveillance camera video of the suspect entering Rite Aid. The video showed that the entire robbery took place in less than one minute. Based on the videotape, Officer DiMattio provided more information about the suspect's description to units checking the area.

The suspect's baseball cap had a dark unidentifiable marking/insignia on the front, his shirt had a white horizontal stripe across his shirt and he was wearing white sneakers.

Sergeant Steven Igo arrived on scene and informed Officer DiMattio and Detectives that Communications Operator James McAvoy provided the name and address of a likely suspect known for similar type crimes. Sergeant Igo and Detectives' Bill Monteith and Ralph Willard responded to the suspect's residence and located the suspect inside his room. He willingly went outside with the Officers. The store clerk was asked to go with the Officers to see if she could identify the suspect. After viewing the suspect, the store clerk said she was unsure if he was the suspect. The suspect was wearing beige shorts similar to what the suspect was wearing during the robbery, however he now had on a gray hooded sweatshirt and no baseball cap.

A short time later the building manager was asked to view the video surveillance footage from Rite Aid to see if he recognized the suspect as one of his tenants. After viewing the videotape, the manager told Detective Monteith "that's definitely him", referring to the suspect. Based on the positive identification, the suspect was placed under arrest.

The suspect complained of chest pains and was transported to Quincy Medical Center. He also informed Officers that he had just shot up (cocaine) prior to speaking with the Police. The suspect, a 44-year-old Quincy resident, was later transported to the Quincy Police station for proper booking and charged with one count of "Armed Robbery."

While at the apartment, Detective Monteith read the suspect a "consent to search" form. The suspect signed this form giving officers permission to search his apartment. Clothing items matching the suspect's outfit during the robbery were found and placed into evidence.

Nice Work!

Warning Signs Heat Is Getting To You

By TOM HENSHAW

Boy, is it ever hot out! I just can't seem to get comfortable no matter what I do. I don't even feel like getting up and getting a glass of water. Lunch? I think I'll skip it. I'm just not hungry.

Brother, those are the early warning signs that the heat is getting to you and you'd better start doing something about it, particularly if you are very young, chronically ill or elderly.

You have a problem called Heat Stress, the lowest form of physical peril brought about by 90-degree temperatures and identified by general discomfort, lack of energy and loss of appetite.

The remedy is to stop doing what you are doing — better yet, stop doing anything physical — and find a cool place, like an air conditioned shopping mall or movie theater, in which to do nothing.

Failure to heed the early signs of heat stress can lead to Heat Exhaustion, a severe cramping of muscles due to excess sweating and loss of salt from the body due to exertion and/or high temperatures.

Heat exhaustion is treated by resting in a cool place (maybe the mall again) and replenishing lost fluids (no alcohol or caffeinated beverages) and salts (unless you're on a sodium restricted diet).

If left untreated, heat exhaustion can morph into Heat Stroke, a life-threatening condition where body temperature rises sharply accompanied by delirium, disorientation, even a coma.

"Heat stroke is most likely to develop during a heat wave where the humidity is high and the temperatures are at or above 90 degrees for three or more consecutive days," says the Quincy Health Department.

"A person suffering from heat stroke needs to have their body temperatures lowered by cooling the body surface with water and be transported to the hospital for immediate treatment.

"If you have any severe reactions to the heat that cannot be alleviated by rest and fluids, seek medical attention immediately."

Of course, you can avoid the pitfalls of heat stress, exhaustion and stroke by making the simple preparations recommended by the Health Department when you see, feel or hear of a heat wave approaching.

For one thing, drink plenty of water, choose foods high in water content, like fruits, salads and soups, and avoid alcoholic and caffeinated beverages which increase water loss and can dehydrate the body.

Cool the skin with cool cloths and take cool baths or showers. If your living quarters are uncomfortable, try to seek comfort in an air-conditioned mall, senior recreation area, library or movie theater.

Wear loose, light-colored and lightweight clothing. Wear a hat outdoors and try to stay out of the direct sun light. Cut back on physical activity and rest at the first sign of fatigue, lightheadedness or feeling hot.

One place to gain relief from the heat is the "Senior Cooling Center" at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., where a full summer schedule of activities is underway.

"Our drop-in center is cool and welcoming," said Maryann Mahony, senior center coordinator. "Quincy seniors are invited to stop by to participate in some or all of our summer activities."

Senior citizens living alone should make sure to contact neighbors, friends and family if they need assistance and neighbors should be aware of seniors living nearby and check on them periodically during heat waves.

11th Annual Squirrel Run Saturday

The 11th annual "Squirrel Run," benefiting ALS research will be held Saturday at Pageant Field, with registration beginning at 8 a.m.

The race, named after Jimmy "The Squirrel" Kennedy, has become one of the biggest charity road races held annually in Quincy.

Kennedy, a well-known Quincy family, was 31 when he lost his battle with ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease.

The event is a 5-mile race beginning at 10 a.m. and a 2.5-mile fitness walk beginning at 9 a.m. Race day registration is $20, and all participants will be given a T-shirt. There will also be games and rides for kids, trophies and other prizes and raffles to be awarded at the end of the race.

Miss Guinness Record Time By Six Minutes

Point Webster Students Lay Out Mile Of Pennies

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Brian Angell's seventh grade math students accomplished a major goal last week when they laid one mile of pennies up and down the gymnasium floor at Point Webster Middle School.

That's 84,480 pennies lined up, straight as a die, in 75 seventy-foot lengths plus the squared off turn-arounds at each end.

"We're really proud that we were able to do it. We put our hearts into it," Angell said, adding they may try again next year for their other big goal, the Guinness World record for speed.

The youngsters fell short by six minutes of the Guinness championship. They vowed to crack that record next year and to keep trying.

Angell, also, said that another goal is to collect one million pennies. "We want to actually reach one million, $10,000."

Once that's accomplished, Angell said they will cash out the pennies, donate $5000 to local charities and $5000 for a Point Webster School project.

The Point Webster classes started collecting pennies in November as part of Angell's math project. By last Friday, they'd collected over 100,000 pennies, enough for the penny mile and more.

"Mainly, they've gone to their own homes," said Angell, adding the youngsters, also, reached out to restaurants, neighbors and friends. For six months, they brought in jars, canisters, and pockets full of pennies.

One woman hadn't known what to do with her pennies and told Angell, "Thank God. Please take them."

Angell launched the project when he began teaching the math concept of the "powers of 10, to the second (100) to the third (1,000)."

"I basically wanted to show the kids what a mile looked like," Angell said of initial plan. What followed was an explosion of thousands in penny contributions stored in five-gallon containers weighing 140 pounds of pennies each.

Last week, the seventh grade classes joined forces for the mile project, working in tandem on teams.

As they waited on the sidelines, several students described their part in the project and explained that everyone had a very specific job.

"I am a penny master," Demetrius Wilkerson said, describing his job in filling the cups for the teams laying the lines while Scifo Campbell was a line assistant and block mover.

D. J. Feliciano kept numbers and Kevin Farrell brought the pennies to the workline. Darbi Thomas worked the video-taping because, "You have to videotape the whole thing for Guinness."

Taelse Semedo worked the "X Team" line of the project, actually placing the pennies along the eight foot long white plastic guides. "We each have to do five feet of pennies. We switch every six minutes."

"We practiced," Taelse said, noting they'd done "18 lines in 20 minutes" and decided they could surpass the Guinness record.

As they awaited their call from the sidelines, the youngsters reeled off math equations that would easily baffle most adults.

Ariana Nickerson described the championship drive. "It's intense. It's exciting." Her job was to check for any gap in the penny rows.

"If it's one centimeter off, then we could lose," Ariana said, then easily described formulas for weighing and sizing pennies to measuring the length and numbers.

James Brown described "how to convert meters to inches and kilometers into a mile," while his friend, Ryan Bresnahan, offered the formula for comparing inches to centimeters.

As for determining the number of pennies in a jar, Paul Nigro said it was necessary to determine the width and weight and how many are needed for a foot.

In response to a puzzled reporter, Paul compared the process to guessing the number of gummy bears in a jar.

"Take one gummy bear, weigh it, and cancel out the weight of the jar," said Paul.

At the end of the project, many of Point Webster's other 300 students visited the gym and looked awestruck at the rows of pennies.

Then, near 2 p.m., the math students swept up the penny mile and stored its 80,000 plus pieces back in the school vault for another day.

"It's a powerful learning experience," said Principal Jim McGuire, calling the project "exciting."

Long after the youngsters have forgotten much from their school days, McGuire said they'll remember their penny mile. "It's an experience they'll take with them for their entire life."

The judges were Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Educators Association and retired teacher Bob Lee. Lee, a teacher for 37 years, taught at Blue Hills Technical School.

Angell, also, thanked the schools' friends at Monadnock Spring Water Co. which supplied the storage containers for the pennies and Citizens Bank which helped convert donations of other denominations into pennies.

MATH TEACHER Brian Angell finds a tiny gap in a penny row as his students (in the background) rush to complete Point Webster Middle School's penny mile during last week's try for a Guinness World record. The students finished the mile but missed the record by six minutes.

A FISTFUL OF PENNIES looks like this for six math students from Point Webster Middle School. The youngsters were on teams laying down a mile of pennies. Left to right are Demetrius Wilkerson, Marli Casli, Anton Lopes, Jay Newman, Megan Welliver, and Mykiel Williams.

RAY FELICIANO called time and replacements for more than two hours as his classmates tried to break a world record.

27th Annual Professional Recognition Ceremony Held At Bethany Congregational Church

Quincy College Awards Official Pin To Nursing Graduates

Quincy College recently honored 67 nursing graduates at the 27th Annual Professional Recognition Ceremony at the Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center.

Graduates were awarded the school pin to recognize their completion of the Associate Degree in Nursing.

The graduates wore traditional white nursing uniforms and walked through the church carrying a single red rose over their hearts. White uniforms are worn to honor the contributions of Florence Nightingale and red roses are carried to signify the Red Cross, a symbol of the wounded and dying soldiers of the Crimean War. Red roses were also included in the ceremony because they represent love, respect and courage.

Kristin M. Parks, chairperson of the Associate Degree Program in Nursing, welcomed everyone to the ceremony and introduced the Quincy College faculty and staff in attendance.

Vice President of Academic Affairs Patricia Vampatella, R.N. offered greetings from the college and shared her personal history as a nurse.

Peter H. Tsaffaras, Esq., chairperson of the Quincy College Board of Governors, introduced the Board members who were in attendance at the ceremony including Mark Bertman, Mary Jo Brogna and William Grindlay.

President Martha Sue Harris offered her congratulations to the graduating class and expressed how proud the Quincy College community was of the graduating class and its accomplishments.

Professor Elizabeth Chandler of the Associate Degree in Nursing Program shared with the audience the history of the Nursing Pin.

"The pin achieves two purposes," Chandler said. "First it proclaims to all, 'this is a nurse.' Secondly, it promotes a sense of belonging to a most noble profession."

The official awarding of the pins was presented by Kristin Parks and Professors Elaine Beaupre and Ronald Dorleans.

The graduates made their way to the stage to be pinned by either a faculty member of their choice or a family member who is in the nursing profession.

Class representatives Kerri Smiddy and Lindsey Mattus took to the stage to give their farewell addresses. Smiddy offered a humorous farewell which included a song dedicated to Professor Chandler entitled, "Betsy Can I," a spoof of the song

"Sexy Can I" by R&B singer Ray J.

The ceremony concluded with closing remarks by Kristin Parks who wished each graduate congratulations and good luck.

SOUTH COASTAL BANK recently presented a $500 grant from its C.A.R.E.S. community giving program to Quincy Public Schools. The funding was used to present the program "Science In Motion" for first and second grade teachers.

South Coastal Bank Awards Grant To Quincy Public Schools

South Coastal Bank announces Quincy Public Schools has been awarded a $500 grant from its South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. community giving program.

Committed to enriching the lives of children in the communities it serves, South Coastal Bank specifically designed C.A.R.E.S. to help local not-for-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of Community, Achievement, Responsibility and Excellence in children through exposure to the arts.

C.A.R.E.S. funds were applied toward a presentation of the program "Science In Motion" for Quincy Public Schools' first- and second-grade teachers. The hands-on workshop by mime artist and instructor Robert Rivest focuses on helping educators use creative movement and mime comedy to express science concepts to their students.

Quincy's Robert Hanna Attends Field Trip To North Cambridge Catholic High School

The Catholic Schools Foundation recently hosted its annual Back to Class Bus Tour, visiting one of the 100 schools supported by its signature program, the Inner-City Scholarship Fund (ICSF).

Over 60 donors and friends of the ICSF, including Robert Hanna of Quincy attended the field trip to North Cambridge Catholic High School (NCC) to observe first-hand how their support of the ICSF helps to transform students' lives.

Guests from NCC, Bob McCarthy, welcomed guests and highlighted some of the recent successes of NCC students, success stories which would be impossible without the generosity of donors to the ICSF.

Mike Reardon, executive director of the Catholic Schools Foundation, shared that over 5,500 students' lives were directly impacted by the financial assistance they and their families received through the generous support of the ICSF.

Tom O'Neill, III, chairman of the NCC Board of Trustees and Mike Champa, a trustee of the Catholic Schools Foundation commented on the success of the Cristo Rey model at NCC, since its implementation in 2004.

The model incorporates a corporate work study program into the daily curriculum. Students spend five days a month in the office of a corporate partner, gaining valuable work experience, and earning money towards their tuition. Currently, NCC boasts relationships with 74 companies and corporations and since 2004, the school has maintained a 100% college acceptance rate.

Daniel Cosgrove Honored At Trinity College

Daniel J. Cosgrove of Quincy was recently recognized for outstanding scholastic and intellectual achievement at the 58th annual Honors Day Ceremony of Trinity College.

Cosgrove, a 2008 graduate of the college, received a Samuel S. Fishzohn Award for Civil Rights and Civil Liberties, established in 1966 in memory of Samuel S. Fishzohn '25, a prominent figure in social work and welfare.

Awards are given each year to at least two students: one who has demonstrated initiative and creativity in community service related to important social issues, and the other who has worked with dedication in civil rights, civil liberties, or race relations.

Cosgrove was recognized for her initiative and creativity in community service related to important social issues.

The ceremony originated when former Trinity College President George Keith Funston, who served from 1945 to 1951, re-established the College's academic pageantry, which had been curtailed during World War II. Matriculation and the Book Ceremony for first-year students were brought back, and, in the spring of 1950, Honors Day was added as a new ceremony. It was intended to be an occasion when all Trinity prizes and awards—with the exception of those given out at Commencement—could be celebrated in the presence of the entire College community.

Founded in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1823, Trinity College is an independent, nonsectarian liberal arts college with over 2,200 students from 44 states and 28 countries. It is home to the eighth-oldest chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in the United States. The faculty and alumni include recipients of the Pulitzer Prize, the MacArthur award, Guggenheims, Rockefeller and other national academic awards.

Teachers, Students Certified At New QHS Construction Site

Two Quincy High School plumbing teachers and 12 students were recently certified in acid waste piping at the new high school construction site.

They joined four site plumbers from P.J. Kennedy and the Quincy Plumbing Inspector for an instructional session by pipe manufacturer George Fischer. The course reviewed various components that make up the acid waste system, including the electro-fusion process and proper welding and final testing techniques.

Participants were tested at the conclusion of the class and awarded a certificate in the installation of acid waste piping. Acid waste is produced by the chemical labs currently under construction at the new science and technology building. Due to the highly corrosive and caustic nature of this waste, specialized plumbing is required for proper disposal.

Thanks to the coordination of school administrators and construction site personnel, two teachers and 12 students of Quincy High School are now officially acid waste plumbing certified. The certification is one of many learning opportunities currently occurring at the new high school construction site.

Several times a month, teachers and students participate in on-site construction activities, maximizing the educational value the neighboring construction site presents.

Jennifer Cullen Receives Medical Degree From UNC

Jennifer Cullen, a 1996 graduate of Quincy High School, recently received her doctor of medicine degree from the University of North Carolina, School of Medicine, at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Cullen completed her undergraduate education at Holy Cross in Worcester in 2000. She will begin a four-year residency program in emergency medicine at "This exciting construction project provides added value to our community through the involvement of our teachers and students," said Quincy Public Schools Superintendent, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"The learning opportunities the construction site provides are being built into the school curriculum to maximize student exposure to careers in the trades, construction management, architecture, and engineering."

Eileen O'Donoghue Executive Chef At Quincy's Jury Room Restaurant

Eileen O'Donoghue has been named Executive Chef at The Jury Room, a new restaurant/bar located at 39 Cottage Avenue in Quincy, across from the Courthouse.

O'Donoghue has created the menus that serve the public in the newly-opened restaurant: an extensive bar menu that features appetizers, flatbreads, salads, sandwiches and desserts; and a restaurant menu that specializes in chicken, seafood and steak entrees. Offerings are contemporary American lunch and dinner entrees.

O'Donoghue first trained in culinary arts in her native Ireland and then completed her education at Johnson & Wales. She is the former Executive Chef and Executive Sous Chef for the Jurys Boston Hotel in the Back Bay; for the last three years at the Jurys she served as executive chef and quipped that her new challenge has taken her from one Jury to another.

Prior to her work with Jurys Boston, she was a Rounds Chef for six years at Boston Harbor Hotel.

The new courthouse-themed restaurant features Flatbreads including Court Appearance, Guilty as

EILEEN O'DONOGHUE

Charged, Unlawful Detainer, and Class Action. The patron in search of a sandwich can order a Power of Attorney, Beyond Reasonable Doubt Tuna Melt, and Contempt of Court sirloin sandwich.

In her new role, she will work with owner Clint Smith of Hanover, who also owns The Cellar Tavern, a 100-year old pub in Abington.

The Jury Room opened in mid-May. The restaurant is decorated with wall murals in the jury and trial court motif. One drawing shows the Prosecutor who graduated from The University of Hard Knocks. There is another illustration, The Defendant, drawings of prisoners, judges and attorneys; and the restaurant side of the building is called, appropriately enough, the Sidebar Restaurant.

"Eileen is a first-rate chef who brings talent, creativity and excellent cuisine to The Jury Room," said Smith. "In a competitive restaurant environment, it's important to have the very best team in place to make certain that a visit to our restaurant is both memorable and satisfying. Eileen will be a key part of making that happen."

The tavern and restaurant side together will seat approximately 100 patrons. In addition to the luncheon and dinner specialties, The Jury Room and Sidebar Lounge will be known for its Scotch Bar, offering nearly 70 different varieties of scotch.

The Jury Room's hours of operation are 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; Thursday and Friday from 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. and Saturday, 4 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The Jury Room will be open on Sunday only for functions. The restaurant serves lunch and dinner on Monday through Friday and dinner only on Saturday. For additional information, call 617-328-7234.

Mullen Cover Boy For NAELA News

Quincy Attorney Thomas R. Mullen, a pioneer in legal counseling for seniors and the disabled, is on the cover of the latest issue of the NAELA News, the quarterly publication of the National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys.

The article inside lauds Mullen for his compassionate care of his clients and his systematic approach to law practice management that is used by elder law attorneys around the country.

The article notes that "Tom's office manual, which he has generously shared with other NAELA members, is extensive."

"He has a policy for the receptionist on how to interview callers so that they will come in days later for an initial interview."

"He has procedures on how to convert prospects to clients at the end of an initial meeting."

"Most importantly, he has streamlined production of the work the client really needs."

"Tom cares about his practice and, following the advice of one of his gurus, spends the time working 'on' his practice as well as 'in' it."

NAELA, established in 1987, is a non-profit association that assists lawyers. Its members are attorneys experienced and trained in working with the legal problems of the aging Americans and those with disabilities.

Mullen has been practicing elder law since 1988.

Mandate For Crowd Managers: July 1

Once again the State Fire Marshal has seen fit to add to our enforcement efforts mandating that dance halls and nightclubs designate crowd managers within these occupancies by July 1, 2008.

A crowd manager must be at least 21 years of age; shall be the owner or operator or under their direct control during operating hours. The crowd manager shall be responsible for maintaining clear exits, assuring that there is no overcrowding, initiating an alarm if necessary and directing occupants to exits in the event of an emergency. They will be responsible for the general fire safety awareness of employees and occupants including ensuring periodic exit announcements are made prior to performances.

They will be responsible for the completion of a safety checklist each day or night the nightclub or dance hall is open to the public. These completed checklists must be signed by the crowd manager and kept on file for at least one year while subject to our perusal during our yearly inspections. Meanwhile, the checklist has been developed by the State Fire Marshal, while this Department will make certain that templates are made available to those designated locations.

It has been the responsibility of this Department, with the input of the Building Department, to determine which locations within this city must now have a crowd manager. We have done so after lengthy discussions where the locations have not been that easy to designate. Many function halls for instance are just that; while there are occasions throughout the year where they do conduct themselves as a dance hall, nightclub, cabaret, etc., making them eligible for the need of a crowd manager on those occasions only.

Therefore there are locations that fall within the definition of a dance hall or nightclub each and every night. There are also those locations fitting that designation less frequently throughout the year. All will be notified of the need for a crowd manager and those function halls used less frequently as a dance hall or nightclub or similar function will require a crowd manager during that usage only.

As with any Fire Marshal mandate, it is their idea and our effort that gains compliance. We trust that the owners of these designated locations will realize and embrace the importance of this effort. We ask that they be mindful that we are available to answer any questions that they may have regarding the implementation of this program.

We will soon contact those affected by the need of a crowd manager when we will then offer more instruction and a template for the required safety checklist. We thank them in advance for their cooperation.

Council Hearing June 16 On Lowe's Permit Request

The City Council will hold a public hearing Monday at 6:30 p.m. in council chambers of City Hall on a proposal for a Special Permit allowing a Lowe's Home Center in West Quincy.

The applicant proposes to demolish a number of commercial and residential buildings and construct a retail center of over 126,000 square feet with a garden center of nearly 28,000 square feet and parking for 435 vehicles.

Lowe's Center will be located on approximately 14 acres at 410-412 Centre St., and at 103-127, 81-101 and 36-42 Penn St. and at 18-24, 36-42, 62, 70, 74 and 78 Columbia St. Various other adjacent lots on Plain and Mitchell Streets and, in the area, will be used for the project.

A copy of the plans may be examined at the Department of Planning and Community Development, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

7 Things You Must Know Before Putting Your Home Up For Sale

Quincy - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. Most homesellers don't get what they want for their home.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that will cost them literally thousands of dollars.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar."

The Garden Bug

Orchids like shade

The luscious colors, striking shapes and velvety texture of the orchid are very popular all through the growing season. Mist the soil often, and feed with a specialized fertilizer every other week. Hang at eye level under the branches of a leafy tree. Some pests to watch out for are aphids, mites and slugs.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cheer up, Lamb. Your emotional impasse will lift once you allow your highly tuned sense of justice to guide you on what to do about an associate's questionable behavior.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) News about a project you hoped to work on might need more clarification. Take nothing just on faith. Draw up a list of questions, and insist on each being fully answered.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Giving your time to help others is fine. But don't lose sight of your own needs. Make plans for an energy-restoring getaway with that very special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulate yourself on getting that difficult job done to everyone's satisfaction. This could be the first of many such challenges you might be offered down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With your enthusiasm soaring again, you feel ready to tackle a tough new assignment. Good for you! And remember: Don't be too proud to accept help when it's offered.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Cupid rules the week for single Virgos eager to make a romantic connection. Meanwhile, Virgo couples experience renewed commitment in their relationships.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Home and work issues vie for your attention through early next week. Rely on your Libran sense of balance to keep you from being overwhelmed by either side.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creative projects might have to go on standby as you tackle other matters making demands on your time and energy. Things should ease by the middle of next week.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your energies are high, and so are your aspirations. But be careful not to let work dominate the week. It's also important to spend time with family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good time to set aside your pride and stop nursing those hurt feelings. Instead, consider restoring relationships you want to have back in your life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might be miffed at not being shown more appreciation for your hard work. But don't brood over it. Recognition comes in its own time and in its own way.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With your inner creative juices starting to boil and bubble, this is a good time to launch a new arts-related project, or go back and restart the one you had set aside.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of seeing the best in people, which helps encourage them to live up to your perceptions.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Strength Training or Cardio?

Q. My usual workout at the gym has me doing strength training on the machines first, then my cardio routine. I start with the machines because I like them the least, and I want to get them done and out of the way. My friend said that I should start with cardio, and then do my weights. Which one of us is right?

A. Actually, both you and your friend are partly correct.

Which to do first, strength training or cardio, is a very common question with varying answers. The start of any workout should consist of your preparing your body for what is about to happen. This is usually achieved through some form of warm-up exercise that will increase your heart rate, move blood throughout your body and warm up your body and muscles.

During strength training, you are asking your muscles to stretch, contract and move through the range of motion of each exercise. In order to do this effectively, you need to complete a warm up prior to exercising. A warm up could consist of five to 10 minutes of activity at a moderate intensity. Remember, the goal is to prepare your body for the exercises to come. This preparation could include walking on the treadmill, riding the bicycle or a dynamic warm up, which is a series of total body movements such as wood chops or agility drills that warm up your whole body. A warm-up routine also will begin to activate the muscles that are about to be worked while strength training.

After your warm up is complete, you may choose to complete your strength training routine followed by your cardiovascular routine. There is nothing wrong with completing your strength training first, AFTER you have warmed up.

What may determine if you want to complete cardiovascular or strength training first may be the intensity of the routine and if you are able to complete the entire routine. For example, if you are exhausted after strength training and therefore either do not complete your cardiovascular workout or complete it but not to the best of your ability, you may consider completing your cardiovascular workout first, then doing your strength workout.

The goal is to finish your workout with the intensity with which it was designed to be completed. You can figure out the best way to do this through a little trial and error. Try your workout both ways and see which one gives you the better result.

Remember to warm up first, and if you still want to knock out your least favorite workout first, go for it. Just remember to save enough energy to complete the remainder of your workout.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475

Sun Protection Misconceptions

Shining A Light On Sunscreen

Despite the flood of sun-protection information that is released each summer, many consumers still don't know as much as they should when it comes to choosing a sunscreen.

While sunscreen may already be a beach bag necessity, certain sunscreen technologies and ingredients will provide superior protection from the sun's harmful rays, so it's important to know what to look for when reading the label.

Sunlight contains the visible light we can see and ultraviolet (UV) rays that we cannot. UVB rays are responsible for sunburns as well as certain kinds of skin cancers, while UVA rays penetrate deep into the skin and are associated with wrinkling, leathery, sagging and the development of dark spots.

UVA can enhance the carcinogenic effects of UVB rays-the light penetrates windows and clouds and leaves no visible signature on your skin. Most consumers don't know that the SPF rating on the sunscreen bottle only pertains to UVB. That's why dermatologists say to look for a sunscreen label that specifically includes UVA protection. The FDA, however, is now working on new packaging regulations intended to help make labeling clearer.

Also, according to the FDA, sunscreens are neither perspiration- or waterproof. Sunscreens can be washed or worn off as a consequence of swimming or sweating, so consumers are advised to look for products that are water-resistant or sweat resistant-FDA approved terms.

Another common misconception is that you can apply sunscreen once and be protected all day. "Ordinary UVA sunscreen chemicals break down as soon as they are exposed to light and become practically ineffective in about one hour," says Dr. Jeffrey

Dover. "It's not just full-spectrum coverage we need to be concerned with; the key is finding a product with UVB and UVA protection, but also one that lasts longer." Recently, new technologies including Dermaplex have been created to help keep the key sun-protection ingredients stable so they won't break down for hours and therefore don't need to be reapplied as often.

Sunscreens like the new Continuous Spray SPF 45 from Skin Effects by Dr.

Jeffrey Dover use Dermaplex technology so it won't break down after sun exposure for up to five hours, allowing for full-spectrum UVA/UVB protection. Plus, it holds up against sweat and water, is hypoallergenic, sprays on easily and is recommended by the Skin Cancer Foundation.

Most important, sunscreens have an expiration date. Dermatologists recommend buying a new bottle every six months.

Vision Protection Helps Kids Avoid Eye Injuries

Each year in the U.S., more than 100,000 sports-related eye injuries occur. Children under the age of 15 account for 43 percent of these injuries, most of which are preventable by using the right protective eyewear.

Children participating in any activity that uses a ball or racket, involves rough contact with other players or requires travel at high speed-whether on a school team, in physical education class or even just playing with friends-should wear protective eyewear.

An eye doctor can help you identify specific eyewear to protect your child from unnecessary eye injuries. The Vision Council recommends that parents look for safety glasses, goggles, safety shields and eye guards with:

- Polycarbonate lenses, a type of clear plastic that is impact resistant;
- 100 percent ultraviolet (UV) protection and a scratch-resistant coating;
- Padded or rubber bridges for comfort;
- Deep-grooved eyewires to keep the lenses from falling out if the frame is hit hard;
- A face-formed shape to provide a wider field of view;
- Headband attachments to keep the frames from slipping.

Osteoporosis, Stroke Screening Here June 20

Life Life Screening will conduct a stroke and osteoporosis screening Friday, June 20 at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex, 1 Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

Appointments will begin at 9 a.m. Pre-registration is required.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WATER UNDER THE BRIDGE

One of the keys to maintaining good oral health involves removing daily accumulation of plaque, the sticky, bacteria-laden layer of film that coats teeth. This entails not only brushing teeth regularly, but flossing between teeth to get to the places where the toothbrush cannot reach. Under normal circumstances, flossing does an adequate job of scraping away plaque and accumulations of food that collect between teeth. However, patients who have bridge work may find it difficult to get the floss directly into the crevices where it needs to go. For this reason, dentists often recommend that patients with crowns, bridges, and implants use a dental water jet oral irrigator to effectively clean hard-to-reach areas with a concentrated stream of water.

We can take care of all your dental needs. Our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you can enjoy dentistry in an up-to-date setting with the latest techniques and materials. We believe comprehensive and preventive dental care provided in a gentle manner can enrich and improve your overall health, lengthen your quality of life and enhance your lifestyle. For family oriented dental care, please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Dental water jet oral irrigators stimulate the gums and make them less likely to bleed and become inflamed.

Free State Park Parking Pass Available at Recreation Office

The Quincy Recreation Department, in cooperation with the DCR of Massachusetts, announces that there are free parking passes available for Quincy residents to borrow when visiting any number of the state parks this summer.

According to Director of Recreation Barry Welch, this pilot program, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Recreation and Park Association, will allow free parking at over 50 facilities in the Massachusetts State Park system that charge a day-use parking fee.

"We think this is a wonderful opportunity for Quincy families who may wish to take in a day for free at over 50 participating parks, forests or beaches in times of tight family budgets."

The Recreation Department also has copies of a guide to swimming, camping, biking and hiking in Massachusetts. This pass will be available on a first come first serve basis and must be picked up and returned to the Quincy Recreation Department office at One Merrymount Parkway. To ensure maximum use by many families, there will be guidelines established for repeat requests.

For additional information contact the QRD at 617-376-1394 or visit massparks.org.

QMC Golf Classic Raises $146,600 For Safety Program

Last week a full field of golfers took part in Quincy Medical Center's 19th annual Golf Classic at Granite Links Golf Club. The tournament raised $146,600, nearly $18,000 more than last year's event, to support the hospital's Medication Safety Program, an ongoing performance improvement initiative directed at enhancing patient care.

"It has been a great pleasure working on this tournament to support such an important program at Quincy Medical Center," said Chairman of South Shore Savings Bank Arthur Connelly, who served as QMC Golf Classic Committee Chairman for the past two years and co-chair for the previous two years. "We are thankful to all of the players and sponsors who made this the most successful event in the tournament's history."

Contributions from business and community leaders throughout the South Shore, including presenting sponsor Mintz Levin, reception sponsor South Shore Savings Bank, an host sponsor Granite Links Golf Club, have made this one of the hospital's leading fundraising events. The winning teams included Anesthesia Associates, Inc., first place; Sodexo Healthcare Services, second place; and LVI Environmental, third place.

Fees are $40 for one youth, and an additional $20 for the second child and an additional $20 for the third child. Fees for one adult are $30 for two lessons and $5 for each additional lesson. The Family Membership fee is $75.

OBITUARIES

Joseph Salvatore, 87

Mechanical Contractor

Funeral services for Joseph Salvatore, 87, of Quincy, a retired mechanical contractor, were held June 7 at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mr. Salvatore died June 4 at home.

Born and raised in Quincy, he attended Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School. He was a lifelong Quincy resident.

Mr. Salvatore was a self-employed mechanical contractor for many years. He recently retired.

Prior to and at the beginning of World War II, Mr. Salvatore began his career at the former Fore River Shipyard in Quincy. He worked for the Bethlehem Steel Company on the heavy cruiser USS Saint Paul and participated in her sea trials.

He was drafted into the U.S. Navy and ironically, after his military training, Mr. Salvatore was ordered to report to Norfolk, VA where he was assigned to serve on the USS Saint Paul, the last ship he had worked on at the Fore River Shipyard.

He was a motor machinist mate second class and served with the Saint Paul in the Asiatic Pacific Theater.

After the war, Mr. Salvatore returned to the shipyard before joining the Arthur D. Little Company for several years, where he was assigned to help build a trailer which housed cryovac, a low temperature helium refrigerator that would cool matter down to almost absolute zero. After the government cancelled the trailer project, he worked for two mechanical contracting firms before becoming a co-owner of his own mechanical contracting firm.

Mr. Salvatore was an avid golfer and was a former member of the Pembroke Country Club for more than 20 years. He was a member of the Rockland Golf Course the past five years.

Husband of 64 years of Lucy T. (Svizzero) Salvatore, he was the father of Richard A. Salvatore and his wife Kathy of Quincy, Janet E. McKeen and her late husband Richard of Rockland, John J. Salvatore and his fiancée Lisa of Quincy.

He is also survived by a brother, Albert Salvatore of Weymouth and six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

He was the brother of the late Ida McEvoy.

Interment was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Dr., Braintree, MA 02184.

Ann M. Connolly, 91

Retired Jordan Marsh Employee

A funeral Mass for Ann M. (Zablosky) Connolly, 91, of Quincy, was celebrated June 4 in Saint Joseph's Church, 550 Washington St., Quincy.

Mrs. Connolly died May 31 in Kingston at the home of her daughter, after a brief illness.

Born in Lynn and raised in Quincy, she attended Quincy schools and was a graduate of Quincy High School. She had lived in Quincy most of her life.

Mrs. Connolly was a former employee of the Jordan Marsh Company. She retired many years ago.

She enjoyed and was devoted to her family.

She was the mother of Sister Ann Theresa Connolly, C.D.P. of Kingston, Theresa M. Brennan and her husband Kevin of Cumberland, R.I., and the late Patricia L. "Pat" DiGiusto and her husband Robert of Quincy.

ANN M. CONNOLLY

She is also survived by a sister, Helen Harrison of California, and five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Interment was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Cranberry Hospice, 36 Cordage Park Cir., Plymouth, MA 02360.

Maurice F. Erhardt

Union Painter

A funeral Mass for Maurice F. Erhardt of Whitman, formerly of Quincy, a union painter, was celebrated Monday at Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Mr. Erhardt died June 4 at the Signature Healthcare Brockton Hospital.

Born and raised in Boston, he was a graduate of Dorchester High School. He had lived in Quincy for 21 years before moving to Whitman four years ago.

Mr. Erhardt was a Union Painter of Local #939 for 41 years. He retired in 2002.

He was a Navy veteran of the Korean War and a late member of the Whitman VFW Post #697.

Husband of the late Catherine M. (Higgins), he is survived by his daughters: Kathryn M. Race of Whitman, Donna M. Manning and Sharon E. Erhardt, both of Quincy, Janet A. Vaughn of Wollaston; his sisters: Jean Lorimer of Stoughton, Ellen Fournier of Florida; and 11 grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and a special niece, Anne Marie Kirk of Taunton.

Mr. Erhardt was predeceased in death by his son, Joseph M. Erhardt and two sisters, Anne Dobbins and Eileen Sullivan.

Interment was in Mount Benedict Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, 326 Granite Ave., Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Chester M. Aniolowski, 64

Retired Quincy Firefighter

A funeral Mass for Chester M. "Tyke" Aniolowski, 64, of Quincy, a retired Quincy firefighter, was celebrated June 6 in Saint John the Baptist Church, 44 School St., Quincy.

Mr. Aniolowski died suddenly June 2 in the Village of Grand Lake Stream, Maine, while on a fly fishing trip.

Born and raised in Quincy, he was a lifelong resident of the city. He was educated in Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School in 1963.

Mr. Aniolowski was appointed to the Quincy Fire Department on May 2, 1970. He retired July 27, 2002 after 32 years of service.

At the time of his retirement, he served on Engine 6 in the Houghs Neck section of Quincy.

He was a member of the Firefighters' Local 792.

After retirement, he was a part-time driver for Active Day in Hingham.

Mr. Aniolowski was a U.S. Marine Corps veteran of the Vietnam War.

He was an avid fly fisherman and enjoyed sports, especially the Boston Red Sox and the New England Patriots.

He was the husband for 28 years of Evelyn M. (Kibbee)

CHESTER M. ANIOLOWSKI

He spent more than 40 years at the First National Bank of Boston and played a pioneering role in electronic banking. He was also a volunteer mentor.

He is survived by many loving family members, including his wife, Maureen (Fallon) Baron, four children and nine grandchildren. His memorial page is at www.mem.com.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Did you ever wonder where, when, and by whom Father's Day was initiated? In 1910, Mrs. John Dodd started the custom in Spokane, Washington. A quarter of a century later, in 1936, a national Father's Day Committee was formed with headquarters in New York.

Through the years Father's Day has come to be a gracious part of American folk-life. . . There are some who feel this observance is primarily a commercial promotion . . . ringing up sales for the time-honored tie, shirt or pajamas, plus a sentimental card. Perhaps it is true in certain cases. . . But it can be more than this. Indeed, it can be and is a form of satisfaction to the man who is a father and has earned the title.

Moreover, on this occasion, the title of father carries a connotation of respect and reverence. It is a day to observe the commandment "Honor thy father and they mother" in a special way.

And so, on this special day to all those special, special fathers, we salute you. We wish you a happy, pleasant day. . . You deserve "Your Day" . . .

Milton I. Feinberg, 89

Self-Employed Photographer

A Celebration of Life for Milton I. Feinberg, 89, of Quincy, a self-employed photographer and Army veteran of World War II, was conducted Wednesday at 7 p.m. with champagne and chocolate at the Dance Forever, 519 Washington St., Braintree.

Relatives and friends were invited to attend and share a memory, a thought, a poem or a song.

Mr. Feinberg died May 30 at the Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Born and raised in Boston, he was educated in Boston schools and was a graduate of Roxbury Latin and also Northeastern University.

Mr. Feinberg served in the U.S. Army during World War II as a First Lieutenant.

He had lived in Brighton for 53 years and in Quincy for four years.

Mr. Feinberg was a self-employed photographer. He combined his love of photography and music by photographing The Boston Symphony Orchestra for many years.

His photos were included in books and articles about the Symphony. He wrote a book Techniques of Photojournalism incorporating many new ideas of using available light in photography.

Mr. Feinberg enjoyed sailing and cruising in his boat, The Lady Barbara, and spent every summer in Hull. He was a founding member of the Tender Tappers, a senior tap group at Dance Forever where he performed in many concerts for the past 22 years, until the age of 88.

MILTON I. FEINBERG

Mr. Feinberg volunteered at the Museum of Science in the Eye-Openers Program where he had over 7,000 hours of volunteer service. He developed a program on the Properties of Water based on Bubbles, earning himself the name of "Dr. Bubbles." He took his program to many elementary schools and senior centers in the area.

Quincy's Bai Lan Zhu Participates In Air Force Space 'Guardian Challenge'

By PHYLLIS HANSON
PETERSON AFB, Colo. - When we swipe our ATM card for cash, pay at the pump to fill up, flip through dozens of high definition channels or order a pizza online, we probably don't realize how the daughter of a Quincy couple helps to make it all happen.

Air Force Capt. Bai Lan Zhu, daughter of Kwong Chu and Danna Li, E. Elm Ave., Quincy, was one of nearly 200 airmen from throughout the Air Force Space Command who gathered at this space base at the foothills of the Rockies to determine the 'best of the best' within the command responsible for the satellite, missile and communications technology that gives us much of the high-tech amenities we use in our everyday lives.

The Air Force Space Command competition, "Guardian Challenge," put Zhu, along with other airmen in space operations, missile deterrence, space launch, weapon systems and security forces, through "end-of-the-world" scenarios, both natural and man-made. Their goal was to keep defense technology going despite the threats.

"Space Command missions don't have room for redo," said Zhu. "You have to get it right the first time or strategic objectives will be compromised," she said. "Guardian Challenge pushes the space warriors to their full potential, ensuring our capability to deliver our payloads at the right place every time," said Zhu.

To get here, Space Command airmen and their teams spent countless hours poring over technical manuals and dissecting 'end-of-the-world' scenarios, developing and perfecting ways to keep their assets safe.

"My trainers did the bulk of the work preparing scripts and training scenarios for Guardian Challenge," said Zhu. "We collaborated on lessons learned and what-if questions during multiple training rides."

As the Deputy Chief, Zhu oversees processing, testing and launching of the Atlas V launch vehicle at the launch site on Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, Fla.

"I follow the contractors through each step of hardware stacking, providing mission assurance risk assessments to launch base leadership," said Zhu, a 1998 graduate of North Quincy High School. She earned a bachelor's degree in 2002 from Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Massachusetts.

"On the day of a launch, I hold the console position of deputy Atlas lead and support anomaly resolution as well as provide space situational awareness to the Air Force launch director," said Zhu.

"I've been in the Air Force for nearly six years," said Zhu. "My first assignment was at Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass., where I spent two years as an avionics engineer for Joint STARS and one year as a systems engineer for the upgraded Early Warning Radar," she said.

"The latter position opened the door for me to work at Cape Canaveral. I've been in the rocket business for nearly three years now and I'm loving it," said Zhu.

While Zhu and her fellow Space Command airmen are rarely seen outside of their often remote communications and missile bases around the world, many of their efforts are felt each time we turn on the TV or pull up to the pump.

United First Parish Church Attends GBIO Annivesary Action

Thirteen members of United First Parish Church (Unitarian) in Quincy recently joined with more than 1,700 people from more than 60 congregations to celebrate the 10 Year Anniversary Action of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO) at the Boston University gymnasium.

GBIO leaders announced that this was the largest gathering of Christians, Jews, and Muslims in Greater Boston since the events following September 11, 2001.

Much of the evening was a celebration of GBIO's major achievements. United First Parish Church, the historic church in Quincy Center, was a founding member of GBIO in 1998. Over the ten years, the Church has worked with the other GBIO congregations to win important victories in expanding funding for affordable housing, improving working conditions for nursing home caregivers, helping people get out of debt, and passing the recent health insurance reform legislation.

In Quincy, United First Parish Church members took a leadership role with GBIO and local housing advocates to achieve passage of Quincy's inclusionary zoning ordinance in 2001, which requires developers to set aside ten percent of new units as affordable to people with below median incomes.

Rev. Hurman Hamilton, of Roxbury Presbyterian Church and GBIO President, looked ahead to the future work of GBIO. He said that a major priority will be to ensure adequate funding of the new Massachusetts health insurance reform and persuading the remaining 30 percent of employers, including several large, well-known retailers, fast food chains, and colleges, to provide health insurance for all their employees.

Other GBIO initiatives will be to reduce youth violence and improve the state's website and phone information system for elder care services.

Governor Deval Patrick, House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi, Boston Mayor Menino, and business leader Jack Connors participated in Tuesday's event and pledged their support of GBIO initiatives. Governor Patrick commended GBIO for its leadership in achieving health care reform.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister of United First Parish Church, says, "It was inspiring to celebrate how much we have accomplished through GBIO. We are building the 'Beloved Community' with people of faith."

11 Graduate From Drug Court

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Eleven graduates of the Drug Court program were applauded last Thursday at the Quincy District Court by family, friends, program directors and public officials.

Probation officer Jo Rothman welcomed more than 200 supporters of this program, established in March 2001 to provide intensive substance abuse treatment, under judicial supervision, to persons on probation.

The crowd was also greeted by Mayor Thomas Koch and by the presiding judge for the program, Mark S. Coven. Guest speakers included Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

Kristen Serafini, a 2006 graduate of Drug Court spoke of her substance abuse, which began when she was 13 years old. She stressed the importance of changing one's behavior in order to avoid drug use, and spoke proudly of becoming a counselor since graduating, and of her work at a methadone clinic.

She said, "Sometimes you look at people and think you want what they have...then you must work for it! Now I'm trying to help someone else who needs support."

Massachusetts Public Health Commissioner John Auerbach, warned of the use of heroin and oxycodon amongst youngsters in the state and said that years ago most users were in their mid 30's, but that now teens are experimenting with these drugs.

Auerbach stressed the importance of involving the general community in fighting substance abuse and said, "Parents, schools, churches, all need to work on underage drinking, too-the drug of choice with teens."

He noted that Drug Court has proven to be a cost-effective program. Providing probationers with detox sessions, residential treatment, and/or outpatient care can save as much as half the estimated $43,000 expense of incarcerating an offender.

Substance abuse has contributed to a rise in criminal offenses, domestic violence, HIV, hepatitis, auto accidents, and even heart disease and cancer, since the behavior related to substance abuse ignores good health habits, Auerbach said.

Awards of appreciation were presented to Patricia O'Hagan, who runs a halfway house for Recovery

Home Collaborative, one of many in the metro-Boston area and to Judge Coven and Judge Mary Hogan-Sullivan for their support of this program.

Graduate Mary Ann Burke, who spent seven months in a halfway house and five months in a sober house praised the program, while acknowledging the difficulty of its intensity. Burke, who said she "lost everything" due to her substance abuse, thanked the Quincy Court and the program for their encouragement in her fight to become clean and sober.

Aisling Sutton, a recent mother, commended the Drug Court, saying, "I probably wouldn't have had a drug-free baby if it weren't for Drug Court."

Judge Diane Moriarty, who presented the diplomas and special awards of appreciation, honored all of the graduates of the program, expressing her sincere respect for their commitment to Drug Court and to turning their lives around.

Dedicated to reducing the devastating effect of drug distribution in the community, this commencement honored its fifth group of proud graduates.

JUDGE DIANE MORIARTY and Patricia O'Hagan, director of one of Drug Court's halfway houses, accepting an award in recognition of her commitment to the program.

Reform Cited For Keeping Rate Hike At 9 Percent

Smaller Increases In Water, Sewer Bills

Water and sewer rate increases for the upcoming fiscal year will be substantially lower than originally projected thanks to the first phase of a major overhaul of the Water and Sewer Department's operations, the Department of Public Works announced Tuesday.

DPW Business Manager Michael Coffey, who is coordinating water and sewer reform, said water bills for the average ratepayer will increase about $25 per quarter under new rates set by the DPW that will take effect July 1. Those figures, about a 9 percent total increase, are based on the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority's formula that the average resident uses 120 HCF (cubic feet) of water per year.

"These rates reflect the first major step toward fixing a broken system," Coffey said. "Yes, rates are increasing, but had we allowed the status quo to continue, we would have been talking about rates increasing between 20 and 25 percent."

The largest portion of water and sewer bills pays for charges to the city from the MWRA.

Shortly after Mayor Thomas Koch took office, he requested the DPW launch a major investigation into long-standing problems in the Water and Sewer Department. The probe quickly discovered billing problems, properties without water meters, financial problems, revenue projections that would have never met collection requirements, and a series of other issues.

The Water and Sewer Enterprise Fund faces a $3.8 million deficit in the current year because of these problems, Coffey said.

The city has since embarked on a program to increase collections, which have increased the billing collection rate from 80 percent to 90 percent in the last few months. Large commercial users without water meters for years have been discovered and are now paying water bills, the department is continuing to track down potential water scofflaws, and the city is working on legislation that will beef up oversight of the city's water and sewer collections.

The new rates also reflect "a fully accurate" picture of what are called indirect costs, money that is charged

Council Orders CORI Checks On QHS Construction Workers

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Some 100 union supporters applauded Monday as City Councillors unanimously approved a resolution requiring a criminal history review or CORI check of all persons employed on the new Quincy High School construction site.

Council President Jay Davis introduced the motion which requires that the first review of all workers' criminal history be completed by June 23 with a report to the City Council no later than June 25.

"My intention is to catch up with anybody breaking the law," said Davis after the meeting.

Local union leaders and members had picketed City Hall prior to the council meeting with signs calling for "Local Jobs for Local People," and "Enforce the Law."

The union supporters favored the CORI checks as one way to weed out illegal workers on the job.

Their fliers stated, "Quincy workers need jobs and our tax dollars for Quincy High School construction is one way to get those jobs. Make all contractors obey the law. That includes CORI-checking...."

At Davis' request, Bobby Haynes, Executive Vice President and Regional Director of the AFL-CIO, and Robert Rizzi of the bricklayers union, Norfolk County, addressed the council in support of the motion.

"The CORI check is pretty significant," Haynes said, citing the proximity of the site to vulnerable people and noting the review can eliminate dangerous individuals.

Haynes got sustained applause when he asked the Council Approves $230M Budget On 6-3 Vote

City Council Monday voted 6-3 to approve a $230,850,072 budget for 2009. There was no debate on the budget at this week's meeting.

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan and Councillors Joseph Finn and

Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2, opposed the total budget. The opponents had sought deeper cuts in the mayor's budget.

Prior to the vote, James Fatsas, chief of staff for Mayor Thomas Koch, introduced Jim Powers, of Powers and Sullivan auditing. Powers whose firm will conduct an independent audit of the city's finances said the audit will take several months at a minimum and there will be no formal interim reports.

Public Hearing On Lowe's Draws Few Objections

Plans for a Lowe's Home Improvement Center won praise and few objections Monday during a public hearing called by the City Council, acting as the Special Permit Granting Authority.

City Council President Jay Davis, a proponent of the plan, recessed the meeting and will review discussion in September. There were no votes on the plans.

Members reviewed plans for the 16-acre project with Robert Fleming, Jr., attorney for Lowe's, and company representatives.

"The Quincy market is one that we've wanted to get involved in," said Larry LaPierre, Site Development Manager for Lowe's which has 1500 outlets in operation.

"We try to hire as many local people to work in the store as we can," LaPierre pledged after noting the company is "very committed to working with neighbors.

Fleming promised there would be "no change in the flow of the brook (Town Brook)" and suggested that the "water quality will improve."

One resident, Richard Joyce of Wollaston, questioned plans for the brook and the likelihood the development will affect the smelt breeding. Another the effects of closing off roadways on local residents.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, also, reminded Lowe's representatives that the city has a tree protection ordinance and asked that they consider the requirement for trees in their plans for a parking lot.

"We do intend to have something signed," said Davis, referring to the guarantee of union labor for the project's construction and retail needs.

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick Leaving For County Post

City councillors gave Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick a standing ovation Monday at his last meeting as city auditor.

Fitzpatrick recently accepted a position with the Norfolk County Agricultural School, Walpole, which begins in August. He said he expects to wind up his duties with the city in mid-July.

Each one of the nine councillors praised Fitzpatrick's integrity, work ethic, and professionalism before they wished him success in his new job.

Members did not discuss possible candidates for the opening. The City Council will appoint his successor. The auditor reports directly to the council.

"It's a different challenge for me," Fitzpatrick said of his new position, but added, "I loved it here. I'm going to miss walking to work."

Fitzpatrick said it has been a "personal privilege" to be city auditor but the extra long work hours may not be missed. "Those hours will be shared with my family now."

For the past 10 years, Fitzpatrick has worked in the city's auditing office, first as assistant auditor beginning 1999. He was then appointed city auditor in November, 2002.

CITY AUDITOR RICK FITZPATRICK

Fitzpatrick will be rejoining his predecessor and his former boss, City Councillor Michael McFarland, former city auditor, who is now headmaster at the school.

McFarland called Fitzpatrick the "utmost professional" and noted that he'd served under three mayors, beginning with Mayor James Sheets.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said Fitzpatrick's always, "a gentleman, no matter what stress he's under," while Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly said it had been a privilege to work with him and called him "The Tenth City Councillor."

Several of the other councillors, such as John Keenan and Joseph Finn described Fitzpatrick's weekend and late night work. Finn said that that late at night, "Every other light in City Hall (would be) out except in the Auditor's office."

"I've seen the lights on when I've been here," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who praised Fitzpatrick's integrity.

Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he'd often e-mail an inquiry on a Saturday or Sunday expecting a reply on the next weekday.

Instead, Keenan said, Fitzpatrick would be "at the office on a Sunday afternoon doing the people's business. Here's a man of integrity. The public can be sure they got true value from his services."

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro called Fitzpatrick "professional, objective and honest with a level of integrity all of us should aspire to."

"I can't say enough," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, adding, "Hopefully, someday, you'll come back."

Council President Jay Davis wished him well, "You'll always be a Quincy guy."

Paint Peeling, Gutters Rotting

Central Fire Station Will Get Long Overdue Repairs

Quincy Central Headquarters will get a long overdue facelift under a plan supported by Mayor Thomas Koch and developed by the City Council's Fire Study Committee.

"Its appearance is sorely lacking," Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, chairman of the committee, said of fire department headquarters at 26 Quincy Ave. where peeling paint and rotted gutters are visible from the street.

Coughlin, chairman of the Public Safety Committee, serves with Deputy Chief Gary Smyth on the Fire Study Committee, appointed in 2005.

Smyth recently presented the committee's report to the Public Safety Committee, outlining numerous improvements in the department and at the city's eight station houses where asbestos and mold has been or will be eliminated and air quality systems improved.

Firefighters are well-prepared and well-equipped,

PAINT PEELS OFF the cupola on the rooftop of Central Fire Station

according to Smyth who praised Captain Daniel Gorman for his training program, cited the five new fire engines purchased in recent years and the equipment provided through grants to the department.

"We are absolutely ready to face the challenge of a high-rise fire," said Smyth in response to a councillor's question regarding the city's new zoning which allows 15-story buildings. Mutual aid pacts with surrounding department also aid the city's readiness, he said.

However, the department eight fire stations still need attention, such as roofs, gutters and paint, and headquarters needs immediate work, according to the committee report.

"There's a lot of work needed on the facade," said Coughlin, calling headquarters, "...one of the gems of the city. It's an historic building in many ways."

Central Fire Station, built in 1938, is listed in The National Register as a local landmark. Architect George Robinson designed the building constructed of brick and granite.

"I don't think the exterior's been painted since I've been on the job," said Smyth who joined the department in 1987 and described "years of neglect."

"People come in there every day and make comments," said Smyth who cited such problems as a "gaping hole in the ceiling. As a city, we want to have pride in that building."

The committee's first priority will be to "seal up the shell," according to Smyth. "We want to get the building weather tight." That should prevent more damage such as the "big hole right in the hallway (from) years of water."

Under the Honeywell Energy project, a new roof was installed at headquarters this year, but other stations, also, need roofs.

"These men live in the firehouses," said Smyth. "It's no different than a home."

"Some of the conditions that I've seen have been abysmal," said Coughlin of previous conditions. He described seeing mold in "shower stalls that gave me the heebie jeebies."

During his report to the committee, Smyth described some of the equipment purchased by the department through grants.

According to Smyth, the department has received three major grants totaling nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in the past five years.

"There is a great deal of time and effort put forth by members of this department to apply for these federal and state grants," said Smyth who noted the awards enhance and protect firefighters and, also, save the city money.

Committee members include Chris Walker, Koch's Policy Director, Firefighters Ernie Arienti, President of the firefighters' union, and Thomas Bowes, Secretary

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 16, 1884, the first roller coaster in America opens at Coney Island in New York. Known as a switchback railway, it traveled approximately 6 mph and cost a nickel to ride. The roller coaster was paid for in three weeks.

• On June 22, 1937, in Chicago's Comiskey Park, Joe Louis wins the world heavyweight boxing title when he defeats Jim Braddock in an eighth-round knockout. Louis was the first black heavyweight champ since Jack Johnson, who lost the title in 1915.

• On June 19, 1953, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted of conspiring to pass U.S. atomic secrets to the Soviets, are executed at Sing Sing Prison in New York. Both refused to admit any wrongdoing and proclaimed their innocence right up to the time of their deaths.

• On June 21, 1964, three young civil-rights workers working to register black voters are killed by a Ku Klux Klan lynch mob near Meridian, Miss. Deputy sheriff Cecil Price, who was a Klan member, pulled them over for speeding, then held them in custody while other KKK members prepared for their murder.

• On June 20, 1975, "Jaws," a film directed by Steven Spielberg that made countless viewers afraid to go into the water, opens in theaters. The story of a great white shark that terrorizes a New England resort town was the highest-grossing film in movie history until it was bested by 1977's "Star Wars."

• On June 18, 1983, the space shuttle Challenger is launched into space from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on its second mission. Aboard the shuttle was Dr. Sally Ride, who, as a mission specialist, became the first American woman to travel into space.

• On June 17, 1994, after a dramatic flight from justice witnessed by millions on live television, former football star and actor O.J. Simpson surrenders to Los Angeles police, who charged him with the June 12 double-murder of his ex-wife and her friend. In the vehicle and on his person were discovered a gun, a mustache and goatee disguise, and his passport.

Born Before 1945

When were you born?
I know it's none of my business.

Really just trying to get your attention.

Actually this is about those born before 1945. And he many changes they have witnessed in their lifetime.

At a recent Round Table Discussion at the Beechwood Community Life Center seniors got to talking about those changes.

"They focused on those born before 1945 and were amazed at how things have changed in their lifetime," says Beechwood Executive Director Sharron Beals.

Such changes as in health, medicine, inventions, home appliances, gadgets, moral values, etc.

Some examples:

• They were born before the coming of television, polio vaccine, penicillin, contact lenses, frozen foods-and "The Pill."

• Before credit cards, laser beams, pantyhose, electric blankets, dishwashers, clothes dryers, air conditioners, drip-dry clothes, ballpoint pens.

BEALS

• Before men walked on the moon.
• They grew up to get married first and then live together.

• In their time, closets were for clothes and not for "coming out."

• They were before gay rights, computer dating, day-care centers, nursing homes, group therapy.

• Before artificial hearts, word processors, electric typewriters, FM radio, yogurt.

• Before men wore earrings.

• "Made in Japan" meant it was junk.

• "Making out" was how you did on a school exam.

• They arrived when there were 5 & 10-Cent stores where you could actually buy items for a nickel or a dime.

• And for a nickel or a dime you could get a good-sized ice cream cone.

• Hop on a streetcar for a nickel.

• And, for a nickel you could make a phone call, buy a Coke or Pepsi or enough stamps to mail a letter and two postcards.

• Grass was something to mow and pot was what your mother cooked in.

Happy Birthday.

Hebrew SeniorLife Honors Residents For Dedicated Service

Hebrew SeniorLife recently honored Quincy area residents for their years of dedicated service to the organization with a celebration that included dinner and a tour of Fenway Park.

Over 150 employees were acknowledged that evening ranging from 5 to 45 years of service.

Local residents are:

Ann D'Angelo of Social Services for 20 years; Maria McMillian of Simon C. Fireman Community and Gladys Vasquez of Orchard Cove each for five years of service.

"Employees are the foundation of this organization," said Valerie D'Orsi of Hebrew Senior Life's Human Resources Department.

"They are our greatest treasure! If it was not for our dedicated employees, we would not be able to accomplish all the wonderful things this organization has achieved over the years!"

Hebrew SeniorLife is recognized internationally as a leader in senior health care, housing and aging research. Through an integrated seven-site system, Hebrew SeniorLife provides long-term care; short-term, subacute care; research and teaching; adult day health; independent supportive senior housing; a continuing care retirement community; home health care; and services and programs for seniors in the community.

Ayers Seeks Feedback From Constituents

Rep. Bruce Ayers wants feedback on State House issues from all his constituents in the First Norfolk District.

In his recent mailing,

Ayers encouraged residents to complete and return a survey that outlines current issues before the state's House of Representatives.

The mailing, also, includes an update of current legislative issues.

"My constituents' input is important to me," Ayers said, explaining the purpose of the questionnaire. "This survey is a way to gather input on the various issues we are deliberating at the State House. It best helps me represent them on Beacon Hill."

WINFIELD HOUSE. 853 HANCOCK ST., QUINCY 69, MASS.

THIS IS A 1940's postcard view of the Queen Anne styled Winfield House Restaurant that was at 853 Hancock St. in Wollaston. Situated on nearly three acres of land, the house was built in the 1880's. It had been owned by a succession of prominent Quincy families when in 1937 Winfield and Lena Strout bought the property and moved their Rendezvous Cafe here from Wollaston Center. Widely known and very popular the restaurant had been open for 50 years when Mrs. Strout closed it in 1987. For a while she ran a gift shop here and finally the property was purchased by the Eastern Nazarene College. Expansion plans of the college at the time led to demolition of the Winfield House in the 1990's. The recent passing of Mrs. Strout closes the final chapter in the storied life of this Wollaston landmark. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Finn, Barry Oppose Safety Commission As 'Step Backward'

By FRANK McCAULEY

The chiefs of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments reacted in outspoken opposition to Mayor Joseph LaRaia's proposal for a three-member Public Safety Commission to supervise their operation.

Police Chief Francis X. Finn called the proposal a "step backward. It is an old hat that doesn't fit today. It smacks of a civilian review board over the Police Department which has been a disaster where it has been tried in this country."

Fire Chief Edward F. Barry called it "definitely not a step forward for the Fire Department." He launched a ringing defense of Quincy Firefighters.

RAYMONDI COMMENDS POLICE FOR SHIPYARD TOWING

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi commended the Quincy Police Department for "concerted efforts" to clear the streets and sidewalks of illegally parked vehicles in the area of the General Dynamics Shipyards.

Raymondi noted that one of his first acts as a city councillor was to re-introduce a towing ordinance that would empower the Police Department to remove illegally parked vehicles in certain tow zones.

Raymondi said an intensified effort the past week resulted in about 100 vehicles being removed from the streets and sidewalks in the shipyard area.

DUKAKIS TO SIGN NUT ISLAND BILL HERE

Governor Michael Dukakis was due in Quincy to sign into law a measure that would prevent the MDC from filling 26 acres of Quincy Bay in order to expand the Nut Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Thomas F. Brownell and amended by Senator Arthur H. Tobin.

"This is a great day for Quincy," said Tobin. "Particularly for residents who would have been most directly affected."

Quincy's Spiritual Community Gift Of Love Toward A Clean Energy Future

As people of faith, we are called in different ways to love our neighbors and to serve that, which is higher than ourselves, that which some name "God." What does this have to do with clean energy and electricity?

Though we don't often think about it, every time we use electricity we are polluting the earth or creation. The electricity that we use comes from power plants. Most of these power plants burn non-renewable fossil fuels such as coal, oil and gas.

These power plants cause a great deal of pollution and degradation of the earth. They also adversely impact the health and safety of those who live near them. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, power-plant pollution in Massachusetts can be linked to more than 300 premature deaths, 8,000 asthma attacks, 700 heart attacks, and 300 hospitalizations each year.

These polluting power plants are disproportionately located in low-income communities and communities of color. This is a phenomenon known as "environmental injustice." It means that low-income persons face the greatest health threat from our use of electricity.

Do we love our neighbors when our electricity use seriously affects the health of the poor who are the most likely to live near polluting power plants? Do we serve God when our use of electricity defiles our skies, water and land-all of creation? It is time for us to work toward healthier air and water for our neighbors. It is time for us to act as stewards of the earth. It is time for us to love all our neighbors. Let us start with this-It is time for the community of faith to support clean sources of energy.

One of the easiest and most effective ways to support clean sources of electricity-electricity produced by tapping into the power of the wind, sun and water-is to select clean energy suppliers on our electric bills. You can go to www.mipandl.org/cleanenergy.html ad select a Clean Energy supplier.

This is easy to do. For the typical residence, selecting clean energy sources costs $5 to $12 a month. This is less than it costs to go to a movie and buy popcorn, or about the same expense as buying a couple of lattes. It is certainly a small price to pay to love our neighbors and improve the environment.

This is a particularly good time to select clean electricity because of matching grant dollars from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative (MTC). For every dollar that a Quincy resident pays toward clean electricity, MTC will give up to one dollar to Quincy and up to one dollar to benefit low-income communities.

We ask that Quincy municipal officials act to support clean energy development and investments locally. This is an incredible opportunity for residents and municipal leaders to work together to green their community. What a terrific way to Do Well By Doing Good!

Massachusetts Interfaith Power & Light, a non-profit, faith-based ecological organization is partnering with Clean Water Action to encourage residents and the city of Quincy to purchase clean energy. We strongly support their efforts. To learn more about purchasing clean energy, visit www.MIPandL.org.

Choosing clean energy is putting faith into action. Encouraging the growth of clean, renewable electric sources and ending our dependence on dirty, fossil fuel-burning power plants-is one important step toward environmental justice and care of creation. It is an act of love and justice toward our neighbors and for our children. It is, in short, a moral decision and we call for an act of love. We pray that the Quincy communities of faith will lead the way.

Company French Toast

One of our favorite things to do is to either have or go to a brunch. There are so many different breakfast plus foods that can be served and such a vast choice. And brunch is one of the hardest things to prepare because of the variety of foods from bacon, ham and other delicious items.

So when our daughter Ann Marie made this company French toast that was so simple and can be made ahead of time and just placed in the oven the next day, I wanted to share it with all of you. She originally got the recipe from her friend Cathie. Anyway, it is so delicious and so easy, I hope you enjoy it as much as we did.

COMPANY FRENCH TOAST
12 slices white bread

1 stick butter (or margarine)
3/4 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
5 eggs
1 1/2 cups milk

Melt butter in 9 x 13 pan. Add the brown sugar and the cinnamon to the butter and blend well.

On top of that, place six slices of bread in the pan. Top with the other six slices.

In a separate bowl, mix the eggs and milk and pour this mixture evenly over the bread.

Cover and refrigerate over night. Bake in 325 degree oven for 25 minutes. Then bake in a 350 degree oven for five more minutes. This recipe serves six. I doubled the recipe and used two pans when I made it.

Historical Society To Screen JQ Adams' Courage June 25

Quincy's eight-week celebration of John Quincy Adams that began with the issuance of his one dollar coin is continuing with the screening of the "lost" television drama Profiles in Courage: John Quincy Adams.

It will be shown Thursday, June 25, at 6 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society in the Adams Academy Building, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center. Everyone is invited. Admission is free.

The film was first telecast in the 1960s as an episode in the award-winning historical drama series Profiles in Courage, based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning book by President John F. Kennedy.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

The film focuses on the moral and political crisis John Quincy Adams faced as a senator from Massachusetts in 1807 over British impressments of American sailors and attacks on American ships and the fateful decision that threatened to destroy his career.

The distinguished stage actor Douglas Campbell plays John Quincy Adams and noted English actor Laurence Naismith appears as John Adams. The film will be shown in theatre mode, projected on a screen.

Following the screening, Kelly Cobble, curator of the Adams National Historical Park, and Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, will lead a discussion of the film.

Quincy's eight week celebration of its native son who became the sixth president of the United States will culminate on July 11 with the 221st observance of Adams' birth.

It's 'Illumination Night' Time In Houghs Neck

One of the most popular community diversions of yesteryear in New England villages and towns at a time when life was simpler and enjoyment less expensive was Illumination Night, when neighbors competed to decorate their houses.

The Grand Illumination Night in Oak Bluffs on Martha's Vineyard is 130 years old and still going strong.

And Margaret Laforest, a fifth generation Necker, is well on her way to bringing back Illumination Night to Houghs Neck as it was in the early 1900s when folks decorated their homes with bunting and Japanese paper lanterns and vied for the title Best Decorated House in the Neck.

The idea came to Laforest, who is also president of the Houghs Neck

Community Council, when she discovered an old award ribbon won by her great grandmother on Illumination Night in 1908.

To enter the contest, Neckers — defined as those living between Pump and the Willows — are asked to decorate the outside of their houses and call Laforest at 617-471-1806 to register as a contestant. Judges will start visiting the houses Wednesday, July 2, at 9 p.m.

The winner will be given a banner to fly outside his or her home and assert bragging rights for 2008. The 2006 winner was the Kissels of Winthrop Street and the 2007 winner was the Timcoes of Rock Island Road.

Two Win Roles In Movie

Young Actors Learn Ropes As Sterling Stars

By LAURA GRIFFIN

If the Bay State's becoming Hollywood East, then the new actor's studio could very well be Sterling Middle School where youngsters are polishing their skills, writing skits, and performing roles from Shakespeare to Comedy Central.

Sterling is a magnet school for Quincy's Site-based Gifted Drama Program or STARS (Sterling's Talented Actors Ready for Success).

Some 65 middle school students are currently enrolled in the credit course which produces five cable shows and two major stage productions each year. They are graded for the course.

Each student auditions for acceptance and must maintain their grades in all other courses to remain, according to Debbie Ali who has directed the program since its inception 14 years ago.

"Their grades soar because they want to stay in it," Ali said of her students.

Already, two Sterling students have won parts as extras in the Hollywood production of "Bride Wars" starring Anne Hathaway and Kate Hudson. The movie recently filmed in South Boston will be released late this year.

Role-playing as students, Samantha Rizzi, 11, and Matthew Joyce, 12, laughed and giggled in one scene when their teacher appears in orange from top to toe. In another, they're busy making wedding cake decoration.

Matthew said he'd seen the rushes for "Bride Wars" and their few minutes of fame hadn't been cut, yet. He knows there's no guarantee.

The two Sterling students were among only 43 young actors chosen from a field of over 2000 applicants. For the pair, the acting gig nourished their dreams of stardom on the big screen, the little screen or the Manhattan stage.

This was Matthew's second role in a Hollywood production as he'd, also, played a quarterback for minutes in "Real Men Cry" with Mark Wahlberg and Amanda Peet.

They both said they'd learned a lot from watching the pros and the reality of an actual movie set. In addition, they both got paid for their long days. Samantha banked her paycheck while Matthew went to the mall.

"It's hard to be in the lights," Matthew said of the bright camera lights shining constantly in their face. As for the food, there was plenty to choose from but he couldn't find a hamburger or any heavy duty carbs.

"They wouldn't give us anything that would slow us down," said Matthew of the offerings which included veggie burgers, fruits and salads.

While both enjoyed their stint on the big screen, they learn more and tap many other talents in the STARS class where, along with their classmates, they're studying Shakespeare, public speaking, and writing.

Matthew described the STERLING SCHOOL'S STARS program teaches youngsters the fine points of acting, along with reading, writing and public speaking. Two students, Samantha Rizzi, 11, and Matthew Joyce, 12, were hired as extra's in a movie starring Kate Hudson and Anne Hathaway. "irony" of one scene written and performed by his class while Samantha has been cast as Bloody Mary, Queen of the Scots.

Samantha also, writes poetry as do several of her classmates like Lilana Romero and Lok Man Wong.

Several students described their learning experiences in STARS in both written and oral presentations.

"I've become so much more outgoing and I've made a lot of friends. Drama has been a great experience," said Kelsey Palmer.

Eleven-year-old Elio Dacy called the class "phenomenal" while Alex Alexandre, Jr. described it as "spectacular. I've learned to speak clearly."

Drama's been "the most outstanding class...because I love to speak out and I love to make poems and be myself," wrote Jouier Smith.

Vinny Petroni also enjoys public speaking. He wrote, "I'm no longer afraid to get up and speak in front of people. I have learned Shakespeare, poetry and I have learned to make my own skits."

Tayla Tervokoski, also, spoke of learning Shakespeare, then added, "We have written poems which has helped me in other classes."

"I'm a lot more creative with my speech and I've really improved my acting skills," wrote Christian Fuller.

The students' enthusiasm for Shakespeare, the stage, drama and writing is more than matched by the enthusiasm of their teacher, Ali.

Debbie Ali displayed her own flair for drama when she hit the stage after studying with the late Lee Strasberg. Among her favorite roles was a stint as Lizzie Borden, the infamous ax murderer. She, also, traveled with a production of "Man of La Mancha."

Today, though, few things excite Ali as much as the STARS program at Sterling which she says "enhances their reading skills, Language Arts and writing. Not too many students read, study, understand and perform Shakespeare at that age."

Christine Barrett, Sterling's Principal and Vice-Principal Richard Corey both praised the STARS program and Ali's leadership.

"We're very fortunate to have such a wonderful program," said Barrett. "It's incredible. They work so hard. They create, as well as memorize. It sells itself."

Ali has won statewide awards for her work including the All State Distinguished Educator of Theater Award and honors from the Massachusetts Alliance for Arts Education.

Just recently, Cardinal Sean O'Malley of the Archdiocese of Boston asked Ali to prepare a curriculum of the STARS program for use in Catholic schools.

Most important for Ali is the feedback from her graduates who report that they're far ahead of their classmates when they get to high school.

"They come back and tell me when they study MacBeth that they already know it," said Ali of her former STARS. "They're confident. They read out loud. Their writing excels."

Burke's Seafood

Summer is officially here and for many of us in New England, the warm weather triggers a craving for steamed lobster, fresh fish on the grill, shrimp cocktail, and overstuffed lobster rolls. In my family, the start of summer means long, hot, busy days at the shop for my parents, Dick and Margaret Burke, owners of Burke's Seafood in North Quincy.

My dad's day begins at 4:30am when he is one of the first to arrive at the Boston fish pier to buy the freshest and highest quality catch of the day. Back at the shop, he fillets the fish, packs the showcase and prepares for opening at 9am. From the moment the doors open, there is a steady stream of regular customers, most of whom my parents know by their first names. At lunch time, local residents and workers enjoy fried and broiled dinners at the store-front tables. In the late afternoon, the store bustles with regulars who stop in to select their fresh fish for dinner. Orders are phoned in for weekend party platters of shrimp cocktail and lobster meat. The lobster tank bubbles with activity, as the smell of fried clams tempt passersby. Throughout the day, my mom and dad chat with customers, sharing recipes and grilling tips, or recapping a recent Red Sox game. Their knowledge of seafood, their friendliness and service draw in customers. One taste of the delicious seafood keeps customers coming back for more, week after week.

Over the past 29 years, various local newspapers and magazines have highlighted Burke's Seafood as a successful mom-and-pop shop serving the freshest seafood on the South Shore. While browsing online recently, I discovered numerous user reviews of Burke's Seafood, praising it as "the freshest", "amazing", and "spectacular". While my parents are always interested to hear the reviews, their success comes from the day-to-day interactions and the pride they take in serving 2nd and 3rd generations of customers. What the reviews don't always capture is what I believe is distinctly unique about Burke's Seafood: my parents' dedication and hard work in creating a successful business while also preserving the authenticity of a local seafood shop. They focus relentlessly on quality, ensuring that they select the freshest seafood and price it fairly, maintain a clean and inviting shop, prepare delicious homemade dinners, and arrange every party platter that leaves the shop as if it were for their own party. Burke's Seafood is a story that I am proud of; a story of success built on the premise of quality, service, and 29 years of hard work.

Check out these other great businesses!

Council Orders CORI Checks On QHS Construction Workers

council to "Put our people to work."

Rizzi said the CORI check would not only protect against child pedophiles but, also, identify people with incorrect Social Security cards or fraudulent green cards.

CORI stands for Criminal Offender Record Information which allows employers to get a copy of a person's criminal record from the Massachusetts Criminal History Systems Board.

Davis said he found it "disturbing" that CORI background checks are not already in place for construction workers as all sports coaches have to fill out CORI forms.

In addition, Davis said the site is connected to Quincy

High School, across the street from the YMCA, near the Woodward School, and near daycare centers.

Davis' motion established a six-member committee who will monitor contractors' CORI compliance.

Councillor John Keenan asked what union supporters hoped to achieve through the CORI system. He noted that all workers will be subject to a review of all offenses, large and small, and they will lose jobs.

When Keenan asked what would be achieved, six to eight spectators called out, "Green cards. Green cards."

Keenan voted for the CORI resolution, but suggested it was "too broad, too vague. If there are people out there without green cards, find a way to go after that."

Prior to the vote, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond reminded the council and union members that he and Councillor Joseph Finn had tried to protect local and union workers by inserting protective language into the high school bond approval.

Raymond's review drew a sharp response from Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who charged that Raymond was not a friend of labor unions as he did not support a project in Quincy Point. Raymond and Finn defended their actions.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Guro suggested that McNamee should have discussed the issue with Raymond in "a more respectful manner."

Dear Friends:

Welcome to the new DPW Corner. In the future, our Department of Public Works will use this space to provide information about upcoming projects and new initiatives and answer questions from our residents. I hope it will keep you informed, and I encourage you to contribute your thoughts and ideas.

The DPW has much on its plate, all of it connected to the quality of life for our residents. A new pothole and street-repair program is underway; street-sweeping has been increased; and many people are working hard to identify and fix longstanding problems in the Water and Sewer Department.

Most immediately, our solid waste and recycling collection and disposal service is about to undergo some great improvements. For the first time in 38 years a new vendor has been awarded the task of curbside collection of solid waste and recycling. Beginning July 1st, Capitol Waste Inc., a local company, will begin curbside collection of waste and recycling with their trademark red and yellow trucks.

Under the new contract there will be no changes to the type or amount of trash you will be able to put out curbside. Your regular trash day will stay the same but the times may vary so please have your trash and recyclable curbside by 6:30 am on the regular pick-up day. Capitol Waste will introduce the latest method of collecting recyclables called Single Stream Recycling. This is a proven method of increasing recycling by placing all paper, cardboard, plastic, glass and metals into one large barrel or your existing recycling container. Keep an eye on your mail for further instructions on Single Stream Recycling.

I hope you find this feature helpful in the future, and do not hesitate to offer your own ideas by calling the DPW at 617-376-1953, emailing at recyclequincy@ci.quincy.ma.us or mailing, John Sullivan, Program Manager, c/o City of Quincy, DPW, 55 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Sincerely,

Thomas P. Koch

to water and sewer ratepayers to pay for things such as employee salaries, benefits and other costs not directly associated with water and sewer service. The DPW, listening to advice from state regulators and independent auditors, has lowered the indirect costs that would be paid by ratepayers from $8.8 to $3.6 million, a $5 million difference that will help keep water and sewer bills stable, Coffey said.

Last year, money was billed to water and sewer ratepayers to offset the city's tax collections, using a formula that essentially stated that 12 percent of the budgets of many city departments, including police and fire, should be paid through water and sewer bills. Coffey cautioned that the department is not making any revenue assumptions at this point, adding that the $3.6 million in indirect costs is not a surplus, as it would not even be enough to cover the current deficit.

Koch said he has asked the department to keep a close eye on revenue throughout the year, with the hope that continuing reform could lead to more help for ratepayers and taxpayers.

"I am proud of the work of our team over the last several months identifying these problems and setting out to fix them," Koch said. "We are committed and will be making more progress moving forward."

Bank Of Canton Named Top Minority Lender Of 2007 By MassHousing

The Bank of Canton was recently awarded Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency's (MassHousing's) Special Achievement Award for Minority Lending.

The award was presented to Bank of Canton for issuing the most loans to minority borrowers in the state of Massachusetts in 2007.

Bank of Canton closed on a total of 344 first-time mortgage loans in 2007, 33 percent of which were issued to minority borrowers.

"Bank of Canton's excellence in lending to minorities and its commitment to affordable housing has resulted in many Massachusetts residents being able to purchase their own home with MassHousing's safe and affordable loan products," said MassHousing Executive Director Thomas R. Gleason.

"Bank of Canton is committed to providing the best lending products to our customers. We enjoy a sense of achievement when we are able to help our customers accomplish their goals," said George DeMello, Senior Vice President of Residential Lending. "I would like to extend my gratitude to Tom Gleason and MassHousing for this honor and I look forward to collaborating with them in the future."

Bank of Canton has branches in Brookline, Canton, Quincy, Randolph and Hyannis, and a Mortgage Center in Auburn.

Hope To Reverse Vatican Rejection

Friends In Last Ditch Appeal To Reestablish Star Of The Sea Parish

Friends of Star of the Sea, the suppressed Catholic church in Squantum, have filed a last ditch appeal in the forlorn hope that the full bench of the Vatican's supreme court will reverse its rejection of an earlier appeal to reestablish it as a full parish.

The Archdiocese of Boston, which ordered the suppression in January, 2004, confirmed last week that the appeals of St. Mary Star of the Sea and seven other parishes in the Boston area had been denied by the Apostolic Signatura.

But the feisty Friends have refused to give up their mission.

"The recent decision from the Vatican came from a small panel of cardinals who sit on the Apostolic Signatura," said Sean Glennon, co-chair of the Friends of Star of the Sea. "The Friends appeal will allow the case to bypass this panel and proceed directly to the full bench."

"I'd be astounded if we succeed at the next level," he added. "The full bench is unlikely to overturn the decision of their brother cardinals on the panel. But this is not what this next appeal is about."

It's a matter of principal, said Glennon, a matter of "sending a strong message to all Catholics that the time has come to protect the faith."

"Our Canonical advocate in Rome cited over a dozen violations of Canon Law in the suppression of Star of the Sea Parish. Any one of these violations is reason enough to overturn Cardinal O'Malley's decree of suppression.

"The fact that the Vatican has shown blatant disregard for Canon Law sends a clear message that no parish is safe."

The advocate is still working for them, said Glennon, in fact a recent fundraiser added $6,000 to the fund pay the advocate and filing fees, which "sent a strong signal" to the Archdiocese.

"We would not have gone forward—in conscience we would not have taken this next step—had we not had the support of Friends members," said Maureen Mazrimas, co-chair of the Friends.

"By responding to our financial appeal we were given a mandate to take this as far as we can to preserve our rights. We could do nothing less."

All eight of the suppressed parishes whose appeals were rejected have filed new appeals to the full Apostolic Signatura and Peter Borre, co-chair of the Council of Parishes said, "We intend to stay with this issue as long as we can."

Star of the Sea is a member of the Council of Parishes, a lay organization formed to oppose the suppression process.

The last mass was celebrated in Star of the Sea as a parish church on Sunday, Oct. 24, 2004, but under constant pressure from the Friends, it was allowed to reopen as a chapel of Sacred Heart Parish July 17, 2005 with only one Sunday mass a week celebrated by a visiting priest.

The Friends are seeking reestablishment as a full parish with a pastor of their own to officiate at baptisms, marriages and funerals in their own church. Glennon said the volley of appeals that the Friends have fired at the Vatican will not affect the former parish's reopening as a chapel.

Glennon said he would like to see Cardinal O'Malley invite members of the suppressed parishes to be part of the solution to the crisis facing the archdiocese, rather than being viewed as adversaries.

"The irony that the Chancery doesn't seem to realize is that we are exactly the kind of people this archdiocese needs if it is to grow and prosper," he said.

"On average, 70 percent of registered parishioners in any given parish do not attend church on a regular basis, and yet, here we are, fighting to help grow the church, and we can't even celebrate baptisms, weddings or funerals in our own church."

Glennon said the Friends plan to hold a town meeting at an appropriate time in the future to chart a new course for the organization.

"We still have many options before us," he said. "The possibility of filing civil litigation is still very much on the table."

Volunteer Sign-Up Meeting For Babe Ruth World Series June 26

Organizers of this summer's national Babe Ruth World Series in Quincy will be holding a volunteer sign-up meeting June 26 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the community room of the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex.

Volunteers can sign up for dates and times that they would be available to assist at the tournament, which will welcome teams from across the country for the event from August 16-23 at Adams Field.

Thousands of spectators are expected in addition to the players and families for the World Series, which is being held in Quincy for a third time.

Volunteers are needed for a wide variety of tasks including cooking, working the concession stands, selling souvenirs and selling tickets. Many volunteers from previous World Series are expected back this summer, but new volunteers are always welcome, said John Norton, Vice President of the Quincy Babe Ruth World Series Committee.

"The group of people who volunteered in the past have been tremendous, and we hope to have a similar group this year," Norton said.

Anyone interested in more information can call Norton at 617-472-8894.

The 14-year old Babe Ruth World Series was played at Adams Field in 2003 and 2005, and this year's event comes at a time when Quincy is bracing for an additional influx of tourism.

"The volunteers who dedicate so much time are a big reason why this event is so special and such a showcase for the city," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "I encourage anyone who can give a little time to volunteer. It will be a fun and rewarding experience."

Summertime at UMass Boston: Activities Abound

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

I am pleased to inform Quincy Sun readers that the University of Massachusetts Boston's fortieth-commencement exercises on May 30, 2008, were a resounding success. Under glorious weather conditions, UMass Boston proudly conferred degrees on more than 2,700 graduates as invited guests, faculty, staff, and other members of the university community gathered on the Campus Center lawn looked on. Noted humanitarian Rev. Gloria White-Hammond delivered the principal address and was one of four distinguished recipients of honorary degrees.

Although the start of the next academic year is still months away, the university's important work as a center of learning and provider of resources for Boston-area communities continues. From June 30 to July 25, for example, the Summer Transportation Institute at UMass Boston will offer middle- and high-school students in the Greater Boston area a chance to explore careers in the transportation industry. Funded by the U.S. Department of Transportation through the state Executive Office of Transportation and UMass Boston, the Institute promotes academic accomplishment, interest in science and engineering, and communication and computer skills through workshops, field trips, seminars, recreational activities, and close interaction with university faculty and students. More information on the Institute can be found at www.sti.umb.edu.

Two recent grant proposals, developed in partnership with Professor Joan Arches of UMass Boston's College of Public and Community Service, exemplify the commitment of the Division of Athletics, Recreation, Special Projects and Programs to assisting the young people who reside in nearby communities. One initiative involves use of storytelling, painting, singing, and other arts activities to facilitate acquisition of reading skills among preschool youth. Another project, developed in cooperation with businesses and other organizations from local neighborhoods, will make possible the creation of a directory of youth opportunities—from sports leagues to cooking classes to singing clubs to learning techniques for finding a summer job.

The UMass Boston Sailing Program opened for the season on April 15. A source of instruction and recreation to the university and the wider community since 1974, the program is free of charge to students and offers membership to faculty, staff, alumni, and the community at a nominal fee. Basic sailing instruction and beginner to advanced racing classes are offered from spring through fall at the Fox Point Landing Dock, located along the harbor walk between McCormack and Wheatley Halls. The program also provides access to the Student Sailing Club, which competes throughout New England and nationally. In addition, the club organizes two sailing trips to the harbor islands every summer—much-anticipated excursions for the entire university community.

I hope you will avail yourself of the many UMass Boston-sponsored activities both on and off the campus in the days and weeks to come. For a complete rundown on campus news and events, check the university calendar and our website: www.umb.edu.

Do unions make a difference

There was a time not so long ago that bosses made it illegal to belong to a union. When Massachusetts workers marched to demand things that we now take for granted, they were often beaten and sometimes killed. But they kept marching.

Because of their courage and determination, we now have

- A ban on Child Labor
- The eight-hour day
- Health Insurance
- Unemployment Compensation
- Safer workplaces
- Paid holidays, vacations and sick days
- Respect and dignity on the job

In Quincy, workers' rights are under challenge again. The City of Quincy – to "save money" – wants to use contractors who abuse workers to build the new Quincy High School. The mill owners put 8-year olds to work in the mills to "save money." It was wrong then. It is wrong today.

Tell Mayor Koch (376-1990) that Quincy workers deserve good jobs on the Quincy High School project.

Secrets Of The Home Sale

(ARA) - With the inventory of unsold homes at continued high levels, homeowners are going to great lengths to differentiate and distinguish their home. According to experts, there are a few simple tricks that can help create a more appealing space and a more attractive listing in today's increasingly competitive market.

Listing: What's in a word?
When putting your home on the market, the right phrasing in your listing can be the key to attracting potential buyers. According to the 2008 MSN article, "What's 'beautiful' worth? About $12,500" researchers have found that listings with the words "beautiful" or "gorgeous" sold homes 15 percent faster, while "landscaping" bumped sales 20 percent faster and "move-in condition" expedited the sale by 12 percent.

Contrary to popular belief, sellers should steer clear of words that highlight desperation such as "motivated" and "must sell." The study found the inclusion of those words in the listing slowed sales by up to 30 percent.

Branding: If you've got it, flaunt it.

Brand names create a point of differentiation and should be used as selling points for your home. There is no doubt that buyers will put more weight in brands they trust. If choosing to make upgrades before listing your home, consider quality, recognizable products because they will ultimately provide the best return.

"Our premier lines of hardwood flooring are appearing in listings along with top name appliances," says Tom Sullivan, chairman and founder of Lumber Liquidators. "The inclusion of these trusted brands in the listing conveys quality and, in the case of Bellawood and its 50-year warranty, it also provides peace of mind."

Staging: The ultimate showcase showdown.

When getting your home tidied up for potential buyers, there are some specific tips that will help your home appeal to a wider range of buyers.

Cleaning: The number one rule of staging is to get rid of unwanted and unused items. Whether packed away until the sale or permanently donated, de-cluttering allows buyers to see more of the home. This also includes moving furniture out of rooms that may seem overcrowded. Less is always more.

Neutralizing: When getting your home ready to sell, going neutral is the best way to go to appeal to the most buyers. Painting is one of the most cost-effective ways to transform a room back to its natural state. Warm neutral colors tend to be a stager's preference because it keeps walls inviting while adding a touch of color in the room. Buyers can better imagine themselves living in a home when it is neutral.

Landscaping: Although the inside of the home can create atmosphere, the first impression can be a lasting impression. The outside of the house will set the tone for what a buyer perceives is inside. Create a pleasant yard that is well-kept and full of life. Plants and flowers also should be brought inside the home to help accessorize and accent high traffic areas such as the kitchen and living room.

Reverse Mortgage Activity Remains Strong Despite Declining Property Values

Despite property values falling back to 2005 levels, demand for reverse mortgages continues to grow at record levels. This is partially attributed to lower interest rates and a significant loss in the buying power for retirees.

A reverse mortgage enables homeowners 62 and older to convert their home equity into cash. What makes this type of mortgage so popular is that there are no payments for as long as the senior homeowner lives in their home.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) reports that 9,564 reverse mortgages were endorsed in April 2008. This brings the year-to-date total to 64,776, an 8.1 percent increase over 2007.

At the same time, home values in the first quarter of 2008 fell 7.7 percent from the first quarter of 2007 according to a Home Value Report released by Zillow.com.

The amount a borrower may receive from a reverse mortgage is determined by their age, the interest rate, and the home value. So, in some cases, a decline in a home's value may reduce the amount a retiree can receive from the reverse mortgage.

Reverse mortgage growth continues to be strong for a number of reasons including:

- An increase in the demand to supplement retirement income. Each year since 2000, retirees have received an increase in their Social Security benefits lower than the rate of inflation. Social Security benefits have increased by just 22 percent, while retiree expenses have risen by 71 percent. Retirees have lost 40 percent of their buying power.

- Low interest rates have helped to offset the impact from lower home values.

- Property values have not declined in all areas. In fact, some areas of the country have seen home appreciation.

Unlike traditional "forward" mortgages, reverse mortgages have not been subject to tighter credit standards. Retirees seeking a traditional mortgage in today's market may be turned down because they do not qualify based on credit and income. However, a reverse mortgage does not use credit or income in qualifying.

Further attraction for the reverse mortgage is the ease and flexibility it provides in customizing the way funds are received. This includes a lump sum, a line of credit, monthly payments, or a combination of two or more of these options.

"Funds from the reverse mortgage do not affect Social Security or Medicare benefits," Robert J. Petrelli, President and Reverse Mortgage Advisor at Mount Vernon Mortgage Corporation said. "Our senior clients have been able to continue to enjoy their retirement with the peace of mind of knowing they will not outlive their retirement income."

Legislation currently working its way through Congress is expected to result in a substantial increase in the national loan limit for the FHA-insured reverse mortgage. If passed, it would raise the limit from $362,790 to $550,000, and would help increase the amount seniors with a home valued over $362,790 could receive from a reverse mortgage.

Sovereign Bank First-Time Homebuyer Workshop June 24, 26

First-time homebuyers are invited to attend a workshop scheduled Tuesday, June 24, and Thursday, June 26, from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. at City Hall, second floor Conference Room.

The workshop, sponsored by Sovereign Bank, will focus on helping buyers determine how much they can afford and the most suitable mortgage. Lenders will be on site to discuss mortgage options individually with workshop participants.

In addition, the workshop will cover the legal aspects of buying a home, the importance of home and lead inspections, and other pertinent information.

This workshop is a prerequisite for first-time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs and is open to all, regardless of income. Attendance is necessary in order to receive the home-buying certificate. Cost is $15 per person.

Call 617-770-2227, Ext. 31 for more information.

Sandsculpting Saturday At Wollaston Beach

Sand sculpting, a sidewalk chalk festival and a moonbounce are among the events planned Saturday by Friends of Wollaston Beach at their Arts on The Shore festival.

A DJ will provide music for the program set for noon to 4 p.m. at the southern end of Wollaston Beach.

All are welcome to participate. Those interested in sculpting should bring their own sandcastle toys and tools. Chalk will be provided for sidewalk chalk artists.

The Friends' 2008 programs are already well underway, this season, as nearly 1000 spectators recently attended the second annual Wollaston Beach Kite Fest. During that event, nearly 50 kites flew along Wollaston Beach simultaneously.

Earlier this month, the FWB partnered with the Quincy Council on Aging, Tony's Clam Shoppe, and DJ Rob of Max Q Productions for a senior day of "Back to the Beaches."

Nearly 100 seniors participated in the event which began with a luncheon at Tony's and included dancing in the sand to music provided by DJ Rob.

The FWB plans another senior event in August.

Coffee Break Cafe, Zamforia Aiding YMCA Strong Kids Campaign

Coffee Break Cafe of Quincy and Braintree and Zamforia Industries of Quincy are joining forces to put a little more financial muscle into the South Shore YMCA's Strong Kids Campaign.

Zamforia will showcase its first line of T-shirts, "It Says Love," with the word "love" expressed in different languages by workers at the cafes until the end of July.

Then they will take orders for the $24 shirts through the Coffee Break Cafe, with $5 of each shirt sold donated to the YMCA's campaign which gives direct financial support to kids unable to afford its programs.

The shirts will be on display at the Coffee Break Cafe, 77 Parkway, Quincy Center today (Thursday) from 6 to 9 p.m. during a "Rock-a-Shirt Art Show." There will be live music, snacks and drinks.

SWAP Earns Tax Abatements For Seniors

The Council on Aging has a SWAP (Senior Workers' Abatement Program) that enable the elderly to work 89 1/2 hours a year and earn $600 towards their real estate tax bills.

FIRE SAFETY
by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Tips for A Safe Summer Holiday

I'm actually writing this during the winter to envision the summer coming someday (It is here!) while focusing on further attempts at conveying safety during its activities. Meanwhile, please don't look at this effort simply as an opportunity for me to suggest what could go wrong, rather, it is a brief report on safety preparation suggesting that in doing so it will leave plenty of time for lighthearted fun and enjoyment.

When grilling with friends and family, be mindful to isolate children from hot grill surfaces. This is the rationale behind not leaving grills unattended.

If using charcoal, adding lighter fluid to an existing fire can invite disaster. Flames may travel up the stream of lighter fluid resulting in serious burns. It is an unacceptable practice.

All fireworks are illegal in Massachusetts. The possession and use of all fireworks by private citizens is illegal. Don't take a chance with fireworks. Enjoy your holidays while celebrating it without a regrettable outcome, fire and personal injury. Leave fireworks to the professionals.

If traveling, consider fire safety when checking into a hotel, motel or guesthouse. Take the time to familiarize yourself with the layout of the building, exit locations and alternate means of escaping the building should there be an emergency. Remember that windows can be used as emergency exits, while access to roofs can make their use more inviting if the need arises. Of course, never use an elevator during a fire incident.

When returning back home from those nights away, and finding the lawn ready for cutting, make certain that there is enough fuel within the lawnmower to get the job done. Avoid refueling a hot mower.

We have recently seen an increase in tiki torch use. Their use on a combustible deck is not recommended by this department, while doing so ten feet away from a building, securely placed within the ground while not left unattended. Care must be taken to make certain they are a safe distance from dry, combustible vegetation and we recommend consideration for neighbors' concerns as well.

Portable outdoor fireplaces and chimneys are surfacing and we clearly place them within the open burning category and therefore their use is prohibited. We will receive an occasional call asking for our opinion if it is conveyed to us that they are being used on a combustible deck. We in turn inform the caller that not only is it inadvisable to use them on a combustible deck; we prohibit their use entirely.

Respect the water (ocean, pool, etc.). Remind yourself that as beautiful as it is it can be very unforgiving if not respected. Relax with caution and respect for its force and enjoy the summer with all its gifts as fully and as safely as you can.

Thanks for doing so!

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, June 8, at approximately 3:45 p.m., Officers Daniel Francis and Paul Matthews were dispatched with Fallon Ambulance to 85 Quincy Avenue (Citizens Bank) for a report of an "Overdose" in the parking lot.

Quincy Police Communications notified responding units that the "911" call had been transferred from the Massachusetts State Police. Communications further updated responding units that the caller appeared hysterical on the phone screaming, "He's not breathing, there are needles everywhere."

Upon arrival of the Officer, Engine One of the Quincy Fire Department was on location attempting to render medical assistance to an unconscious male sitting in the reclined front seat of a parked vehicle.

Officer Francis observed the white male was unconscious and his skin was turning blue. The firefighters who were rendering first aid stated that the victim had a strong pulse but his breathing was shallow. Officer Matthews attempted to interview a female who was standing next to the victim, but she was hysterical and unable to answer questions.

Officer Matthews was able to calm her and learned from her that the victim was her boyfriend and that she had made plans to meet him in the parking lot. She stated that when she arrived, she observed her boyfriend sitting in the car, barely breathing and turning blue.

Fallon Ambulance EMTs arrived and injected the victim with Narcan. He immediately awoke from his unconscious state. When asked who he was, the victim claimed to be "James Morris."

Meanwhile, Officer Francis searched the interior of the vehicle and discovered several small plastic corner baggies (consistent with those used to transport heroin) along with eight hypodermic syringes in the vehicle's glove compartment. Officer Francis also found a wallet with a Massachusetts Driver's License and numerous credit cards. The driver's license was issued to a female from Hingham.

Communications Operator Michael Bowes informed the Officers that the vehicle had been reported stolen. Based on this information, Officer Francis informed the victim/suspect that he was under arrest for "Larceny of a Motor Vehicle and Receiving Stolen Property to wit a motor vehicle." Officer Francis secured the suspect's right wrist with a handcuff and secured the other handcuff to the ambulance stretcher. Officer Matthews had the vehicle towed while Officer Francis followed the ambulance to Quincy Medical Center.

Upon arrival at Quincy Medical Center, Officer Francis requested verification of the suspect's name and social security information. The social security number provided by the suspect was listed to a different individual. When the suspect was informed of this, he gave another number, which again was listed, to another individual. The suspect was told he would also be charged with "Misleading a Police Officer." The suspect insisted the information he had given was valid, that he never had a license and had never been arrested.

Officer David Zupkofska relieved Officer Francis guarding the suspect. Officer Zupkofska spoke with the suspect and after a lengthy conversation, the suspect revealed his actual identity. Officer Zupkofska contacted Officer Francis, who was at the station filing his report.

A query of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicle's Computer Database confirmed the suspect's identity via his license photo. The record check also showed that the suspect had two default warrants issued for his arrest: one for "Receiving Stolen Property" and the other for "Possession of Class A Drug."

Officer Francis contacted the owner of the stolen vehicle via telephone and informed her that not only had her car been recovered, her wallet with her driver's license, social security card and numerous credit cards were also found.

The suspect, a 28-year old Weymouth resident, was released from the hospital and transported to the station for booking. Nice Work!

Robert W. Harnais Receives Planning Commendation

Quincy Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington, Planning Director recently presented Robert W. Harnais with a certificate of recognition for his many years of dedicated service and outstanding performance as Chairperson of the Quincy Planning Board.

The certificate read, in part, "The leadership and enthusiasm you demonstrated will serve as an exemplary model for future chairpersons of the Board."

"Bob has always gone above and beyond the call of duty in making himself available in Planning Department matters, and his extraordinary assistance has been greatly appreciated," said Harrington.

"The time and energy Bob has spent as Chair of the Planning Board is truly what community service is all about," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "It's about treating people with dignity and respect and giving more than you receive. We are truly grateful to Bob for his outstanding service to the City of Quincy over the past fifteen years."

Harnais thanked Harrington and Mayor Koch for their kind words, and also thanked the members of the Board for the great experience it had been working with them.

Harnais resigned as chairman of the Quincy Planning Board to serve in the same capacity in the Town of Braintree.

U.S. Senate Candidate Jeff Beatty Addresses Quincy Republicans

Jeff Beatty recalls a meeting he attended with then-Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and other administration officials not long before Gen. Colin Powell made his famous presentation to the United Nations on Iraq's alleged weapons of mass destruction.

After Rumsfeld's staff laid out the Bush administration's case for war, Beatty, a former CIA counter-terrorism officer, asked numerous questions regarding how the evidence was gathered.

Had U.S. agents actually seen one of the alleged mobile weapons labs up close? Had soil samples been collected from the vehicles to confirm that they were being used to make weapons? Had the United States captured one of these weapons labs, so that it could be transported to the United Nations to support America's case for war?

"The response I received was a heavy sigh, followed by, 'Mr. Beatty, thank you for your (military and government) service. But we're virtually certain of our evidence,'" Beatty said last week at a meeting of the Quincy Republican City Committee.

"John Kerry voted for the war because he needed to look presidential," he continued. "Had I been in the Senate at that time, I would have known the right questions to ask. And I never would have voted to authorize the war in Iraq based on the evidence presented."

Beatty hopes to have the chance to vote on such decisions in the future. A Harwich resident, Beatty is challenging John Kerry for Senate in the November election. His campaign centers on his economic experience as a business owner as well as his expertise in national security drawn from his service as an Army Delta Force officer, FBI agent with the National Hostage Rescue Team and CIA counter-terrorism officer.

It's the right combination of experience, he said, for the times America is facing.

"It's time for the people of Massachusetts to have someone representing them in the U.S. Senate who has the experience and is willing to do the work and solve the problems we face related to protecting our families, protecting our jobs and protecting our country," Beatty said. "And I believe I have the relevant experience that will enable me to do a better job than Senator Kerry."

In addition to discussing his plan for achieving success in Iraq and enabling the withdrawal of U.S. troops, Beatty pointed to his business experience as the owner of a nationally respected anti-terrorism consulting firm.

"I understand the impact the high price of energy has on all of us and unlike Senator Kerry, I am going to do something about it with a comprehensive energy policy that can lower the cost of gas, heating oil and electricity," Beatty said. "And for our working population who have lost jobs or had their wages suppressed by illegal immigration: Hang on - help is on the way."

FOOT NOTES

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

OLDER ADULTS NEED TO WATCH FOR FOOT PROBLEMS

By the time you reach your 60s or 70s, your feet have logged a lot of miles and endured significant wear and tear. Several systemic conditions may begin to manifest on your feet in your older years, and what happens in your feet may signify problems elsewhere in your body, and vice versa. Circulatory, orthopedic, or neurological problems may present foot symptoms that can include pain, redness, stiffness, numbness, or decreased sensitivity. Gout, arthritis, and skin problems are also more common in seniors. And if you have type 2 diabetes, routine foot care and professional attention are especially important. Regular podiatric visits ensure that a foot problem is identified and treated successfully.

The senior foot presents its own special concerns to the podiatrist. But whether feet are brand new or have a few miles on them, no one should wait to see if their foot problems will "just go away." Some conditions definitely won't, most others probably won't, and you certainly don't want to be left with more serious, harder to fix problems later on. Feet of all ages deserve the comprehensive attention you'll find here at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Please give us a call at 781-986-3668 for an appointment for foot care for the family. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S.: The foot has been called the "mirror of the systemic system".

Take the Struggle Out of Exercise

Q. Recently I consulted a doctor about having surgery to help me lose weight. I need to lose 100 pounds total, and my physician has agreed to do the surgery, but ONLY if I begin changing my lifestyle to incorporate better nutrition and exercise. I really want to have the surgery to lose weight, but exercise has always been a struggle for me. I don't know where or how to begin. Help!

A. Starting an exercise program can be a challenge. What to do, where to start and how to continue are some of the questions asked by people beginning an exercise routine. Let's begin by taking one question at a time to help get you started.

What to do?
Oftentimes, this is the reason many people start and then quickly end their exercise regime. One way to answer this question is to ask, "What do I like to do?" If you can find a physical activity that you enjoy, or can tolerate doing, this is a great place to start. You might not mind walking, swimming, riding a bicycle or even playing tennis or shooting baskets. This can get you moving, and as you begin to move more and more, it may open you up to doing more exercise.

If you begin an exercise program with activities you don't enjoy or even despise, you may be able to grit your teeth and get through your workouts for a while, but you'll soon lose interest and motivation. Find something you enjoy, and get moving.

Where to start?
Now that we have started to think about "what" we are going to do, it's time to figure out how to begin. Start slow, but develop a schedule that can keep you on task. If you wait for the time to magically appear for you to exercise, that time may never come. With hectic schedules and other priorities, scheduling time to exercise is imperative. Once you have scheduled the time, start with a few minutes of exercise and build on it. You might only be able to walk a few blocks your first couple of weeks, but as you become more conditioned and your body begins to adjust to your moving, you'll find it easier to walk farther and farther. Start slow and continue to progress.

How do I stay motivated?
This has to be the hardest question of all. There are some people who truly do not like to exercise. If this is your situation, I would suggest understanding the importance of exercise first and why it is so important to your body. To stay motivated, solicit the help of friends or workout buddies.

Develop a support system of people in your life who will not only verbally encourage you, but be willing to come by your house and pick you up when you are having a tough time getting yourself to exercise. Hiring a certified personal trainer is another great option. Making a standing appointment with a personal trainer can help you create a system of accountability and also maximize your time while completing an exercise program designed personally for your goals. Exercise can be a challenge, but the benefits are worth every bead of sweat. Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Simple Steps To Get Moving

Reduce The Risk Of Diabetes, Heart Disease

(ARA) - Want to lower your risk for type 2 diabetes and heart disease? All it takes is 10 minutes of physical activity three times a day. Ten times three - it's really that simple. And it's what the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommend to help you lower your blood pressure, manage your cholesterol and lose weight.

In the United States today, one in five people have diabetes, and heart disease is the leading cause of death. But exercising for 30 minutes each day can make a big difference in cutting your risk for these deadly diseases. And you don't have to hit the gym to reap the benefits of staying active. You can take three 10-minute walks after meals or find other simple ways to fit activity into your busy life.

According to health experts, any physical activity is better than none - and even the smallest steps can make a big difference. "Physical activity is particularly important for people at risk for diabetes and heart disease," says Dr. Peter

Sheehan, senior faculty member at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City. "Staying active can help lower risk in and of itself, and it can help patients lose weight, which also lowers risk. It's a double benefit."

Here are three tips to keep in mind:

1. Stay active all day. It's easy to exercise while you're doing other things. On a visit to the grocery store, park at the far end of the lot and walk a lap around the inside of the store before you begin shopping. At work, take the stairs rather than the elevator - you might get to your floor faster anyway. At home, walk around while you chat on your cell phone. If you're babysitting, get down on the floor with the children and join in an activity.

2. Enjoy yourself. Even brisk exercise need not feel like a chore. You don't have to run at a track - you can play with your dog at the park. No need to drive all the way to the gym; you can garden for half an hour at home. It doesn't have to be a solo activity. Go for a stroll at the mall with a friend.

3. Make a game of it. Get a pedometer and count how many steps you take each day. Once you have an idea of how many steps you take in a day, set a goal to raise your average. Aim to add 100 steps every day until you reach 10,000, or work to add 1,000 a week.

To learn more about how physical activity can lower your risk for type 2 diabetes and heart disease, call the American Diabetes Association at 1-800-DIABETES (342-2383), e-mail AskADA@diabetes.org or visit www.CheckUpAmerica.org. Be sure to ask your copy of "Getting Started with Physical Activity."

Tips On How To Exercise Safely

(ARA) - As the weather gets warmer, people often get motivated to spend more time outdoors. Whether it's working on projects around the house, playing with the grandkids at the park or out exercising, it's important baby boomers remember their bodies are not as young as they used to be and not overdo it.

In 2007, more than 149,000 people between the ages of 45 and 64 were treated in emergency rooms, clinics and doctors' offices for injuries related to exercise and exercise equipment, according to the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission.

The American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons (AAOS) offer the following tips to help boomers prevent exercise-related injuries:

- Check with your doctor before beginning any exercise program. A physician will make sure your heart is in good condition and can make recommendations based on your current fitness level. This is especially important if you've had a previous injury.

- Always warm up and stretch before exercising. Cold muscles are more likely to get injured, so warm up with some light exercise for at least three to five minutes.

- Avoid being a "weekend warrior." Moderate exercise every day is healthier and less likely to result in injury than heavy activity only on weekends.

- Don't be afraid to take lessons. An instructor can help ensure you're using the proper form, which can prevent overuse injuries such as tendonitis and stress fractures.

- Develop a balanced fitness program. Incorporate cardio, strength training and flexibility training to get a total body workout and prevent overuse injuries. Also, make sure to introduce new exercises gradually, so you don't take on too much at once.

- Take calcium and Vitamin D supplements daily.

- Listen to your body. As you age, you may not be able to do some of the activities that you did years ago. Pay attention to your body's needs and abilities, and modify your workout accordingly.

- Remember to rest. Schedule regular days off from exercise and rest when tired.

Baby boomers who exercise regularly are less likely to experience depression, weight gain, diabetes, high blood pressure and sleep disturbances, so it's important to incorporate physical activity into your routine at any age.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE NIGHTLY GRIND

Chances are that if your room- or bed-mate has not made you aware of the fact that you grind your teeth at night, you probably do not know that you are doing it. As disruptive as the noise of tooth grinding may be for your sleeping partner, it is potentially very injurious to your teeth. Your dentist can readily identify the evidence of grinding your teeth. Bruxism, as too-grinding is technically known, not only wears down the biting surfaces of molars, in particular, it can lead to tooth erosion at the gumline. The good news is that this preventable form of premature wear can be halted with the use of a custom night guard.

Do you suffer from painful jaws or experience headaches in the morning? Have your teeth become more sensitive to cold, touch, or other stimuli? If so you may be one of the millions of people who unknowingly suffer from bruxism (tooth grinding). We welcome you to an unparalleled level of service in your search for superior dental health. We hope you will come to share our philosophy that regular dental care is a wise and sound investment in your total health. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule a dental appointment. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Bruxism, which is often caused by stress, can lead to temporomandibular-joint (TMJ) disorder and headaches if left unchecked.

Morrisette Ties HP, Off To 2-0-1 Record

By SEAN BRENNAN

Morrisette Legion improved its record to 2-0-1 with a 2-2 tie to Hyde Park Legion last Thursday night.

Morrisette received a solid start from pitcher Eric Engleheart (7 innings, 8 Ks) and the offense came through clutch in the seventh inning with two outs to score a run that tied the game at 2-2.

Matt Joyce doubled with two outs in the seventh and Morrisette down 2-1 to get the tying rally started. Joyce moved into scoring position on a wild pitch and Joe Vialpando walked and stole second to put runners on second and third.

John Ainsley's two-out single scored Joyce with the tying run, but Vialpando, looking to score from second base was gunned out at the plate, and the contest ended in a 2-2 deadlock.

Earlier in the week, Morrisette squeaked by a tough Braintree Legion squad, 6-5.

Braintree scored twice in the first, once in the third and fourth and once in the fifth against starting pitcher Glen Misho (7 innings, 14 hits, 8 Ks, 4 earned runs) to take the early 5-0 lead.

In the bottom of the fifth inning Morrisette rallied back to tie the score at 5-5.

Steve Connolly got it started with a walk and after advancing into scoring position, Connolly came around to score the first Morrisette run on a RBI single from Matt Ederly. After a single by catcher Matt

LEGION BASEBALL

Rodriguez put runners on first and second, Joe Lousarian walked to load the bases.

Kenny Carberry's sacrifice fly scored Ederly with the second run and a RBI single off the bat of Garland plated the third run of the fifth inning. With one out and the bases reloaded, Ryan Louis walked to bring in the fourth run of the inning. A pitch hit Connolly, in his second at-bat of the frame, and Morrisette had come all the way back from 5-0 to even the score at five.

After Misho got Braintree in order in the sixth, Morrisette finished off the comeback by scoring the winning run in the bottom of the frame. With one out, Ainsley walked and advanced to second on a wild pitch. That is when Ricky Salvucci stepped to the dish and delivered.

Salvucci's RBI single scored Ainsley and Morrisette escaped 6-5 to earn two points.

On June 9, Morrisette edged Jamaica Plain Legion, 7-5 behind some quality relief pitching from Joe Garland (4 innings plus, 7 Ks, 2 runs, W). Garland, who had come on in relief of starting pitcher Steve Connolly (2 innings plus, run, 4 Ks), allowed JP to score a single run in the fourth and fifth inning but he pitched well enough to earn the victory.

Morrisette scored its first run in the fourth inning to tie the score at 1-1. The run scored after John Ainsley doubled and then scored on a RBI single off the bat of Glen Misho.

The 1-1 tie did not last long as JP scored a go-ahead run in the bottom of the frame to take the 2-1 lead.

But with two outs in the top of the fifth inning, the scrappy boys from Morrisette Legion exploded for five runs to take a lead they would not relinquish the rest of the way.

Ainsley started the two-out rally with a single, followed by a double from Vialpando to put runners on second and third. Louis loaded the bases by getting hit by a pitch.

With the bags juiced with runners, Salvucci drew a RBI walk to tie the score at 2-2 and Misho followed that with a single to centerfield that scored Vialpando and Louis for a 4-2 advantage. On the play, the JP center fielder misplayed the ball and both Salvucci and Misho came around to score for the 6-2 lead.

JP would score once more in the bottom of the fifth, but Morrisette put the game away with an insurance run in the sixth inning. Ainsley, once again, started the rally with a walk and moved to second on a pitcher's balk. Vialpando worked a base-on-balls and after Louis singled to load the bases, Ederly was hit by a pitch to score Ainsley with the seventh and final run of the game.

Wollaston Blue Splits With Milton In Senior Babe Ruth Play

In the first week of Senior Babe Ruth league play, starting pitcher Kevin Keith helped the Wollaston Blue defeat Milton 5-3.

Keith limited Milton to three hits and struck out six batters over five and a third. Chris Doyle came on in relief to earn the save.

Dan Myers (two hits, run) and Joe Ederly (two hits, RBI, run) paced the offense. Keith, Paul Oldham, Edwin Nunez and John Parry each knocked in a run and Dave Griffin and Dan Munkley both scored runs.

The game before their 5-3 victory over Milton, the Wollaston Blue fell in defeat to Milton 13-4.

For the Wollaston Blue, Oldham scored Paul Carson with a RBI triple, and Griffin and Ederly each knocked in a run. Doyle, Diego Arredondo and Chris Timmins each scored a run.

In the final game of the week against Dorchester/Cedar Grove, a late-inning rally came up short, and the Wollaston Blue lost 6-3.

Dan Munkley and Tom Pepe scored runs and Myers contributed two hits to lead the offense.

Ederly, Tony Salaris (three scoreless innings for the week) and Timmins limited Cedar Grove to six hits and two earned runs.

This week, Wollaston Blue travels to South Boston and Braintree for games.

Cal Ripken Major League Baseball

The following are results from the last two weeks in the Cal Ripken Major League Baseball league.

Lions def. Beacon, 9-6
Joseph Cochrane struck out nine batters to help the Lions defeat Beacon Club, 9-6.

Andrew Jaehnig hit a home run, a double and a single to pace the offense and Matt MacPhail and Cochrane also reached base via a hit.

Andrew Currie, Aidan O'Connell, Andrew Schaaf and Patrick Trenholm had two hits apiece for Beacon Club.

Burgin Planter def. Lions, 2-1

Burgin Planter nipped the Lions 2-1 in a great pitchers duel.

Eddie Riley was the winning pitcher as he struck out eight and helped his own cause with two hits. Mike Gendreau hit the ball twice and Kyle Richardson belted a triple and saved the game with a highlight reel diving catch in center field.

Andrew Jaehnig was the hard-luck loser despite striking out 16 batters. Jaehnig had three hits and Joe Critelli (two hits), Ryan Harty, Matt McDonald and Liam McCarthy all hit safely for the Lions.

David Suslawicz and John Campbell both played solid games for the Lions.

Lions def. Burgin Planter, 13-4

The Lions rebounded nicely in the second game of a back-to-back against Burgin Planter, winning 13-4.

Greg Paulo led the offense with three hits (two doubles, four RBI). Ryan Harty and Andrew Jaehnig also had three hits apiece and Matt MacPhail, Matt McDonald (two hits), Joe Cochrane and Liam McCarthy also reached base safely.

John Yacano struck out five batters and scattered four hits, giving up only two runs in five innings to collect his first win on the mound.

Eddie Riley (two hits), Robert Thompson-Hines (triple), Luke Carlippe and Patrick Pitts all had hits for Burgin Planter.

Lions def. Quincy Elks, 11-6

The Lions used a four-run fourth inning and a four-run seventh inning to score a comeback victory over the Elks, 11-6.

Andrew Jaehnig continued his hot start to the season with two home runs and a double. Ryan Harty finished with three hits (triple, two singles) and Greg Paulo, Liam McCarthy and Joe Critelli each had two hits.

Matthew Davis had three hits to lead the Elks and Matt Donovan (triple) and Tom Large (double) also contributed on offense for the Elks.

Quincy, North Quincy Lacrosse All-Stars

Six student-athletes from Quincy and North Quincy High School boy's lacrosse teams earned all-star recognition from the Atlantic Coast League's coaches after the conclusion of the 2008 season.

The all-stars from Quincy High School included seniors Marty Bowes and Derek McFarlane, junior Zack McCall and sophomore James Finn.

Lions def. Quincy Police, 5-2

The Lions held off the Police to win a well pitched game by a 5-2 margin.

Andrew Jaehnig belted three hits including his league leading eighth home run of the season. He also earned the win on the mound by striking out ten of the final thirteen batters he faced.

Ryan Harty went three-for-three and Matt McDonald finished with two hits.

Aaron Clancy (three hits), Brian Fahey (RBI single) and Pat Frosso (double) all played well for the Police. Ben Martin pitched very well for the Police.

League Standings
Kiwanis, 7-2, Lions, 7-3, Burke, 7-4, Rotary, 7-5, Police, 6-4, Quincy Credit Union, 6-4, Koch Club, 5-5, Colonial Federal, 5-6, Elks, 4-5, Burgin Planter, 4-6, Keohanes, 3-9, Beacon, 2-9.

John Sullivan was awarded an Atlantic Coast League's Sportsmanship Award and the Presidents, as a team, were awarded the league's Team Sportsmanship Award.

The all-stars from North Quincy High School included seniors Jon Cahill and Terrence Sibley.

Tom Pettit was awarded an Atlantic Coast League Sportsmanship Award.

The Garden Bug

It's much cheaper than replacing!

- Clean and paint (or sand and restain) all lawn furniture. Place in a different spot so you can enjoy a different view this summer.
- Stain concrete to look like tiles! First put down lighter color, let dry; then use a darker color to outline "tile" squares. Use a painting stamp to add designs.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your creative side is enhanced by indulging yourself in as much artistic inspiration (music, art, dance, etc.) as you can fit into your schedule. Take someone special with you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take a little restorative time out of your busy life. Go somewhere quiet this weekend. Or just close the door, turn on the answering machine and pretend you're away.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your advice might be much in demand by family and friends this week. But reserve time for yourself to investigate a project that could have some unexpected potential.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work-related issues demand your attention in the early part of the week. Family matters dominate Thursday and Friday. But the weekend is yours to spend as you please.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your temper in check as you deal with someone who seems to enjoy showing disrespect. Losing your Leonine cool might be just what the goader hopes to see.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A heated confrontation needs some cool-off time before it boils over. Better to step away than to try to win an argument where emotions overrule the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone very special in your life finally sends that reassuring message you've been hoping for. You can now devote more time to the tasks you had put aside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Job pressures begin to ease by the week's end, leaving you time to relax and restore your energy levels before you face next week's emerging challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual strength helps calm a friend who might be facing an unsettling change in his or her life. An offer to help comes from a surprising source.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) By mid-week you could learn some surprising facts about an associate that might cause you to reconsider a long-held view about someone in your past.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) One of those rare-for-you darker moods sets in in the early part of the week. But by Thursday, the clouds lift and you're back doing nice things for people in need.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use that sharp Piscean perceptiveness to reel in more information about a promising offer so that you have the facts to back up whatever decision you make.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you prefer the status quo, you easily can adapt to change when it's called for.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

OBITUARIES

Agnes J. Murphy, 84

Retired Riveter, Homemaker

A funeral Mass for Agnes J. (Murphy) Murphy, 84, of Quincy, was celebrated June 13 in St. John the Baptist Church, 44 School Street, Quincy.

Mrs. Murphy died June 9 at the John Adams Continuing Care Center, after a long illness.

Born and raised in Boston, she was educated in Boston schools and was a graduate of Cathedral High School. She had lived in Quincy for 38 years, previously in Weymouth and Roxbury.

Mrs. Murphy was a homemaker but during World War II she had worked as a riveter at the former Fore River Shipyard. After the war, she continued to work at the shipyard and later retired with twenty years of service.

During President William Clinton's administration she received a Presidential Citation Award for her service as a riveter.

Wife of the late Patrick D. Murphy; mother of Patrick T. Murphy, Kathleen M. Stanton, Theresa M. Mulrooney and Daniel M. Murphy of Quincy; Maureen A. Murphy of Weymouth; Eileen A. Connolly of

AGNES J. MURPHY

Hanover and James G. Murphy of Plymouth; sister of the late Francis Murphy, Joseph Murphy and Mary Gallant; and the aunt of Patricia Hastings and Charles Gallant of Hampton Bay, New York.

She is also survived by 16 grandchildren, 10 great grandchildren and several cousins.

Interment was at the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, 60 Walnut Street, Wellesley, MA 02481.

Mary Ellen Canniff

A memorial Mass for Mary Ellen Canniff of Los Angeles, Calif., formerly of Quincy, will be celebrated Sunday, June 22 at 10 a.m. at Blessed Kateri Tekakwitha, South Meadow Road, West Plymouth.

She died April 10.

She was the wife of the late Daniel Gill of Los Angeles, daughter of the late William C. and Helen Canniff of Quincy and sister of William J. Canniff of Beauford, S.C. and Alice B. DuBois of Plymouth.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Pleasantness is a gift with some people and with others a lack of pleasantness is the handicap which, if they only knew it, is keeping them from some of life's most rewarding experiences.

Big pleasures and great happiness are but the consummation of many little pleasures and deeds of kindness bond together, as a loaf of bread is many crumbs in the aggregate. Happiness is to be found among life's common things. It is not the rare gifts, the possession of the few; it is not great wealth, great learning, great genius, or great power; it is not these things that make the possessors happy. It is good health; it is friendship; it is love of home; it is the voices of children; it is sunshine; it is a passing smile; it is a kindly word; a little gift bestowed anonymously; a little thoughtfulness here and there as the days slip by... It is the blessings that are commonest, not those that are rarest; it is the gifts that God has scattered everywhere. These are the crumbs of happiness.

Pleasantness is the cheapest commodity on earth; and if people only knew it, such an attitude contains grains and nuggets of gold.

OBITUARIES

Catherine F. Wallace,

Retired Vice President

A funeral Mass for Catherine F. "Kay" (Slattery) Wallace of Quincy, a retired vice president for the Frank B. Hall Company, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Wallace died June 14 at the Marian Manor Nursing Home, Boston.

Born in Boston, she had lived in Dorchester before moving to Quincy 40 years ago.

She was a graduate of Girl's High School in Boston.

Her career in the insurance industry began in high school and continued until her retirement as a vice president for the Frank B. Hall Company.

Mrs. Wallace was a communicant at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

She was a former member of the Proparvulus Club and Disabled American Veterans' Auxiliary. She was also a lifelong member of the Savin Hill Femmes.

Mrs. Wallace loved to travel and work on her ceramics. Most of all, she enjoyed spending time with family and friends.

Wife of the late Edward "Bud" Wallace, she is survived by a brother, Joseph M. Slattery and his wife Gail of Mashpee.

She was also the sister of the late Mary E. Hurley and the late Anne T. Shea.

Interment will be in the Massachusetts National Cemetery.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to Boston Catholic TV, P.O. Box 9196, 34 Chestnut St., Watertown, MA 02471 or to Marian Manor, 130 Dorchester St., South Boston, MA 02127.

Luigi J. Mariano, 89

Retired Machinist/Technician

Mass. Boating Basic Course Starts June 23

The Massachusetts Environmental Police, in conjunction with the Quincy Police Department Marine Unit and the Weymouth Harbormaster, is offering "Boat Massachusetts," a Massachusetts Boating Basics course on June 23, 24, 25 and 27 (all four classes are required) at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, 137 Bayview Ave., Quincy.

Each day of instruction runs from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. "Boat Massachusetts" is offered to the public free of charge. The primary purpose of this course is to foster safe boat operation through increased awareness of required safety equipment, safe boating practices and legal responsibilities.

Youth ages 12-15 years of age who successfully complete the course, will be issued a Safety Certificate allowing them to operate a motorboat without adult supervision, as required by state law. This course will also satisfy the state requirements for personal watercraft users who are 16 or 17 years of age.

All graduates will be issued a course completion diploma and a Safety Certificate. Taking this course as a family is encouraged and has proven to be highly rewarding.

Sacred Heart Third Graders Learn About Flag From Comer

Jake Comer, the former national commander of the American Legion, took his expertise in the American flag to Margaret Hanna's third grade class at Sacred Heart School the other day and it certainly turned one of the youngsters on to Old Glory.

"I would like to thank you for coming to Sacred Heart and talking about the flag," wrote Caitlyn McGrath. "I learned so much about the flag. I told my parents about what you said. I read more about the flag."

"I was with my mom and I saw some people have their flags on the left side and I told them that they have the flag on the wrong side and they fixed it and put it on the right side."

Comer, an authority on flag etiquette, enlightened the kids on his favorite subject and passed out flags and pins to them as souvenirs of the occasion. They responded with handwritten notes of thanks.

"I would like to thank you for teaching me about the flag," wrote Bryan. "I will show a lot of respect for it. I will tell everybody to show respect. I will teach others about what you told us. I think you do have the honor as the head of your job. It was a pleasure of you to come. I really enjoyed your presentation."

Some other responses: Andrew J. - "I will like to thank you for teaching us about American flag. It was awesome! I asked that question you told us my parents. I wear the pin to school. All of us really like the American flag now."

Michelle - "I would like to thank you for teaching me about the American flag and telling me that (One Nation Under God) is one sentence. I would also like to thank you for the gifts you gave me. Thank you."

Kyla - "I would like to thank you for teaching us about the American flag. Thank you for the gifts. I liked learning what the pledge meant. I liked talking about the flag. The stripes were most interesting."

Cody - "Thank you for teaching us about the American flag. It was fun. Thank you for the flags and pins. The day after I wore the pin, Mrs. Hanna took the flags to save for Flag Day. At first the pin on my shirt then I got it."

Anna - "I would like to thank you for coming to our class to teach us about our flag. You gave me all the courage to challenge my mom in flag trivia. Thank you also for telling me the write way to say the pledge of allegiance. Also for telling me what it meant. I also want to thank you for the great gifts after. Now I will always wave the flag and wear the pin when we celebrate our country."

Allison - "I would like to thank you for telling us about the American flag. So will you come out next year? Thank you for all the gifts you gave us. My mom liked LEARNING THE FLAG - Margaret Hanna's third grade class at Sacred Heart School welcomed Jake Comer (right) to their classroom to teach them the history and etiquette of the American flag.

the pin. I learned a lot about the flag. I am happy when I learned about the flag."

Michelle - "I would like to thank you for teaching me about the flag and how important it is. I didn't know until you told me. Now I know how important the flag is. Also thank you for the flags and the pin. Thank you for coming."

Karthik - "I would like to thank you for talking about Old Glory, the American flag. It was a very nice time for you to talk. A fact about the flag is that the stars mean or represent the fifty states. The stripes mean the first thirteen states. I liked your gifts for me."

Timmy - "I would like to thank you for coming to see us. It was great to have you. I learned a lot more about the flag. Thanks to our soldiers we are free. You know a lot about the flag and now I do. I love the two gifts. Thank you so much."

Thomas - "I would like to thank you for coming and talking to us about the American flag. Thanks for the flags and the pins too.

The American flag is a big honor to have. I am going to keep the flag forever. I will never throw it out. I will wear the pin at my house on my shirt."

Kimberly - I would like to thank you for coming to my school and teaching me so much about the American flag. I had a good time. I liked the pin and flag you gave me. That is another thing I want to thank you for. After you left we watched a movie that told us that the American flag didn't always have stripes."

Over 200 Architect Bills Involved

City Owes Nearly $50,000 In Interest On Late QHS Bills

The city owes nearly $50,000 in interest payments to the architects of the new Quincy High School for bills paid late over the last several years, according to a City Hall review.

Between 2005 and the beginning of 2008, more than 200 bills submitted by high school architects Symmes, Maini and McKee Associates were paid late, in some cases by more than a year. One $30,000 design bill was paid 506 days late, a $220,000 bill in 2005 was paid 135 days late and several others were paid more than 400 days late, records show.

According to the invoice submitted by the architects last month, its bills to the city were paid an average of 113 days late over a three-year period, saddling taxpayers with total interest charges of $49,878.

"We've worked hard since taking office in January to reign in costs on this project, and to find out now that we owe more money simply because bills were not paid on time previously is completely unacceptable," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "We are committed to getting the high school done on time and on budget, and that includes immediately fixing whatever led to this specific issue."

Among the bills that piled up interest charges were, the Mayor's office said, a $54,000 bill paid 378 days late, a $25,700 bill paid 487 days late, a $45,000 bill paid 445 days late, and a $47,000 bill paid 389 days late.

As part of an ongoing analysis of the $126 million high school project, which increased $46 million between 2003 and 2007, administration officials are now reviewing billing practices in a move to ensure that "not one penny is misspent or lost," Koch said.

Earlier this year, Koch worked together with the Massachusetts School Building Authority to reach an agreement that will cut $1 million from the project's cost, and the administration moved to fix a potentially disastrous design flaw of underground utilities at the site. The Quincy High School Building Committee made several other "value engineering" cutbacks from the project in an effort to save money this year.

Change In Recycling Program New Trash Collection Starts Monday

A new cost-saving trash collection contract and innovative recycling program will start in Quincy on Monday with Capitol Waste Services, Inc., beginning curbside collection services.

The new contract will save about $150,000 in collection costs for taxpayers, thanks to a three-community deal brokered by the mayors of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth to collaborate on trash collection services.

"Capitol comes with a reputation for excellent customer service, and that is what truly attracted us to the company. We have high expectations," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Koch said residents should notice few changes in their curbside collection under the new contract, except for a new recycling program that will no longer require residents to separate recyclables for collection. Under the program, called "single-stream recycling," residents can place paper, glass, metal cans, plastic, and flattened cardboard in a single container for collection.

Residents can use their existing recycle bin or place a "single-stream recycling" sticker on any trash container. Stickers will be arriving at households within the next few days and will also be available at the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea Street.

Residents are asked to have garbage curbside by 6:30 a.m. on trash day. The new customer service phone number for Capitol beginning June 30 will be 617-376-7556. The DPW phone number for trash collection issues is 617-376-1953.

The recycling program's goal aims to encourage residents to recycle more, and for the first time will include financial benefits to the city. Under a contract with Recycle America of Avon and Old Colony Scrap Metal of Brockton, those companies will pay the city for recyclables.

"The idea is: the more we recycle, the more we can save," said DPW Commissioner Lawrence Prendeville. "We've been working closely with Capitol and we are very confident that they are the right team for the job."

Quincy Falling Short In Meeting Solar Challenge

The city has less than a week left to meet the Quincy Solar Challenge.

If 150 residents or businesses donate to the New England Wind Fund, a Clean Energy Choice program, by June 30, the city will win a free 2-kilowatt solar array for a public school.

Just $5 a month or a one-time donation of $100 will qualify for the challenge.

For every $1 Quincy puts toward the New England Wind Fund, 100 percent will be matched by the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative and invested right back into energy programs in Quincy.

"I'm proud to support the Commonwealth Solar Challenge," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch, who signed up for the Clean Energy Choice program earlier this year.

"It's a great way to support renewable energy and this program is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the volunteers who will make it work."

Residents and businesses ready to put Quincy over the top in meeting the challenge should call 617-524-3950 for more information.

Life Sentence Passed In City Hall Janitor Slaying

Convicted murderer Carlos Seino, 49, of Randolph, whose arrest came nearly four years later after delayed DNA tests, has begun a life sentence, without parole, for the slaying of City Hall custodian Daniel DeCosta, 43.

DeCosta's body was found shortly after 7 a.m. on Aug. 3, 2002 by a dog walker on a path behind the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., not far from his home on Francis Street.

He was last seen leaving a bar on Chestnut Street around 1 a.m. with a large roll of bills from two checks totaling $603 he had cashed at the bar. His wallet was found on his body but the roll of bills was missing.

Seino told police he was in the Chestnut Street bar that night but denied having interacted with DeCosta.

It was not until Seino was convicted of a felony in Plymouth County that his DNA was taken and entered into the data bank. A match was obtained with blood found on DeCosta's body in May, 2006.

A Norfolk Superior Court jury convicted him June 19.

"This has been a long ordeal for the DeCosta family," said District Attorney William Keating. "This remained an unsolved crime for nearly four years."

"Thanks to advances in DNA analysis and the work of the State Police Crime Lab, we were able to serve justice and hopefully help Mr. DeCosta's family move forward from this tragedy."

CAMPAIGNING FOR VOTES - Kim Fallon and Steve Holler, candidates for the mayor of Houghs Neck, at the Public Landing.

Houghs Neck Mayor Contest Heating Up

A friendly rival at the Houghs Neck Landmark, The PL, or Public Landing for the non-Neckers, is drawing attention to the Mayor of Houghs Neck Contest.

Captain Steve Holler collects donations for his campaign fund aboard his vessel the November Gale on Fridays and Saturdays, when he's selling his lobsters "Fresh from my pots to yours."

Kim Fallon, another mayoral candidate, showed up with her campaign signs to take advantage of Steve's customers, "Buy from the Boat, but give Kim your Vote and "Don't vote for him, vote for Kim."

"Kim's campaign team is bringing great spirit to this friendly competition" said Margaret Laforest, president of the Houghs Neck Community Council.

The HNCC is sponsoring the competition as a way to promote the spirit of Houghs Neck and raise money for the renovation of the Houghs Neck Community Center; its programs, and the HNCC Scholarship Fund.

Ralph Jacobs' campaign committee, was also busy over the weekend distributing campaign literature to the participants of Houghs Neck Tball.

Ralph is planning a brunch at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church on Sunday, June 29th from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Tickets for the brunch are $5.

For more information on the Mayor of Houghs Neck Contest, or to make a donation to the Houghs Neck Community Council, contact Margaret Laforest 617-471-1806 or email mlaforest01@hotmail.com

$100,000 for Adams Academy Repairs

Historic Projects Top 2008 Preservation List

The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) recommended and City Council recently approved a $100,000 grant for repairs and improvements to the Adams Academy Building at 8 Adams St., Quincy.

The academy building, a Registered National Historic Landmark, was built in 1872 on the site of John Hancock's birthplace. The Gothic Revival style building currently houses the Quincy Historical Society Museum.

The $100,000 grant is one of six historic preservation projects totaling $236,800 chosen by the CPC for 2008 grants. That sum represents half the committee's funding recommendations this year.

The CPC, also, allocated funds for the following projects:

- $66,300 for park and recreation improvements,
- $165,000 for affordable housing and neighborhood housing services,
- $94,400 for administrative costs

"We may be back before the council," James Fatseas, Chief

Staff for Mayor Thomas Koch said, referring to funds needed for repairs to Abigail Adams Cairn, West Quincy, as requested by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

"It may actually be in a dangerous stage," said Fatseas, adding that the historic structure could possibly topple if not protected soon.

"We look forward to getting this done this season," said Raymondi.

Other historic preservation projects funded by CPA this year include $50,000 for the preservation of records at the City Clerk's office, $30,000 for Souther Tide Mill, $26,800 for Thomas Crane Public Library, and $10,000 for the Stone Cutters Museum.

In addition, the CPC and City Council approved $20,000 for Beechwood Knoll outdoor classroom, signage at Wollaston Beach and a "Heritage and Coastal Trail."

The committee chairman is Steven Perdios with members Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Maureen Mazrimas, Connie Driscoll, Park and Recreation Board, Patrick J. Foley, Planning Board, Susan Canavan, Historic Commission, Paul Kodad, and John Brennan.

Shore Drive To Lose Lane During Regulator Project

Traffic on Quincy Shore Drive at East Squantum Street will be cut down to one lane occasionally after the Fourth of July so that National Grid can move an aging gas regulator to a more serviceable location.

Construction will take place between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. and is expected to take no more than six weeks to complete or well before the opening of schools in September.

The regulator station permits the gas company to reduce pressure from its gas main on Quincy Shore Drive as it distributes gas to North Quincy residential and commercial customers.

The current regulator vault is beneath the south-bound lane of Quincy Shore Drive and experiences water infiltration. The move is to a higher and dryer location behind the loading dock of the CVS.

The one lane reduction on Quincy Shore Drive will be on the west side of the intersection near CVS and the Global Gas Station as a gas line will be brought across the street.

Residents with questions should call Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce McNamee at 617-770-0678.

A SOLAR LIGHTING PANEL will light the World War II Memorial at Merrymount Park, thanks to a gift from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 103 and the Mass Technology Collaborative. From left at the site with the panel are Dennis Magaldi, Local 103 Business Agent Mary Aikens and Jim Fay.

Local 103 Donates Solar Light System For WWII Memorial

The World War II memorial at Merrymount Park will be lighted through a Solar Lighting System, thanks to Electrical Workers Local 103 and the Mass Technology Collaborative.

The lighting system will work and light the memorial at no cost to the city.

"I hope that the citizens and veterans enjoy seeing the light on the statue at night as they can go there and visit," said Marty Aikens of Quincy, Business Agent at Local 103, I.B.E.W.

"We are happy to give back to a great community like Quincy as we have 300 members and their families who live here," said Aikens of the system installed at no charge to the city.

"This is a way to show residents first-hand that this is a wave of our future," said Aikens, adding the public "...can enjoy the benefits of electricity without the CO₂ emissions and contaminants that go with fossil fuel electric generation."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 29, 1613, the Globe Theater, where most of Shakespeare's plays debuted, burns down. The Globe was built in 1599 from the timbers of London's very first permanent theater, Burbage's Theater, built in 1576. The galleries could seat about 1,000 people, with room for another 2,000 "groundlings," who could stand on the ground around the stage.

• On June 28, 1857, Emerson Hough, one of the most successful writers of adventure novels of the Romantic Western genre, is born in Newton, Iowa. One of his most popular works, "The Covered Wagon" (1922), established many of the conventions of the genre that continue to be popular today.

• On June 27, 1922, the American Library Association awards the first Newbery Medal, honoring the year's best children's book, to "The Story of Mankind" by Hendrik Willem van Loon. The award was named for John Newbery, the 18th-century English bookseller and author who was considered the father of children's literature.

• On June 26, 1948, U.S. and British pilots begin delivering food and supplies by airplane to Berlin after the city is isolated by a Soviet Union blockade. By July 15, an average of 2,500 tons of supplies was being flown into the city every day, with planes landing every four minutes round the clock.

• On June 25, 1967, the Beatles record "All You Need Is Love" in front of an international television audience. The six-minute version recorded on the TV show, however, was cut down to four minutes for its release as a single.

• On June 24, 1987, comedian, actor and musician Jackie Gleason dies. He was one of TV's most popular stars in a number of shows, including "The Honey-mooners" and "The Jackie Gleason Show," which ran throughout most of the 1950s and '60s.

• On June 23, 1992, Mafia boss John Gotti, nicknamed the "Teflon Don" after escaping uncaptured from several trials during the 1980s, is sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole after being found guilty on 14 counts of conspiracy to commit murder and racketeering.

Warming Up The Rumor Mill

This is a Presidential and State Election year, as you know.

But apparently for some, it's already time to start thinking of next year's City Election.

At least to speculate. The rumor mill is already warming up.

First rumor making the rounds is that former Mayor Bill Phelan may return to the political arena next year. Not for mayor but as a city councillor at-large seat.

But don't bet on it. It really doesn't make much sense.

Ask the man himself if he's thinking such thoughts and he says frankly:

"I'm not interested in being a city councillor at-large."

And adds:

"My interest is in the schools."

No, he says, that doesn't mean he is thinking of maybe returning to the School Committee.

Phelan was in his second year on the school committee in 2001 when he challenged and won a stunning 17-vote upset victory over six-term incumbent James Sheets in the closest mayoral election in the city's history.

If he were to serve on the city council, he would not be the first former mayor to do so.

Frank McCauley, a four-term mayor from 1982-

1989, returned to the political scene as a school committee member in 1996 and then as councillor at-large in 1998. He served in the council until 2005, the last two years as council president, closing out a distinguished 32-year career on a high note.

Running for a lower municipal office after being mayor-the most powerful political figure in the city-never bothered him.

"You know," he said at the time, "John Quincy Adams served with distinction as a Congressman after being President."

Phelan says he's not interested in being a city councillor. But at age 48, he still has plenty of time to return to the political scene.

Maybe, who knows, as in a mayoral comeback bid. Other former mayors have done that.

Right now, though, he's more interested in his law practice.

Meanwhile, the old rumor mill will be cranking out more of its political speculations about who's running for what in next year's city election.

But, let's get a new President elected first.

QUINCY'S CHRIS MANNIX, a writer for Sports Illustrated, must have had some warm personal feelings the night the comeback Celtics crushed the LA Lakers for the NBA title.

Mannix has a sentimental link to the Celtics. As a Boston College High School student he was a Celtics ball boy.

He is fondly remembered by City Clerk Joseph Shea and his Election Department staff.

Mannix worked part-time helping out on election nights and during the summer 15 or so years ago.

"He lugged ballot boxes around for us on election nights," says Shea. "He's a nice kid and we are all proud to see him make good as a sportswriter."

Two staff members, Trish Bossart and Nicky Crispo, stayed up to watch the post-game celebration and press conference. And got a fond bonus when Mannix appeared as one of the writers asking the questions.

His parents, Dennis and Maureen Mannix live on Heritage Road. His father, a former Quincy police lieutenant is now the Natick police chief.

Chris incidentally maintains his Quincy address and interest in his hometown. He votes by absentee ballot when he can't get back on Election Day.

LAURIE ALLEN, former City Purchasing Agent and popular City Hall figure, has a new title.

She's executive assistant to Howard Olsher, Director of State Auditors in the office of Auditor Joe DeNucci.

Laurie, who is located in the McCormack Building says, "I love it."

She's back in familiar territory having served on Gov. William Weld's staff.

Congratulations and good luck.

PERSONAL: A nice note from Cathy Rowe, former Quincy resident now living in Leesburg, FL.

Cathy, who receives The Sun by mail writes: "I have been away for two years and still miss Quincy like crazy. Thanks for the opportunity to keep up with what's going on."

"I really look forward to my copies of The Sun. When they arrive it's like a visit from an old friend."

Thanks for the kind words, Cathy. You know what they say: "Once a Quincyite, always a Quincyite."

Boston Harbor Explorers Program Comes To Quincy

Boston Harbor Explorers, a youth environmental education program that is offered free of charge by Save the Harbor/Save the Bay, will operate out of the William F. Ryan Boathouse on Black's Creek this summer.

The program for children ages 8 to 14 will run on Monday, Tuesday and Friday mornings from 9 a.m. to 12 noon beginning Monday, June 30. Registration will be held Wednesday, June 25, along with Recreation Sailing registration at the Pageant Field Pavilion.

"This program is a great opportunity for Quincy youths to explore their marine environment and have some fun," said Barry Welch, director of Quincy Parks and Recreation.

Boston Harbor Explorers is a daily hands-on environmental program that teaches young people to explore the harbor for themselves using fishing rods, lobster traps, dip nets, microscopes, binoculars, even underwater cameras.

It is currently offered in three city of Boston sailing centers, Piers Park in East Boston, Courageous in Charlestown and Dorchester and Harry McDonough in Southie.

"Boston Harbor Explorers brings the harbor to life and we are always looking to expand our programs to reach more kids," said Bruce Berman, director of Stategies and Communications at Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

"This is an excellent opportunity for Quincy youth to learn about the harbor and marine environment and become stewards of their waterfront."

Scout Troop 42 Garage Sale At St. John's

Boy Scout Troop 42 will hold its first garage sale 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at St. John's Church parking lot, 44 School St., Quincy.

The Scouts will offer refreshments for sale, including baked items and drinks and there will be a "50/50" raffle.

All proceeds will benefit Boy Scout Troop 42.

SURF BATHING, WOLLASTON BEACH, QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS

THIS POSTCARD is a view of Wollaston Beach and the Wollaston Yacht Club just before it was destroyed by fire in 1948. Squantum is in the distance across Quincy Bay. The Yacht Club building was floated out to its pilings in 1904 when the Boulevard was going to be built through its land on the shoreline. Expanded on the shore side in the 1920's, the club had a large function hall and offered private lockers to its members around the second story. Sixty years after the fire the club remains only a small section of the first floor, the only part of the building fire hoses could reach. MDC lifeguards who worked out of the old police station/bathroom across the street used the small boat shown here in the center. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

American Forces Ordered To Aid Of South Korea

By FRANK McCAULEY

President Harry Truman today ordered United States planes and warships to the aid of South Korean forces. He laid down a policy of standing firm against Communist aggression in the far Pacific.

As part of the broader policy, Truman directed that the U.S. Seventh Fleet be prepared to prevent any Communist attack on Formosa, the island refuge of the Chinese Nationalistic government.

It was learned that President Truman's historic decisions were reached at a high policy meeting at the White House.

AIRPLANE CRASH OFF OKINAWA KILLS LT. WALTER DELLA CHIESA

First Lt. Walter A. Della Chiesa, only son of City Councilor Amelio Della Chiesa and Mrs. Della Chiesa, was killed Sunday, June 25 off the Pacific island of Okinawa when his aircraft crashed into the sea.

Lt. Della Chiesa's death occurred on the day that North Korea forces invaded South Korea. Lt. Della Chiesa was married to the former Jane H. Buckner of Braintree. The couple was married in June 1948 shortly after his graduation from West Point as the 12th highest graduate in his class.

Hats Off To Brian Buckley

Hats off to lifelong Quincy resident and community activist Brian Buckley, who recently hosted and ran the 30th annual and last "Broom Golf Classic" at Presidents Golf Course.

Over the past 30 years, Brian has organized and held this event to raise money for a variety of causes that benefit the city of Quincy and other charities like the American Cancer Society, the Jimmy Fund and many others. This year's tournament marked the end of the journey which began in 1978 as a few friends getting together to golf and turned into a major golf event.

The tourney, always known for its colorful themes and cast of outrageously clad well-known Quincy characters, has been an incredible experience for all its participants, as well as the charities it served. Buckley, this year, dedicated the tournament to longtime player and great gentleman, Don Conboy, who recently passed away.

Mr. Conboy was represented by his wife who came to the opening ceremony. Additionally, three Conboy boys participated in the tournament. Donny, Jimmy and Roger (all the way from Texas) played as a tribute to their Dad and to honor him with a scholarship in his name donated by the proceeds from the tournament. Mr. Conboy was truly an inspiration to all of us who played in the tournament competing into his 80's and always dressing the part depending on the year's theme.

More importantly, Brian's continued efforts, as a result of his tournament, will certainly be missed by the entire city. His work over the years with Quincy's youth and elderly is well known and respected. It is a privilege to be associated with such a great tournament (even though I am a very bad golfer) because of the people I got to meet and become friends with over the 15 or so years I was able to participate.

That is truly what the tournament was about friendship, charity and a willingness to laugh at others and more importantly with others when Brian would turn his wit on you. It has been a great ride.

Brian, this is something you can be proud of and something that all of us will always remember as some of the best times of our lives.

Thanks Bucko. You're the best and keep smiling!

Some Suggestions for Vice President

If Senator Barack Obama does not choose Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton as his running mate, I would like to suggest to him to consider a few highly qualified candidates for the Vice Presidency:

If Senator Obama would like to consider a Democrat, I would like to suggest Congressman William Delahunt. He is a peacemaker and a super diplomat. He can do things that other diplomats can only dream about.

NORFOLK COUNTY REGISTER of Probate Patrick McDermott (center) was guest speaker at a recent current events breakfast at Beechwood On the Bay where his two uncles, Jack Denekent (left) and Don Burke were in his audience.

McDermott Honored As Beechwood Guest Speaker

Norfolk County Registrar of Probate and former City Councillor Patrick McDermott was the guest speaker at a recent Current Events breakfast at Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St.

Beechwood staff acknowledged and thanked McDermott for his many contributions to the center.

McDermott is currently serving a six-year term as Registrar of Probate.

In his presentation, McDermott described his current position, outlined his personal history and his experiences as a city councillor and private attorney.

His audience of senior citizens, also, learned about McDermott's early years, his musical background, his time in France and his enrollment at the Boston Archdiocesan Choir School.

Call Maryann Mahony at 617-471-5712 for more information about the monthly breakfasts.

Wild Animals, Sea Glass Among Library Summer Highlights

Caring for wild animals and crafting sea glass jewelry will join storytelling, movies and other handicrafts in the summer adventures for youngsters at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

For every 500 books read or visits made to the library, the Friends of the Library will "zooadopt" an animal at the Franklin Park Zoo in Boston or the Stone Zoo in Stoneham.

Each time a youngster of any age visits the children's room or a branch library adds to the "zooadopt" display. The number of books read is recorded on the online summer reading program log.

The Summer Library Adventure begins with the Wild Reads Carnival Thursday, June 26, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon on the front lawn of the Main Library, when kids of all ages can visit Jungle, Ocean, African and Polar booths to waddle like a penguin, feed a hungry lion and other games.

There will also be face painting and bubble blowing.

The Adventure will be joined at 11 a.m. by Tad Travis with Mr. D. J.'s Ultimate Kids Party, a wild mix of karaoke, games and dancing.

"Arts to Go," the weekly drop-in crafts program, will begin Monday, June 30, with paper plate penguins as the project, and continue for eight weeks of art activities that travel throughout the library branches in Quincy.

"Summer Storytellers" and "Pajama Storytimes" will return Tuesday, July 8. Unique programs this summer include wild animal visits, movie matinees, a puppet show and concert and a video game night and special craft programs for older children.

The first of those special programs will be "Sea Glass Treasure Jewelry" Tuesday, July 1, at 7 p.m. at the North Quincy Branch Library, 381 Hancock St., in which wearable art is created under Pam Boutin of Duxbury Designs.

Participants learn to wire wrap sea glass and other treasures from the ocean such as shells, coral, stones and driftwood and then incorporate them into a piece of personal jewelry.

In one session, you can make a nautical-themed bracelet and learn the techniques needed to make necklaces, earrings or anklets. Bring along a favorite beach treasure that may be used in your bracelet.

Registration for the sea glass program is required and limited to Quincy residents ages 8 and over.

All the summer programs at the library are free but some are limited to Quincy residents only and require registration.

They are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Massachusetts Regional Library Systems, the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, Waste Management, the Massachusetts Cultural Council through the Quincy Arts Lottery grant program and a South Coastal Bank CARES grant.

Kilroy's Miniature Golf Open For Third Season

Kilroy's Mini Golf of Quincy, an 18-hole miniature golf course adjacent to the USS Salem and Naval Shipbuilding Museum in the former Fore River Shipyard, has reopened for its third season.

New on the list of activities on the course this year will be a weekend mini golf league for children, mini golf tournaments and a weekly historic flag contest.

Kilroy's Mini Golf is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. The cost is $5 but when combined with a visit to the ship the combo ticket is $8 per person or $30 for a family of four or more.

"Kilroy's and the USS Salem are a terrific day trip for all ages," said Michael Condon, executive director. "We have worked very hard to make the Shipbuilding Museum fun for adults and children alike."

The ship, the museum and the miniature golf course are located at 739 Washington St. (Route 3A), at the foot of the Fore River Bridge. For more information call 617-479-7900.

Quincy Seniors In Fire Safety Prevention Film

Local seniors were filmed recently engaged in fire and accident prevention programs for a new DVD release to be distributed by the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA).

The seniors were filmed taking part in various activities and were interviewed talking about safety in their homes.

The NFPA's new fire and fall prevention DVD entitled "At Our Age" will be distributed throughout North America in conjunction with NFPA's original program, "Remembering When," a film that is used all over the world.

The smoke alarm installation section of "Remembering When" is based on the smoke alarm installation program conducted in Quincy through a partnership with Beechwood Community Center, the Quincy Fire Department, the Quincy Firefighters union and the Quincy Chapter of Rotary International.

2007 Community Heroes Awards: Impact Quincy Recognizes Local Heroes Among Us

For the past few years, Impact Quincy has sponsored the Community Heroes Award event to recognize individuals who have been strong advocates for the prevention of substance abuse, and for their contribution to making the city of Quincy a healthier community.

The Department of Public Health Commissioner, John Auerbach has noted, "Substance abuse is a serious public health problem in Massachusetts..." Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch has also stated, "I became acutely aware of the substance abuse problem in Quincy during my campaign for Mayor last year." Impact Quincy (IQ) is a community-based coalition in Quincy that is currently working on substance abuse prevention programs in collaboration with key members of the Quincy community. IQ is a program of Bay State Community Services (BSCS), and is funded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Service Administration.

40 Leaders Invited

Impact Quincy Will Host Summit On Drug, Alcohol Abuse

Impact Quincy will invite some 40 local leaders to a summit July 17 to help develop strategies on drug and alcohol abuse prevention, according to Alejandro Rivera, Program Director of Impact Quincy (IQ), Bay State Community Service.

The coalition will focus on how best to allocate two major state Department of Health (DPH) grants totaling almost $600,000 over a period of three years. The DPH awarded the grants to the city in partnership with Bay State Community Service.

One grant focuses on preventing underage drinking and provides $80,000 a year for three years while the second grant of $125,000 a year targets substance abuse prevention.

Rivera said that it's important to get input from a diverse group representing social agencies, schools, churches, police and the city before mapping out programs. "We want to have representatives from different groups so it's not one point of view," said Rivera whose agency will be overseeing the grants in conjunction with the city. The two grants include funds for planning.

Impact Quincy is already preparing for the meeting, according to IQ's spokesperson Arlene Goldstein who said she's interpreting data from the agency's recent survey of young adults in Quincy.

Both Rivera and Goldstein described Quincy's serious drug and alcohol abuse statistics which are evident in the increasing admissions for emergency services at local hospitals.

Drug and alcohol abuse statistics are increasing across the Commonwealth but the pace is faster here on the South Shore, according to Rivera.

"It's a very big problem here," said Goldstein who credited Mayor Thomas Koch with the city's success in being awarded the grant.

"The mayor was brave enough to tell the truth," Goldstein said of Koch's election campaign pledge to reduce drug and alcohol abuse problems in the city.

Goldstein, also, cited Police Lt. Peter Turowski who directs the police department's Alcohol Compliance program. That program provides undercover agents who test retailers' compliance with liquor laws, specifically regarding the sale of alcohol to minors.

"We have been noted as a model for other cities to follow," said Goldstein of Lt. Turowski's work. Goldstein believes that program helped the city qualify for some of the grant funds.

Helen Murphy and Chris Cassani will represent Mayor Koch at coalition meetings, according to Rivera.

Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, is funded through the DPH and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Service Administration.

Ron Mariano Receives Quincy Medical Center Leadership In Healthcare Award

State Representative Ronald Mariano was recently presented with the Quincy Medical Center Leadership in Healthcare award at the annual QMC physician dinner.

"Representative Mariano served a pivotal role in the recent passage of health care reform and was a vital part of changing the health care landscape to provide more access to more of our citizens," said Gary W. Gibbons, MD, QMC President and CEO. "Ron has also been a very good friend to Quincy Medical Center and has worked very hard to make sure we thrive to serve the residents of our community."

The award to Mariano was the centerpiece of an event to honor him and physicians at Quincy Medical Center.

"Quincy Medical Center is so important to our

Personal Items For Troops Being Collected In Squantum

The 99th annual Fourth of July Parade in Squantum next week will feature a truck to collect personal items to be donated to American troops serving overseas, particularly those at the front in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers will be working alongside members of the Robert I. Nickerson American Legion Post and other Squantum residents to fill the vehicle.

"I am happy that we were able to organize this event to give back to our troops," said Morrissey. "While we celebrate our nation's freedom, it is important to recognize those who defend us every day."

MIKE MORRISSEY

Squantum has at least five families with members on active duty in all part of the world.

If you are unable to meet the truck along the parade route, your items can be brought to the Nickerson Legion Post between the hours of 3 to 10 p.m. June 28 through July 3.

If you would like to make a donation of cash to help defray the cost of packing and shipping supplies, you may make checks payable to:

Robert I. Nickerson Troop Fund

20 Moon Island Rd.

Squantum, MA 02171

"Packages from home provide a great morale boost and show our troops that we care and are always thinking of them," said Ayers. "Our troops are very important to us and this gesture will bring some of the comforts of home to them."

The most requested items by the troops include:

Postage money, cup-a-soup, chunky soup, pretzels, raisins, Granola bars, crossword puzzles, Rice Krispie treats, flashlights, tuna fish in packets, peanut butter, jelly, Twizzlers, Chex Mix, multi-vitamins, beef jerky, body wash, batteries, footbaths.

Powdered drink mixes, tea bags, cocoa, sugar packets, gum/hard candy, instant oatmeal, stationary, lip balm, Haribo Gold Gummy Bears, Mach 3 razors, stick deodorant, shampoo/conditioner, trail mixes, windshield cleaner, mouthwash, nail clippers, plain white boot socks, toilet paper, home town clothing.

Tissues, hand/foot warmers, sunscreen, hand sanitizers, DVD movies, high protein bars, playing cards, toothbrushes, shaving cream, Band Aids, feminine products, foot powder, hairbrushes/combs, ear swabs, disposable wipes, international phone cards, magazines/books, gloves, T-shirts/Long Johns.

The troops also frequently request soccer balls, deflated, to be passed out to Iraqi and Afghan children they meet while on patrol.

If you are aware of any local troops currently serving overseas, contact Sen. Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494 or Rep. Ayers' office at 617-722-2230.

Clarification

The Quincy Sun reported last week that the Friends of the Star of the Sea, the suppressed Catholic parish in Squantum, are seeking a parish of their own and a pastor of their own.

"Not quite so," says Maureen Mazrimas, the co-chair of the Friends. "A pastor living in Squantum would be more convenient but it is not necessary.

"The Friends are more concerned about maintaining the vitality of their faith community by restoring the celebration of sacramental liturgies (baptisms, weddings and funerals) than they are about the physical presence of an 'in house' pastor."

Since its suppression in October, 2004, Star of the Sea has regained some status as a chapel, with one Sunday mass a week celebrated by a visiting priest but no baptisms, weddings or funerals.

SWAP Earns Tax Abatements For Seniors

'Get Lead Out Of Fishing' Project

5 Boy Scouts Attend Conference In Sweden

Five Boy Scouts from St. Agatha's Troop 5 in Milton represented the United States in Sweden at the United Nations Environmental Youth Program, Volvo Adventure.

Scouts Robert Hudson and Matt Morris of Quincy, along with Scouts Mike Browne, Graham Strang and Alex Jamal of Milton presented the project, "Get the Lead Out of Fishing" to an audience of nearly 1000 people from all over the world. The five spent 10 days in Sweden.

The St. Agatha Scouts' project was initiated and developed by Browne, the team leader. In the presentation, the Scouts described wildlife deaths directly attributed to the 480 million lead fishing weights lost every year by anglers.

According to Browne's statistics, 52 percent of loons, 32 percent of trumpeter swans and 25 percent of bald eagles die from lead poisoning due to lost lead fishing weights.

An international panel, including representatives from the World Wildlife Fund and the United Nations, judged the projects presented by St. Agatha Scouts and 14 teams from all over the world.

A PRESIDENTIAL AWARD was presented to St. Agatha Boy Scout Mike Browne by President George Bush and First Lady Laura Bush for Browne's project, "Get The Lead Out of Fishing." Browne earned his Eagle Scout Award for the project. He and four other Scouts presented the project to a United Nations panel during a ten-day trip to Sweden.

While in Sweden, the St. Agatha's team wrote a white paper for the United Nations on water issues, and established contacts with other teams from all over the world.

The Scouts were impressed with their experience at the conference in Gothenburg, their visit to Stockholm and the Royal Palace, and the themes of the conference.

India's team project impressed Jamal because they "focused on eliminating malaria in their location." He also liked Australia's project, which targeted plastic bags and the re-use of materials.

"It was interesting how much more aware people are of the problems concerning the environment and how to solve them," said Jamal while Morris observed, "Seeing so many different cultures made me realize we're not so different."

ferent."

Scout Hudson believes, "More people should be working towards environmental changes, implementing programs and conferences of their own to educate people on what needs to be done to change the world for the better."

Browne began the study as his Eagle Scout project in May, 2007. Scouts from Troop 5 then assisted by packaging non-lead weights, attending fishing derbies and working to educate anglers regarding the dangers of lead.

Browne received his Eagle Scout award in November, 2007.

In April, Browne was awarded the President's Environmental Youth Award by President George Bush and First Lady Laura Bush at a ceremony in the White House Rose Garden. He has, also testified at the State House in support of Senate Bill 466 to ban lead from fishing.

Browne received the first-ever Boy Scout "Heroes of Conservation" award from Field and Stream magazine. He has also won recognition from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Wildlife Society. He

In addition, Browne has been interviewed on local television stations and appeared at numerous fishing derbies and environmental conferences.

The team thanked St. Agatha parish and the Boston Minuteman Council for their support.

Council Approves Updated Precious Metals Ordinance

City Council recently approved an ordinance expanding previous statutes governing the purchase and sale of precious metals, such as gold, platinum and silver. Under the new law, dealers must hold each item for 30 days before jewelry or other items may be melted down or resold.

The law is intended to protect victims of theft whose jewelry or other valuables may be sold and melted down before police can track the thief. Originally, items could be destroyed after 14 days.

In addition, the city's licensed shopkeepers must e-mail to police headquarters a list and full description of each item purchased for resale and a picture and identification of the person selling the item. The list must be provided on a daily basis to the police department's secure site.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi submitted the proposed ordinance change early in May and a public hearing was held in mid-May.

After the public hearing, councillors agreed to changes protecting an individual seller's privacy and requiring enhanced security on the police-reporting site.

Monument Maker Fined For Wastewater Dumping

The state has fined W. C. Canniff & Sons, Inc., of Quincy, $33,625 for industrial wastewater violations but $17,625 was suspended provided the company fully complies with all agreements in a consent order within a year.

Canniff, one of the largest manufacturers of gravestone monuments in the state, was found to be discharging an industrial wash of paint thinner and acid into a floor drain that went directly into the ground at the facility at 84 Penn St., South Quincy.

"This type of discharge needs to be properly managed and not dumped on the floor and left to seep into the ground," said Richard Chalpin, director of the State Department of Environmental Protection's Northeast Regional office in Wilmington.

"The company has professed its readiness to make amends by assessing any damage, cleaning it up and preventing the possibility of a recurrence."

Koch Meets With Lt. Gov. Murray On Issues

Lt. Gov. Tim Murray met last week with Mayor Thomas Koch at City Hall to discuss a number of issues and projects at both the state and local level.

Koch discussed the city's plans for Quincy Center redevelopment, other economic development projects, and lobbied for the state's assistance to spur the redevelopment of the Fore River Shipyard.

"The governor and lieutenant governor have truly opened up the doors of state government to cities and towns, and I look forward to continue working with our state leaders on projects that

Dr. Stephen McElroy Honored For 10 Years Of Service To QMC

Quincy resident, Stephen McElroy, MD, was honored for his 10 years of service to Quincy Medical Center during the medical staff's recent evening of appreciation to celebrate the longstanding commitment of their medical staff peers.

Awards were presented to Quincy Medical Center-affiliated physicians in recognition of medical staff service milestones of 10, 15, 20, 25 and 30 years of service, during the annual awards banquet held at the Wollaston Golf Club in Milton.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, and emergency medicine.

Quincy Women Helping To Save Animals From Floods In Quincy, Ill.

In Biblical times it was Noah and his Ark who saved the animals when the Tigris and Euphrates overflowed their banks.

In the early summer of 2008, it's the International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW) of Yarmouth Port that's rescuing the animals from the angry waters of the Mississippi.

A team from the Fund, in collaboration with the American Humane Association and the Animal Rescue League of Boston, has set up a temporary shelter in the Adams County Fairgrounds in Quincy, Ill.

Already, 20 fawns, rescued by local groups from atop a broken levee, are being cared for at the shelter along with two horses, one sow, three chickens, three dogs and two kittens.

"These fawns cannot be more than four weeks old," said Dick Green, disaster relief manager of the IFAW, "and with their mothers assumed dead they are completely reliant on us for their survival."

"We have constructed temporary sheltering for the animals and will continue to bottle feed."

The fawns will be cared for until they can be turned over to a wildlife rehabilitator for reintegration into the wild but many more are expected as the most severe flooding in years moves down the river.

Jenny Benjamin, the Adams County animal warden, welcomed the assistance from the Massachusetts groups as all local shelters reached capacity with wildlife, livestock and pets.

Tracy Reis, manager of animal emergency services for the American Humane Association, is head of shelter operations on-site and has been working with the group since Hurricane Katrina hit New Orleans.

A key operator in raising funds for the rescue project is Nancy Noble McLaughlin, daughter of Gloria and Robert Noble of Quincy, who is director of development for the IFAW.

Open House, Yard Sale At Animal Shelter Saturday

The Quincy Animal Shelter will hold an open house and indoor yard sale Saturday, June 28, to show off its newly installed storage shed and give visitors a chance to tour the shelter and meet residents and staff.

The open house will be held between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at the shelter, 56 Broad St., and the yard sale will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Bryan VFW Post, 26 Broad St.

Hot dogs, popcorn and soft drinks will be available at the open house as well as a bake sale and face painting and balloons for the kids.

The new shed, which was badly needed to store supplies for the care of the animals, was obtained with the help of the Friends of the Quincy Animal Shelter.

More than 200 people attended a fund raising dinner dance where enough money was raised to purchase an 8-by-16 shed through raffles, ticket sales and donations.

Suffolk Awards Victor Ng Certificate In Civic Leadership

Suffolk University awarded North Quincy's Victor Ng a certificate in civic leadership recently through the university's Initiative for Diversity in Civic Leadership (IDCL).

"Thanks to the IDCL program, there are now 27 more people who are better prepared to contribute and have an impact on our government for today and tomorrow," Ng said during his address to fellow participants and their friends.

In his address entitled, "27 Amendments, A new History in the Making," Ng reminded the audience that the United States Constitution has been amended 27 times, consistently revealing this country's "tolerance for change."

"Taking a look back in history, there was a time in this country when we were not allowed to choose and practice the religion of our choice," said Ng who also spoke of women's right to vote and America's history of slavery. All were changed by Constitutional amendments.

"Today we face a new set of challenges," Ng said, noting that "the needs of the American people are constantly evolving and we need to take action and make our voices heard in order to influence change...."

The IDCL program's mission is to develop a new generation of leaders of color committed to public service. The ceremony was held in the Great Hall at the State House.

"The faces of America are changing; diversity is inevitable," says Ng who was a candidate for councillor at large in the last Quincy election.

"We all have an immigrant story to tell, whether it was 20 or 30 years or 100 to 200 years ago," Ng said, describing the importance of Quincy historically and today. "(Quincy) will continue to be influential as we develop into a global society."

Since January, Ng has participated in the IDCL program which is sponsored by MassVOTE, a non-partisan voting rights organization and by Oiste, a statewide Latino civic organization.

Ng served as a delegate at the 2008 Massachusetts Democratic State Convention held in Lowell recently. He was selected as a minority add-on delegate.

A graduate of Boston Latin School, Ng earned his bachelor's degree from Northeastern University. He is currently employed by the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education.

QRTA Awards $157,050 In Scholarships

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) awarded 57 scholarships totaling $157,000 to Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates.

It brings to $1,526,450 the total amount and the number of recipients to 717 since 1981.

The 27th annual awards ceremony was held in the Sawyer Center at the Beechwood Knoll School presided over by QRTA President Arthur Foster assisted by board members.

Nine of this year's recipients received $8,000 Harry A. and Louisa P. Beede Memorial Scholarships.

The Beede scholarships were made possible by a bequest of more than $1,280 from the Beede Estate. Mr. Beede was the first principal of Broad Meadows Middle School.

Granite Railway Tours On Saturday, Sunday

The Granite Railway 'Quarry To Wharf' Tours will be held Saturday and Sunday. The tours allow participants to visit the first chartered U.S. commercial railroad and view related historic sites of interest and beauty.

The railway, located in West Quincy and East Milton, provided a means of transporting granite from the Quincy quarries to outside destinations and was the first commercial railroad in the country.

Participants will view the preserved 1826 Bunker Hill Ledge terminal, the 1830 double-track incline, several quarries with spectacular views, the stone Neponset River wharf, and other historic destinations.

Pre-registration is strongly advised by Tour Leader Vic Campbell who can be reached at 617-822-4046. A $10 donation is requested.

The tours are held at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. However, the Sunday morning tour is only run with sufficient pre-registration. Meeting place for the tours is at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

INVITATION TO BID

The City of Quincy, Park and Forestry Department is seeking sealed bids for the development of approximately 2.85-acre Little League Field in Quincy, Massachusetts. Bids will be received at the City of Quincy, City Hall Purchasing Department, Attn: Rhonda L. Merrill, Purchasing Agent, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169 until 11:00 a.m., Wednesday, July 9, 2008, at which time they shall be opened publicly.

The work generally includes construction of 1 (one) irrigated natural turf little league field, a new gravel parking lot, reconstruction and overlay of an existing asphalt parking lot, construction of a interior access walkway, installation of irrigation system, and miscellaneous site amenities (stormwater management, fencing and gates, erosion controls, etc.) All work must be completed as a single project in a continuous manner in full accordance with plans and specifications prepared by Gale Associates, Inc., 163 Libbey Parkway, Weymouth, MA 02189.

The completion date for all aspects of the work shall be no later than November 10, 2008.

A refundable deposit of $50,000 in the form of cash or check made payable to the City of Quincy shall be required for each set of contract documents. Bidders requesting contract documents by mail may call with their "Federal Express" or "UPS" account number. The contract documents may be obtained during the business hours of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169. Specifications will be available June 25, 2008.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total value of the bid in the form of a bid bond or certified/treasurer's check.

The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with the Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as last revised. All federal, state and City of Quincy regulations in relation to Minority Business Enterprise, Women's Business Enterprise, Minority Work Force, Equal Employment Opportunity, Employment of Quincy Residents and subject to the minimum wage rates set under the Massachusetts Prevailing Wage Law Chapter 149, §26. The City reserves the right to waive any informality in or to reject any or all bids when such an action is deemed in the best interests of the City.

Non-responsive and/or unbalanced bids may be rejected.

Illegal Fireworks

I received a flyer from the State Fire Marshal* (FIREFACTORS: Office of the State Fire Marshal), which included statistics on illegal fireworks use and a sample of actual incidents which occurred within the Bay State during 2007.

I am more concerned with the circumstances of these incidents rather than the actual statistics where I believe people can relate to specific scenarios. I am certain that none of the people involved in these specific incidents bought fireworks with the intent of losing fingers or burning homes, although these are some of the documented results.

Let me convey some here: "On July 1, 2007 the Lawrence Fire Department was dispatched to a vehicle fire... Fireworks being carried in the bed of the pickup truck ignited and the fire spread to other items in the truck's bed. Damages estimated to be $1,000."

"On July 4, 2007 the Boston Fire Department was called to a 3-unit apartment building. Someone playing with fireworks exploded on the rear porch starting the fire. Damages were estimated to be $25,000."

"On July 4, 2007 the Stow Fire Department was dispatched to a medical call. A 28-year old male lost parts of three fingers... when a homemade fireworks exploded."

"On August 11, 2007 the Fall River Fire Department was called to a fire in a 3-unit apartment building. The fire was caused by exploding fireworks in the living room of one of the apartments... Damages were estimated to be $125,000."

"On July 4, 2007 a 13-year old Marshfield boy received burns to 5% of his body surface area when he was hit by an exploding bottle rocket."

"On July 30, 2007 a 14-year old West Boylston boy received burns to approximately 14% of his body surface area when he picked up burning fireworks."

In the past decade, 69% of the victims of fireworks were children under the age of 18. One-third were children between 10 and 14 years old.

The regrets occur after the damage is done. The precautions associated with a professional display alone are extensive. Even then, considering the crowds and nature of explosives, we must trust in the wisdom of code and the professionalism of those certified to conduct the display.

Illegal, unsupervised fireworks can lead to circumstances no one can anticipate, but these incidents can be avoided. I am certain that those involved in the above incidents did not consider the consequences of their actions. Don't take a chance with illegal fireworks.

Enjoy your holiday and celebrate it without a regrettable outcome. Leave fireworks to the professionals. Thank you!

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, June 12, 2008, at approximately 1:30 P.M., Officers' Matt Miller, Declan Breslin and James Dentrement of the Community Police Bicycle Unit, were on bicycle patrol in the Quincy Center area. They were in the rear of the Stop N Shop office building on Hancock Street and the walkway behind City Hall looking for drug activity.

The Community Policing Officers, along with walking beat Officer Mike Brandolini have recently made numerous arrests for illegal drugs.

As the officers pedaled into the parking garage from Granite Street, a young male known to the Officers for a recent drug arrest in the same area, was on a bicycle pedaling in the opposite direction out of the garage. Officer Breslin attempted to engage the suspect in a conversation, but the suspect pedaled past them, crossing over Granite Street and onto Ross Way.

The officers followed the suspect as he rode behind the Family Dollar store. At this point, Officer Breslin observed the suspect reach into his right front pocket and remove an unknown object and place it into his mouth. To the officers, this is commonly known as an individual who is attempting to destroy or conceal an illegal substance.

Seconds later, the officers saw the suspect reach into his pocket and throw his hand up in the air, discarding a glassine bag with an unknown substance. The officers now attempted to stop the suspect, who turned up the alley beside the former Alba's Restaurant, heading toward Hancock Street.

Officer Miller yelled to the suspect three times to stop, but the suspect continued on. Driving recklessly, the suspect blindly drove out of the alley and on to Hancock Street, where he crashed into several pedestrians with his bicycle.

The suspect then jumped off his bicycle and attempted to run. The suspect failed to heed the orders of the Officers telling him to stop, so the Officers corralled him and after a brief but violent struggle, the suspect was brought to the ground. After the suspect was handcuffed, Officer Breslin returned to the area where the suspect threw the glassine bag and was able to find it, containing a green/brownish substance believed to be marijuana.

The pedestrians were not injured. The suspect, a 19-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of Class D drug and Resisting Arrest."

Nice Work!

PAST BREAKS: Wall Street, Hilda Street, Hughes Street, 200 block of Greenleaf Street, 500 Falls Boulevard.

REMINDER: Now that the warm weather is here, residents often like the flow of cool air through screen doors and windows. This reduces the level of home security because entry can easily be gained by cutting a hole through the screen and either opening the door from the inside or by pushing the screen up. Be sure to secure your home if you are going out during the day - remember, no car in the driveway and easy access to screened windows makes your home more attractive to criminals. As always, lock all doors and ground level windows overnight. Sensor lighting is also a cost efficient security device that can help ward off criminals and warn you that someone is entering your property.

DOOR-TO-DOOR SALES: With the nice weather here, there is often an increase in vendors selling merchandise door to door in neighborhoods. Vendors are required to register with the Police Department and if the vendor clears a criminal record check, a photo I.D. will be issued by the City of Quincy. For safety purposes, the Crime Prevention Unit does not recommend conducting business with these vendors. Remember:

- Each time you open your door to an unknown person, you may be putting yourself at risk.
- If the offer is so good, why do these vendors have to come to you?
- The criminal record check only eliminates vendors with known histories. Many of these vendors are transient and may not have been caught for crimes committed.
- The criminal record check clearance does not guarantee ethical business practices.
- Religious groups are exempt.

REAL ESTATE

The Benefits of Being Green

(ARA) - Kermit the Frog once sang, "It's not easy being green." When it comes to modern remodeling, however, not only is it easier than ever to go green, environmentally conscious renovations can deliver significant cost, health and aesthetic benefits.

Each year, Americans spend about $160 billion on remodeling, according to the National Association of Realtors. They remodel to make better use of living space, add storage, replace dated or worn-out features, or simply to personalize their homes. Environmental concerns and rising energy costs are driving an increasing number of homeowners toward green remodeling. Builders and remodelers are responding by offering energy-efficient appliances, such as tankless water heaters, double- or triple-paneled windows, and programmable thermostats.

For all the interesting going green, uncertainties about cost, difficulty in finding green products and the fear of losing the air of luxury may keep some homeowners away from the trend. It's important for consumers to understand their options and make educated decisions on which green building products will best serve their interests, and why a green remodel would be the best choice for them.

Cost Benefits

Energy efficient appliances not only lower your monthly utility costs, but may make you eligible for rebates or tax deductions. Green products are also becoming more affordable as manufacturers compete and develop new products and technologies to meet the growing green building and remodeling demands.

These newer, more energy-efficient appliances, such as Rinnai tankless water heaters, can be significantly more efficient than their older, less efficient counterparts and offer reduced maintenance and replacement costs, thanks to greater reliability of materials. A small investment in these energy-efficient measures can avoid costly problems in the future, including excess indoor moisture, which promotes mold growth, wood deterioration, metal corrosion and other structural problems.

Health Benefits

Green building and remodeling can deliver health, productivity, and air and water quality benefits that serve to better our society and reduce exposure to potential toxins. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) considers poor indoor air quality to be one of the five most urgent public health risks in the United States. Levels of air pollution inside a home can be two to five times higher than outdoor levels according to a recent study by the American Lung Association.

Green remodeling can reduce exposure to substances, such as volatile organic compounds (VOCs) that can contribute to childhood asthma and other respiratory illnesses. Major paint manufacturers now offer products that are low in VOCs.

Aesthetics

Newer green products, including Rinnai's tankless water heaters, are made with the homeowner's desire for luxury and beauty in mind. Manufacturers are designing technologies that are not only energy efficient, but have a modern appeal. With sleek and handsome features, these energy efficient appliances can capture the essence of luxury for any home.

Comfort

Many green appliances include systems specifically designed to reduce heat loss or gain. Ceiling fans that can increase your comfort range by creating a cool breeze on warm days, metal roofing specifically designed to reduce heat gain and meet specific requirements, HVAC systems with programmable thermostats, and other high-efficiency heating and cooling equipment are all designed with comfort in mind. Sealing air leaks and increasing insulation will help maintain an even temperature throughout the living space, eliminate drafts, control humidity levels and buffer noise from the streets.

Environment

Energy consumption has a direct impact on air quality and our natural environment. Green remodel projects allow consumers to be energy efficient while minimizing waste. By choosing environmentally responsible products, homeowners can help protect forests, wildlife, and air and water quality.

In addition, every gallon of water or kilowatt-hour of electricity saved reduces the amount of carbon dioxide (the greenhouse gas) entering the atmosphere. Tankless water heaters are mostly made of recyclable parts. Eliminating inefficient storage tank water heaters will reduce landfill load by about 600 million pounds over 10 years.

Fixing a Cracked Sidewalk

Q. Maybe it's the weather up here, but every spring when the snow melts, I find another crack in the concrete walkway leading from my door to the driveway. How do I fix these, and can I prevent them from occurring? — Frank in Downeast Maine

A. I'm not sure if there's a surefire way to prevent cracks from appearing in a concrete surface. Even in more temperate areas, variable weather conditions, excessive dampness or extreme drought can hasten the deterioration of concrete.

As long as the concrete is structurally sound — there are no cracks going all the way to the bottom of the concrete, and the material is not crumbling away — you can repair the surface cracks at the beginning of each warm season. If there are a lot of small cracks or rough patches, rather than repairing them individually, consider resurfacing the concrete to improve its overall appearance and extend the life of the walkway.

To repair individual cracks, clean out loose material and dirt with a wire brush and a jet of water from the hose. Brush a layer of concrete bonding adhesive into the crack. Then, fill the crack with vinyl-reinforced patching compound and smooth out the surface. Let dry at least 24 hours.

Resurfacing the walk takes a little more work, but costs much less than having the walk replaced. It also requires a bit more instruction than I can fit into one column, so for now, I recommend checking out home-improvement publications specifically addressing concrete resurfacing, including making cost and material estimates. This way, you can determine if the walk needs resurfacing, and whether you want to do it yourself or bring in a contractor.

What to Do When Your HVAC System Breaks Down

(ARA) - It's a home comfort emergency. Your air conditioning system breaks down in the middle of a heat wave, or your current heating, ventilation and cooling (HVAC) system sounds and feels like it's on its last legs. When you need to replace your system quickly, what should you do?

The folks at American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning offer a list of things to consider when you need to replace your home comfort system in a hurry without getting worried.

Choose the right HVAC dealer

The most important step is finding someone you can trust to provide expert advice and properly install your new system. When selecting the best professional dealer, ask friends and neighbors for a recommendation, check credentials through the Better Business Bureau and learn about the dealer's credentials and services, including whether removal of old equipment is included. Some dealers also have North American Technician Excellence (NATE) certification, confirming the highest level of training for installation and service.

Get an in-home assessment

Before any professional dealers can share a solution, they need to diagnose the situation and understand your family's comfort needs. The dealer should conduct an in-home assessment to determine the right system that will deliver the greatest comfort and energy efficiency for your home.

This includes asking questions about your lifestyle and comfort requirements, checking your insulation, ductwork and building materials, and measuring your windows and rooms.

Ask about a matched system

In a matched system, indoor and outdoor units are integrated to give you the best comfort and efficiency. For example, the indoor unit — either a furnace or air handler — works in conjunction with the outside unit such as an air conditioner or heat pump. Matched systems are quieter, more reliable, more efficient and last longer to make the most of your investment.

Some matched systems also offer added convenience and comfort through built-in technology that allows all HVAC components to "communicate" with each other. For example, the American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning AccuLink system ensures all components are automatically and properly charged, configured and calibrated for sustained reliability, peak performance and energy efficiency. In addition, the AccuLink communicating system also provides homeowners with remote telephone access to their system, meaning they can adjust temperatures and control the system whether they are home or away.

Add an air filtration system

If you have family members with allergies or asthma, or if you want to improve the indoor air quality in your home, consider adding an air filtration system to your furnace or air handler. Most systems have only a standard one-inch air filter that simply protects components from clogging. A whole-home air cleaner, like the American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning AccuClean, removes up to 99.98 percent of dust, pollen, bacteria and pet dander from your filtered air — making it 100 times more effective than a standard throwaway filter. In addition, it removes more than 99 percent of the influenza A virus from the filtered air your family breathes.

Ask about extended warranties and financing options

Many dealers offer financing options that fit your budget. In addition, understand the limited warranties that come with your new equipment and how you may extend the warranty coverage on parts and labor to provide further peace of mind.

Plan ahead

If your furnace, air handler, air conditioner or heat pump is eight years or older, it may make sense to replace them with more up-to-date models — before they break down. Recent increases in government efficiency ratings mean that the new systems may help you increase your family's comfort while decreasing your home's energy costs.

Quincy Real Estate Market Alive, Well

By ART FOLEY

Broker/Owner

CENTURY 21 Annex Realty

If you're in the market to purchase a home in the Quincy area, now is the time. Contrary to popular belief, the real estate market is alive and well, especially in the "City of Presidents."

Although skyrocketing foreclosure rates nationwide make for "doom and gloom" headlines, from a buyer's perspective, it's an ideal situation.

The increased number of homes on the market gives buyers a larger inventory to choose from. And, in one year's time, the average sale price of a home in Quincy has dropped 2.9 percent...from $325,424 to $315,931. While this decline is viewed as a negative economic indicator to some, to home buyers it means increased purchasing power that allows them access to properties that were out of reach one year ago.

Although sales are down 27 percent from this time last year, those properties that are selling are staying on the market an average of 115 days, only two days less than the same time last year.

Sellers, too, have an opportunity by making their property as attractive as possible to an increasing number of potential buyers. Increasing the home's appeal by staging the interior, sprucing up the landscaping or adding a fresh coat of paint will significantly increase the chances of a sale. Most importantly, aggressive pricing will catch the prospective buyer's attention as soon as the home hits the market.

Finally, whether you're buying or selling a property, get the assistance of a qualified real estate agent. His or her expertise and guidance can make a major difference in your experience.

Are Children Too Young for a Trainer?

Q. This year my children were not required to have physical-education classes year-round in school. Since this change, I have seen a dramatic drop in their activity level and energy, and I am worried about them becoming overweight. They need motivation to exercise, and I am thinking of hiring a trainer to work with both of them. At ages 8 and 10, do you think this is too early to hire a personal trainer? If so, what else can I do?

A. The requirements for physical-education classes have dropped at many schools throughout the county in recent years. Inactive children, along with improper nutrition, are cited for the rising rates in childhood obesity. Encouraging your children to be more active is a necessity.

Finding ways to keep your children active can be a challenge; however, now is a great time to get help, as there are many organized programs available for children.

Hiring a certified personal trainer can be a great choice for anyone, not just adults. Remember that a personal trainer is not someone who is just there to help adults lose weight or body builders get bigger. They are available to help you reach your fitness goals no matter what your age. The trainer will be able to develop a fitness program that is age-appropriate and tailor it to the likes of your child. At ages 8 and 10, this likely would include fun movement activities and might include other exercise equipment at the trainer's discretion.

Most fitness facilities offer the services of certified personal trainers. Ask them if they are certified and if they have experience working with children. Not all personal trainers have such experience. It is important to know that the trainer you choose has the patience, passion and skills needed to motivate, encourage and safely train children.

Group training programs are also popular, and include children within the same age range working out together. This can promote a fun and comfortable environment for the children, as they are moving and staying in shape while not feeling alone or isolated. You might find these programs offered through fitness facilities, local recreation departments and other organizations throughout the community.

The need to combat childhood obesity has sparked an increase in youth exercise programs throughout country. Whether with the use of a personal trainer or through a youth program, remember that finding a way to keep your children active and moving is a necessity.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475

Preventing Skin Cancer

According to the American Cancer Society, if current trends continue 1 in 5 Americans will develop skin cancer during their lifetime. Skin cancer is the second most common form of cancer in the United States, with more than 1 million skin cancers diagnosed annually. The best way to prevent skin cancer is to protect yourself and your family from the sun at all times.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts' Prevention and Wellness Program offers the following information and health tips for preventing skin cancer.

What is skin cancer?

Skin cancer is the abnormal growth of skin cells and can come in two types, melanoma and non-melanoma. Most skin cancers are categorized as non-melanoma and develop on sun-exposed areas of the body such as the face, neck, ears, lips and the backs of the hands. Non-melanoma skin cancers are highly treatable, especially when found early. While most non-melanoma skin cancer is considered to be sun-related, other factors can play a role in the development of skin cancer such as genetics and heredity.

Who is at risk?

While everyone is at risk for skin cancer, certain characteristics cause some people to be more susceptible to developing skin cancer. Risk factors include fair-skin, light-colored eyes, blonde or red hair, a tendency to burn or freckle when exposed to the sun, and a history of sun exposure. Be aware of your personal family history of skin cancer as it increases your risk. Knowing your personal risk of skin cancer empowers you to be aware of the signs and symptoms of skin cancer and take the necessary precautions to protect your skin.

Protecting Yourself and Loved Ones

Even if you don't spend a lot of time working on your tan at the beach or poolside, any time spent in the sun whether working, boating, fishing, gardening, camping, playing sports, or just relaxing, puts you at risk for skin cancer. It is easy to protect yourself from skin cancer if you by limiting exposure to the sun.

- Minimize Exposure - The midday hours, from 10:00 am to 4:00 pm, can be particularly dangerous as the UV rays are the strongest during this time and can do the most damage to your skin. It is important to seek shade during these hours and limit your time in the sun.

- Use Sunscreen and Cover Up - When outside this summer, be sure to cover your body with clothing to protect exposed skin. Always wear a hat to provide shade for your face, head, ears, and neck as those areas are easy to overlook. It is important to apply sunscreen with sun protective factor (SPF) 15 or higher, with both UVA and UVB protection.

- Know Your Medications - Some common prescription and over-the-counter drugs can make your skin more sensitive to sunlight. You should always ask your doctor or pharmacist about the side effects of any medications you take. If one of your prescriptions increases your sensitivity to sunlight, it is important to take the necessary extra precautions.

- Be Aware - Avid sunbathers should also be aware that tanning beds and sunlamps emit UV rays that are as dangerous as those from the sun and should therefore be avoided.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

RESHAPING YOUR TEETH

Crooked, chipped, cracked, and overlapping teeth may lend themselves to a correction technique that is quick, easy, and relatively inexpensive. Tooth reshaping (or dental contouring) involves the subtle and artful reduction of small amounts of enamel to alter the shape, length, or position of a tooth. The procedure involves using a sanding drill or laser to eliminate or minimize imperfections, as small amounts of surface enamel are gradually removed. Abrasive strips are then used to shape the sides of the teeth. When just the correct amount of material has been removed, the teeth are smoothed and polished. This procedure, which usually does not involve the use of anesthetic, leaves teeth in far better shape than before.

Good cosmetic dentistry can give you a smile that is the envy of others. Tooth reshaping, or tooth sculpting, is a safe and conservative way to improve your smile. A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. We believe it is our responsibility to share our acquired knowledge and understanding of oral health with each and every patient. When was the last time you had your teeth checked by a professional? Call us at 617-479-6220 and schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If you are unhappy with the look of your teeth, ask the dentist which of the many available cosmetic procedures might benefit you most.

4-1-1 Record After 6 Games Fast Start For Morrisette

By SEAN BRENNAN

Morrisette Legion is off to a fast start this summer. After finishing last week with a 2-1 record, Morrisette's overall record stands at 4-1-1 after six games played.

Last Sunday evening, Morrisette came out victorious over Holbrook Legion, 15-11, in a sloppy and high-scoring contest.

Starting pitcher Eric Engleheart (3+innings, 2 Ks, 7 runs, W) allowed Holbrook to score six runs in the first inning, but the Morrisette offense came right back to tie the game at six with six runs of their own in the second inning.

Matt Edgerly got the tying rally started with a triple. On the relay from the outfield, Edgerly raced home after the throw was errant and quickly the score was 6-1. Matt Joyce followed Edgerly with a single, Joe Edgerly singled to put runners on the corners and Kenny Carberry walked to load the bases with no outs.

Alex Tragellis was hit by a pitch and Joyce scored to make it 6-2 and John Ainsley followed Tragellis with another hit by pitch to score Edgerly to make it 6-3. Ryan Louis drove in two with a double and Matt Edgerly concluded the six run second with a RBI single to tie the game at 6-6.

Holbrook came back and retook the lead with a run in the bottom of the second, but Morrisette came back and scored twice in the third to take an 8-7 advantage.

Matt Rodriguez reached on a fielding error and advanced to third on the throw. Joyce plated Rodriguez with a sacrifice fly and after Joe Edgerly and Carberry reached base, Tragellis scored Edgerly with a RBI single.

In the top of the fourth, Morrisette had two outs but still managed to score four runs to take a 12-7 lead.

Rodriguez singled, Joyce walked and a pitch hit Joe Edgerly. With the bases loaded, a pitch scoring Rodriguez hit Carberry, Tragellis walked scoring

LEGION BASEBALL

Joyce and Ainsley drove in two runs with a big two-out hit.

Morrisette would score twice more in the fifth inning and once more in the sixth inning to take a 15-11 lead. Ryan Louis came on in relief and shut the door, securing the fourth win in six games for Morrisette Legion.

On June 20, Morrisette defeated Cohasset Legion 7-6 behind the pitching of Glen Misho and Eric Engleheart.

Misho (6+innings, 7 Ks, 5 runs) allowed three runs in the first inning before settling down to pitch a solid game the rest of the way. The offense helped cushion the three-run blow by scoring five runs in the second inning.

Steve Connolly got it started with a single, followed by a single from Rodriguez. A double steal by Connolly and Rodriguez put runners on second and third for Joyce and he delivered with a sacrifice fly RBI. On the throw into the infield, Rodriguez scored all the way from second for a 3-2 score.

Carberry reached base and stole second, Tragellis singled to score Carberry (4-3) and after Ryan Louis reached base, Matt Edgerly singled to score the fifth run of the frame. After two innings, the score was 5-3 Morrisette.

Cohasset scored three times in the fifth to take a 6-5 lead, but Morrisette would not be denied. The team scored twice in the bottom of the inning. Connolly walked, Rodriguez singled, Joyce scored Connolly with a RBI single and Tragellis drove in the winning run with a RBI force out.

Eric Engleheart came into the game in the top of the seventh and retired the final two batters to earn the save.

Morrisette began last week with a 17-4 loss to Milton Legion.

Boating And Sailing Registration Underway

The Quincy Recreation Department announces the opening of the Ryan Boathouse Sailing and Boating Program.

Registration for this program began yesterday (June 25) and will continue throughout the summer at the Ryan Boathouse.

Rowing, sailing and canoeing classes are available Monday through Thursdays for children ages 8-16. Children must pass a swim test at the Lincoln Hancock Community Pool in order to participate.

Lessons begin Monday, June 30 and continue through Tuesday, August 12. The Boathouse will be open for adult kayaking and family boating on Saturday, June 28 and Sunday, June 29 from 12 noon until 5 p.m.

Fees are $40 for one youth, and an additional $20 for the second child and an additional $20 for the third child. Fees for one adult are $30 for two lessons and $5 for each additional lesson. The Family Membership fee is $75.

For additional information call the QRD at 617-376-1394 (617-376-1-FUN).

Girls' Basketball Clinic June 30, July 1-3

The Quincy Recreation Department (QRD) and Recreation Director Barry J. Welch announce that the QRD will be hosting the Girls' Basketball Clinic next week, June 30 through July 3.

Limited openings are still available for students entering grades 4-9.

The Girls' Basketball Clinic will be held at North Quincy High School from 8 a.m. to 12 noon.

The cost of the clinic is $60. Brian Buckley, basketball coach at Scituate High School will lead the clinic.

Registrations are being accepted at the QRD office,

One Merrymount Parkway, Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Registration may also be done online at QuincyRec.com. For more information, call the QRD at 617-376-1394.

Wollaston Blue Finishes Week 1-1

In Senior Babe Ruth action, Wollaston Blue maintained its first place position in the Northeast League with a big 7-6 victory over Braintree Blue last Thursday evening.

Starting pitcher Kevin Keith picked up his second win of the season as he limited Braintree to five hits and two earned runs over five innings. Relief pitchers Tony Salaris and Chris Doyle pitched the final two innings to save the game.

But the game was not decided until the final out was made. Braintree, trailing 7-6 in the seventh, had the winning run on base with two outs, but leftfielder Dan Munkley made a spectacular over-the-shoulder game saving catch to end the game.

Diego Arredondo (two hits, two RBI), Joe Edgerly (two hits, RBI) and Edwin Nunez (two hits, RBI) led the Wollaston Blue offensive attack.

Earlier last week, Wollaston Blue dropped a 4-0 decision to South Boston.

Starting pitcher Dan Myers held South Boston to five hits while striking out five batters. Myers and Joe Edgerly both finished the game with two hits apiece.

Joy's Sports To Hold Basketball/Soccer Programs

Joy's Sports will hold basketball and soccer programs for boys and girls ages 7 to 14 beginning July 7 through August 8.

The basketball program will be held at the Broad Meadows Middle School and the soccer programs at Joy

Hanlon Field in Quincy Point. Both programs will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Cost is $105 per week-discounts are available. For more information call Rich Hanlon, Director, at 617-827-8697.

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run, Walk Benefits ALS Research

SCORES OF RUNNERS and walkers participated in the 11th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, (the Squirrel Run XI), a 5-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day held recently in Quincy. The event is held in memory of Jimmy "Squirrel" Kennedy who lost his courageous battle with ALS, a disease better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31. Proceeds from 5-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day benefit The Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital.

DAWN TIMLIN, right, wife of Red Sox relief pitcher Mike Timlin and a member of The Angel Fund family, was among the hundreds of runners who participated in the 11th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, (the Squirrel Run XI), held recently in Quincy. Welcoming her to the race is Jimmy's brother and race organizer, Rich Kennedy, president of The Angel Fund. Dawn has run the race for the past several years.

North Quincy's Lauren Stille On Div. II Lax All-Rookie Team

Franklin Pierce University freshman Lauren Stille (North Quincy High School) has earned a spot on the Women's Lacrosse Division II All-Rookie Team.

Stille, who was named the first Northeast-10 Conference Freshman of the Year in the program's history earlier in June, was one of 16 student-athletes selected to the All-Rookie team. Stille, an attacker on the lacrosse team, was the only player from the Northeast-10 selected to the squad.

She shattered every major offensive record in her first season at Franklin Pierce, setting new single-season marks with 73 goals and 14 assists for 87 points. The North Quincy native finished the season ranked third in the nation in goals per game (4.56/game) and also led all Division II freshmen in points per game (5.44/game, 8th overall) and total points (87, 13th overall). In the Northeast-10, Stille led the conference in both total goals and goals per game at season's end, while also pacing the Northeast-10 in total points and points per game at the end of the 2008 regular season.

After only one season playing at Franklin Pierce, Stille already ranks fifth all-time in both career goals and points, while also sitting in sixth place on the school's career assists list. Stille was named Northeast-10 Freshman of the Week two times during the season.

The Franklin Pierce Ravens finished the 2008 season with a 3-13 record.

Sixth Annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby July 11-12

The 6th annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby will be held July 11-12 at the Quincy Yacht Club (QYC) to benefit the scholarship fund in memory of Jim Kenney III.

This scholarship fund benefits Quincy residents at both high schools and at the college level. These scholarships are awarded to students who are or will be pursuing degrees in maritime or environmental studies. The four recipients for 2008 have already been selected and will be recognized at a cookout on July 12.

The fishing derby will begin on Friday, July 11 at the QYC's Maritime Center. A Skippers Meeting will start at 6 p.m. and fishing lines will be in the water by 7 p.m.

All fish caught must be brought in and weighed before the derby concludes at 12 noon on Saturday, July 12.

After the derby is finished, there will be a cookout at 1 p.m. and the four scholarships will be presented. There will also be raffle prizes and other awards given out at that time.

For more information on the James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby, contact Dan Kenney at 617-786-9067.

SUMMER SPECIAL

IBM Selectrics Reconditioned

Starting at $229⁰⁰ and up while they last!

5 Maple Street Quincy, MA 02169 617-472-3656

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Count to 10 if you must, but don't lose your temper, despite that person's (you know who!) efforts to goad you into reacting. Your restraint will pay off in a big way.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week finds you in a sociable mood, ready and eager to enjoy the company of family and friends. It's also a good time to seek out and renew old friendships.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Patience is called for as you await a decision about that project you're eager to launch. Meanwhile, try to set aside more time to share with that special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid becoming involved in a workplace dispute early in the week by insisting both sides submit their stands to a neutral arbitrator. Things begin to cool off by Thursday.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It promises to be a busy but productive week for the Big Cat. The pace slows by Friday, allowing you to catch up on matters you put aside but that now need your attention.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A suddenly disruptive family situation is best handled with a cool, calm and collected response. Wait until things settle to let off all that pent-up emotional steam.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your practical side dominates the week as you reassess your finances to make some sensible adjustments in what you plan to spend and what you expect to save.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected meeting with a former colleague opens some interesting possibilities. But you need to press for full disclosure before making a decision.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent flurry of activity eases by midweek, giving you time to readjust your disrupted schedule and make new plans for a weekend getaway.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're usually the one who gives advice. But now it's time to open yourself up to counsel from friends who have your best interests at heart.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might find resistance to your call for a full inquiry into a workplace problem. But by week's end even the most rigid naysayers begin to come around.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A recurring problem surfaces once again. Maybe it's time you used your creative talents to help you find a new approach to resolving it once and for all.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are guided in what you do both by your intelligence and your emotions. An acting career would suit you quite well.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Have you ever wondered why some people at times fail to realize that an attitude can cause either happiness or misery?

How satisfied are you with your personal life? Are you satisfied more often than dissatisfied? Or vice-versa? How often have you tried to determine the reasons - either way?

For example, are you sincerely trying to make the most out of what you have? Do you discipline your disgruntled? Do you appreciate and express your admirations? Are you envious; do you covet some one else's possessions? Are you influenced by some one else's kindness of heart or gentle manners? Are you saddened more often by the clouds in your own life instead of trying to scatter sunshine in the lives of others? Do you allow worry to pull clouds over your life instead of ignoring them in the radiance of hope? Do you keep your heart free from hate? Do you treat others as you would like them to treat you?

Would not an honest answer to these sort of simple questions help change an attitude toward life - IF a change is longed for? ...

The sermon "He Had Compassion" will be given by the Rev. Ann G. Suzedell. Sherri Pitts will serve as deacon of the day.

Following the service, there will be coffee, light refreshments and conversation in fellowship hall.

The church in union with Quincy Point Music Adacemy (QPMA) will host a three-day summer music immersion program July 29-31 for children having completed grades 1-5. The program will be held Tuesday, July 29 and Wednesday, July 30 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and Thursday, July 31 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Grandpa loved gardening, baseball, and playing the harmonica.

Your memories are precious. That's why, at Keohane Funeral Service, we take the time to find out what made your loved one special.

Whether it's gathering some of the flowers he so tenderly cultivated or finding a musician to play "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" on the harmonica, you can count on us to help you plan a service that will be just as unique as the person you love.

Masons Donate $50,000 Bus To Quincy Public Schools

Quincy Masons donated nearly $50,000 for an 18-passenger wheelchair-equipped school bus for the Quincy Public schoolchildren during a June 11 ceremony and dinner at the Rural Lodge A.F. & A.M.

Masons Steve Whitmore and Daryl Rhodes presented the $49,991.42 check for the bus to school officials. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Superintendent of Schools; David McCarthy, Vice Chairman of the Quincy School Committee and Janet Powell, Senior Director of Student Support Services.

DeCristofaro thanked the Masons for their work on behalf of Quincy youngsters.

During the event, the Quincy High School Horizons Choir, directed by Dr. Marina Rosenberg, sang the National Anthem and several other selections, including Eidlwiese.

Masons David Smith and R. Peter Carlson described the history of Masonic Charitable Services. The Quincy chapter has provided funds for equipment and scholarships in the past.

In addition to the school-bus, the Masons have donated Automatic External Defibrillators (AED's), epipens for each school, scholarships at both high schools, emergency kits for school nurses and funds for student needs such as clothing, medical supplies, school supplies.

According to the Masonic charity traditions, funds are collected only from the membership and are devoted to charitable purposes, such as housing, educational grants, medical assistance and the Child Identification Programs.

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.
